BATTLE NEW NORMANDIE FIRE

JAPAN WARNED OF MORE RAIDS BY U. S. PLANES

Bombers Come from Carriers, Report.

TOKIO, April 19 [Sunday] [from Japanese broadcasts]—(AP).—The Tokio newspaper Yomiuri intimated to its readers today that the planes which bombed Japanese cites Saturday came from United States aircraft carriers, asserting that Japan must be prepared for more raids "as long as the United States possesses aircraft carriers."

The paper added: "Now that the United States has attacked Japanese territory for the first time, the Japanese nation must resolve anew to smash completely Britain and the United States." Other newspapers commented in the same vein.

Another newspaper, Asahi, expressed confidence that the Japanese army and navy could repel future attacks from the air and said: "In view of the long term nature of the war, the nation should be physically and mentally prepared against whatever the enemy may be able to do in the future."

Four Cities Raided.

Miyako said, "We have no cause to fear enemy air raids in the future, because our defense preparations are complete."

Japan's four great cities, Tokio, Yokohama, Kobe, and Nagoya, felt the impact of United States bombs in yesterday's raid.

There were an undisclosed number of casualties. Headquarters for the defense of East Japan announced that "we express to the next of kin of persons killed our condolences." This account, like other official accounts, said damage was light.

Incendiary bombs fell in the Tokio-Yokohama area, Nagoya, and Kobe, but fires were reported quickly controled.

Claim Nine Planes Downed.

The high command announced that nine attacking planes were shot down over the Tokio-Yokohama district [suggesting the raiding force totaled several times that number].

[A Tokio dispatch to DNB, the German news agency, said the capital's air raid warning lasted about seven hours. This attack on the heart of the Japanese empire may prove the most daring and spectacular air exploit of the war when the rest of the story is told. It came less than 24 hours after Secretary of War Stimson said the American army was "getting pretty near to the stage of being ready for an offensive." The official report that Tokio was attacked first and Kobe, 376 miles to the west, two hours later, suggests an east to west sweep. Such an operation could have been carried out by a naval task force built around one or more aircraft carriers approaching Japan from the northeast. Long range bombers from the Aleutian Islands might conceivably have cooperated with carrier-borne craft. Flights from hidden bases in the Philippines or China also are possibilities.]

The greater part of the Japanese homeland was under air raid alarm for varying periods during the afternoon, embracing three of the four main islands. Even the fourth, Shokoku, in the southwest, was given "precautionary warnings."

"Repulsed by Air Defenses."

Military communiques and official broadcasts gave this picture of the raid on Tokio, the world's third city, with 7 million population.

"It has been confirmed thus far that nine enemy planes were shot down when hostile aircraft attacked the Tokio-Yokohama region this afternoon for the first time since the war began," eastern defense headquarters said.

"The enemy planes approached from several directions about 12:30 p. m. and were immediately repulsed by air and ground defenses. It is revealed that damages inflicted by the air attack are slight."

Report Hospitals Hit.

Other announcements said the imperial family was unharmed, that no damage was done in the immediate neighborhood of the imperial palace, enclosed by moats and huge stone walls in the heart of the city. The Domei news agency elaborated:

"The raiders failed to penetrate into the heart of the metropolitan area, but dropped their bombs in resi

DIGEST OF NEWS FROM FIGHTING FRONTS OF WORLD

Latest war developments:

American gunners on Corregidor again have blasted Japanese siege guns, roads, and bridges on Bataan peninsula, the war department announced, and as a result enemy bombing and shelling have decreased. Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright advised that Cebu, second largest city in the Philippines, was in enemy hands and was burning, but that fighting continued in the vicinity of the city.

Chinese Fall Back in Burma.

Chinese forces in Burma have withdrawn to a new line after many days of a heavy Japanese offensive which flanked them on both sides, according to a Chungking communique. British troops on the western side of the line were reported engaged in a rear guard action while destroying more Irrawaddy valley oil wells. American flying fortress bombers again raided Rangoon.

RAF Keeps Up Raids.

London told of continued RAF sweeps over the Nazi occupied French coast, striking at ports, railways, and other objectives. German raiders were reported driven off after approaching the southeast English coast.

Recapture of Dnepropetrovsk, Russian industrial center in the Ukraine, was near, according to soviet military dispatches. Guerrilla forces were said to have blown up the German staff headquarters there.

Cash Gifts to Tokio Bomber Go Homeless

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—Those bundles of war bonds waiting in various communities for the first American flyers to bomb Tokio appeared today, on the basis of army-navy regulations, to be going nowhere in a hurry.

Officials said navy law prohibits supplementing of pay of personnel for duties they are expected to perform, and army regulations go a bit farther, forbidding gifts or awards of any kind for duties soldiers are expected to perform.

However, some navy officers suggested unofficially a way awards might be given navy personnel. If the donors wish to do so, they suggested, they could convert the bonds to cash and award gifts such as watches or other equipment.

$1,000 on Deposit.

Huntington Park, Cal., April 18 (AP).—Harry J. Burk is about to part with $1,000 and he's very happy about it.

Burk, a tire dealer, posted that sum soon after Pearl Harbor for the first American flyer to drop a bomb on Tokio, and now all he's worried about is learning the identity of the pilot.

"It's on deposit in a bank here—$1,000 in defense bonds," he said. "As soon as I learn whose name to put on them I'll send the bonds to his next of kin to be held for him. I'm tickled to death, and I wish I could give $1,000 for every bomb that was dropped on Tokio today."

Here's $1,000 More.

Birmingham, Ala., April 18 (AP).—Louis Pizitz, department store owner, said today he was "only too glad" to have the opportunity of paying off a $1,000 reward he offered to the first American pilot to bomb Tokio.

$250 from Louisiana.

Shreveport, La., April 18 (AP).—J. C. Pittman, Shreveport beverage dealer, is ready to pay off on an offer he made shortly after Pearl Harbor to give $250 for the first bomb dropped on Tokio.

"I am ready to turn the money over as soon as the name of the first bomber is learned," Pittman said.

$1,000 Waiting Here.

John L. Keeshin, head of the Keeshin Motor Express company, said last night that the $1,000 war bond he offered for the first American aviator to bomb Tokio is ready and waiting to be claimed.

WELDER'S TORCH AGAIN IS CAUSE OF NAVAL BLAZE

19 Companies Called to Stricken Hulk.

New York, April 18 [Special].—Fire tonight again swept thru the huge hulk of the former French luxury liner Normandie, rechristened the U. S. S. Lafayette by the navy.

After firemen had battled the flames for nearly four hours, the third naval district press office announced that the fire was under control, but not yet out. At this time fire fighters had entered the ship thru several holes cut in the side below the normal water line and were said to be fighting the flames at the very center of the fire.

Cut Away Welded Covers.

Lieut. Comm. William A. Sullivan, U. S. N., said in a statement:

"The fire started in decomposed stores which the salvaged people were attempting to remove. No damage to ship's structure. Great difficulty in fighting fire due to the fact that all entrances to compartment in which fire was were located under water. It was necessary to cut away covers which had been welded over in order to get water to the fire."

This is the third time fire has broken out on the Normandie since she was taken over by the navy for reconditioning as a naval auxiliary. The first fire, on Feb. 9, caused the ship to capsize at her Hudson river pier. The second blaze, three weeks ago, was extinguished with little damage.

Knox Held Responsible.

Only two days ago, the house naval affairs committee, after a thoro investigation of the first fire, said it was due to carelessness and placed full responsibility with Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. The record showed a division of authority between the various officers and bureaus of the navy department hampered attempts to avert the blaze.

Like the first fire, tonight's blaze was caused, police said, by sparks from a welder's torch which ignited cork insulation lining refrigerator compartments. The house report on the first fire criticized the lack of precautions against inflammable material being ignited by torches. In it the committee made 23 recommendations intended to prevent such repetitions. It proposed fixing of responsibility in one officer, training of fire watchers, designation of waterfronts as restricted areas, and other regulations.

In Washington the navy department refused to discuss the new outbreak of fire aboard the Normandie. Inquirers were referred to the 3d naval district headquarters in New York.

At headquarters of the 3d naval district here it was asserted that only the commandant of the district could say what measures had been taken to prevent a repetition of the Normandie fire, who was assigned to carry out the steps taken and what had been done to follow the recommendations in the congressional report.

Admiral Not Available.

The senior officer on duty said that the admiral was not available.

The first alarm was sounded at 6:10 p. m. [E.W.T.] from a box near the ship after smoke was seen coming from a point behind the catwalk which bridges the space between the pier and the upturned bottom of the ship. Half an hour later a call was put in for a rescue squad and two more alarms were sounded within the next hour.

19 Companies Called.

Several fire boats and 19 companies of firemen were finally engaged in fighting the blaze. Smoke and flames poured from the stern on the starboard side of the stricken vessel. When firemen removed plates from the ship's side, huge clouds of smoke burst out, indicating the fire had been burning for some time before it was discovered.

After a preliminary investigation, police and fire officials announced the fire was started by an employé of Merritt-Chapman & Scott, marine salvagers, who hold the 5 million dollar contract for raising the stricken liner. Sparks from this employé's torch set off the blaze, it was said.

Rafts, tugboats and other apparatus used by the salvagers had to be moved away from the pier to make room for the fire engines and boats. Since she keeled over the Normandie has had her entire superstructure re-

BOY, 11, FINDS 2 SLAIN ON FARM

Clew to Killers Is Sought in Testimony.

Shannon, Ill., April 18 [Special].—As the only witness to circumstances surrounding the slaying of a farm couple today, an 11 year old boy is to be questioned tomorrow in an effort to find a clew to the killer.

The boy, William Deiseman, who made his home with the victims, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krugjohann, on their rented farm four miles from here, will testify tomorrow at an inquest ordered by Coroner J. B. Schreiter.

William arrived about 1 p. m. today at the home of Krugjohann's parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Krugjohann, and reported that their son and daughter-in-law were dead of gunshot wounds at the farm. William drove to the August Krugjohann home, a distance of about 8 miles, in the family automobile.

Hears Shot, Finds Body.

The boy said he heard a shot about 12:30 p. m. while picking up corn cobs in a field. H ran to the farm yard, he said, and discovered the body of Charles Krugjohann on the ground beside a tractor.

He then rushed into the house, where he found Mrs. Krugjohann dead on the kitchen floor beside a shattered window, he said. He then jumped in the automobile and gave the alarm.

Sheriff Ray Westphall found the bodies in the positions described by the boy, but found no weapon. Both had been killed by .22 caliber bullets. The man had been shot between the eyes and in the chest and there were bullet wounds under his right arm.

Made Home with Couple.

Mrs. Krugjohaun had been shot twice in the head. Krugjohann was 45, and his wife 43. They had no children and had allowed William to make his home with them for several months.

Sheriff Westphall arranged for William to spend the night with his brother, Walter Deiseman, in Shannon. The sheriff recalled that six years ago William's father, now living in Iowa, was confined in a mental institution after an attempt on the life of another brother, John.

Forms for Sugar Rationing Available at Tribune Office

Manufacturers, bakers, and other commercial users of sugar who will register April 28 and 29 for their sugar rationing permits may obtain application blanks tomorrow morning at The Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street.

A rationing expert from the office of Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago area rationing chief, will be on hand daily to answer questions and to assist commercial sugar users fill in the application blanks.

Mulcahy yesterday again urged all commercial users of sugar to get their application blanks as soon as possible before the registration days. They will register at high schools near their factories and business establishments.

Two Forms Available.

Two forms will be available for commercial sugar registrants—the retailer and wholesaler form for concerns which purchase sugar for resale, and the institutional industrial form for concerns which purchase sugar for preparing or serving meals other than for family use or for manufacturing or processing a product.

If sugar is used for both resale and institutional or industrial purposes both forms must be filled out, Mulcahy said.

Registrants required to register April 28 and 29 include wholesale and retail merchants, restaurant, bakery and hotel owners, manufacturers using sugar in their products, and officials of public and private institutions.

Prompt Action Urged.

Since a number of mathematical computations are involved in filling out the commercial sugar rationing forms, Mulcahy urged registrants to obtain the blanks immediately at either The Public Service office or rationing headquarters at 157 West Wacker drive.

The commercial forms must be signed in the presence of official registrars. Only the owner, partner, officer, or manager of the registering unit will be authorized to fill out the form.

Under Office of Price Administration regulations sugar is defined as all types of cane and beet sugar in all forms, including granulated, confectioners, powdered, tablet, brown and soft sugars, as well as liquid sugar, invert sugar and sugar sirup. Molasses is not included.

Extra for Canning

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—Every person holding a war ration book can get a special allotment of not more than 5 pounds of sugar for home canning or preserving fresh fruits and vegetables for home consumption, the Office of Price Administration announced today.

Application for more sugar for canning will have to be made to local rationing boards on a special form provided by the Office of Price Administration, and will have to be presented by an adult member of the family or by an authorized agent. The boards will issue purchase certificates.

Consumers registered with boards located in what are known as "scarcity areas," will be able to obtain only 1 pound of sugar for home canning in May and June. This provision will apply to the District of Columbia and to the states of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hmpshire, Vermont, and Maine.

LIEUT. O'HARE RUSHES TO CAPITAL; MAY BE WHITE HOUSE GUEST

Phoenix, Ariz., April 18 (AP).—Lieut. Edward H. O'Hare, navy hero of aerial warfare in the orient, left here today in response to orders to report to Washington, D. C., immediately. Mrs. O'Hare accompanied him. They are due in Washington tomorrow morning aboard an American Air Lines plane.

O'Hare, a former Chicagoan, who shot down six Japanese planes in one afternoon off the Gilbert Islands, previously had been ordered to report in the capital April 24. Friends gained the impression that the new order was an invitation to be the guest of President Roosevelt.

HERSHEY LISTS 7 OCCUPATIONS FOR DEFERMENT

Blytheville, Ark., April 18 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective draft director, tonight listed in order what he considered the seven most important occupations on which draft deferments should be based. They were as follows:

Munitions production, food production, transportation, communications, health, maintenance of each, and "to some degree" education.

"These supporting agencies to war maintenance are necessary but to what degree will depend on development of the war," Hershey said in an interview preceding his address before the Arkansas State Junior Chamber of Commerce convention.

Bus Lines Told to Cut Service, Reduce Waste

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—Asserting that the waste of rubber tires under present conditions is little short of disloyalty to the national interest, the Office of Defense Transportation today issued a lengthy, 12 point statement calling for drastic policy changes by local transportation systems. Passengers would be deprived of many of their peacetime accommodations and extra services, the statement disclosed.

It was explained that the recommendations are designed to conserve tires on buses and assure maximum use of existing passenger vehicles. Followed to the letter, they would overturn many of the time honored procedures adopted by transportation companies to attract riders and add to their convenience.

Fewer Stops Suggested.

Bringing the war closer to the civilian population, the ODT urged staggering of working, store, and business hours; discontinuance of bus services on routes where street railways can handle the traffic; elimination of what it termed unnecessary service to outlying districts; reduction of the number of stops on street car and bus lines; use of school buses where established common carriers are unable to provide transportation, and revision of traffic regulations and transportation schedules.

"In communities where the number of buses required in the rush hours can be reduced by opening schools at a later hour, public officials and transit operators should cooperate to attain this objective," the statement declared.

Passenger Diversion Urged.

"Wherever it is practicable to alter schedules and routes so as to divert passengers from present bus lines to street railway routes, such alteration of schedules and routes should be made.

"On transit routes to outlying districts much capacity is wasted by sending too many vehicles to the outer ends of such routes. This waste should be eliminated by turning back some vehicles at intermediate points, or by operating shuttle vehicles over the outer portions at less frequent intervals.

"The number of passenger stopping places on bus and street car routes should be reduced wherever possible. A stopping place within 500 feet of another is undesirable and wasteful and should be eliminated. A reasonable standard is to space stopping places at distances of 660 feet to 1,200 feet.

Full Loads Necessary.

"The general practice of bus operators is to provide seats in excess of the number of passengers during nonrush hours. This practice should be modified so that buses and trolley coaches carry at least full seated loads during nonrush hours."

In the matter of chartered bus trips, the ODT's statement disclosed that the government frowns on pleasure jaunts in wartime. Described as "unacceptable charter business" were civilian parties to beaches, pleasure resorts, picnic places, points of historic interest, race tracks, baseball parks, and for other sporting events.

Acceptable charter business, said the statement, includes transportation of conscripts, of groups made up principally of members of the armed forces, of participants in organized recreational activities at military posts, and school children, teachers, and other school employés.

NO ACTION IN CHICAGO.

Officials of the Chicago Surface Lines and the Chicago Motor Coach company, principal local operators of buses, would not comment last night on the call by the Office of Defense Transportation for more restricted service to the public.

Both companies have had a sharp upturn in business since automobile owners started conserving tires. Recently the Surface Lines were told by the Illinois Commerce commission to buy more buses and cars in return for a fare raise to 8 cents.

TIE UP DIES FUND IN DEFIANCE OF HOUSE MANDATE

New Deal 'Stalling' Blocks Probe.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—Despite an overwhelming 331 to 46 house vote nearly six weeks ago in favor of extending the work of the Dies committee on un-American activities for another year, administration forces have succeeded in bringing to a standstill the committee's probing of the operations of Nazi, Fascist, and communist agents in the United States, it was learned today.

Rep. John J. Cochran.

The committee on accounts, headed by Rep. John J. Cochran [D., Mo.], has thus far refused to allot funds to the Dies group. The committee's previous appropriation was exhausted more than a month ago and employés have gone without their pay since then. Investigators are stranded in cities thruout the nation, unable to proceed without salary or expenses. Clerks and stenographers in the Washington headquarters are existing on borrowed money.

Under normal procedure the committee on accounts meets within a few days after approval of an investigating committee by the house and allots a sum of money from the contingent fund of the chamber for the committee's work.

Vote on Money Stalled Off.

In the case of the Dies committee, however, Chairman Cochran, a foe of the investigation, has persistently postponed action on a fresh fund for Chairman Martin Dies [D., Tex.] and his group. Cochran's committee has met on several occasions, but has adjourned on each occasion, Cochran insisting that he would not permit the voting of more money for the Dies committee until Dies himself is present to explain his needs.

Many members believe that Cochran is delaying action with the approval of the administration, since Dies has exposed the presence of 1,100 communists in key positions in government bureaus. His latest revelation concerned the employment at a $5,600 salary of Maurice Parmelee, professional nudist, as principal economist of the Board of Economic Warfare, and of C. Hartley Grattan, another high salaried member of the board, who wrote a foreword to the so-called "German White Paper" issued by Hitler in defense of his invasion of Poland.

Dies Remains in Texas.

Dies has been confined to Texas by the serious illness of his mother. He recently announced, also, that he plans to hold hearings in Texas on Nazi agent activities in the southwest area. He sent a letter to Cochran on April 7 explaining this situation, noting that other members of the committee and Chief Investigator Robert E. Stripling were well able to give detailed information concerning the amount needed by the group to complete the inquiry ordered by the house.

Cochran, however, continued a hearing on April 14 until April 21, next Tuesday. He faces a revolt of his own committee members at that time, it was learned, if he again seeks to choke off the investigation of subversive activities by another delay in the allotment of funds.

"I'm going to demand that some positive action be taken at Tuesday's meeting," declared Rep. Nat Patton [D., Tex.] of the accounts committee. "I'm in favor of giving Dies everything he needs. The chairman seems to think Dies ought to be here but I see no reason why other representatives of the committee can't tell us what they need."

Sees Action by Tuesday.

"Congress gave us instructions by an overpowering vote to furnish the Dies committee with funds," said Rep. Frank W. Boykin [D., Ala.], another accounts committee member. "Joe Starnes [ranking member of the Dies committee] tells me the committee needs money if it is to continue its work. I think we'll surely have action next Tuesday."

Boykin said the Dies group would

★ AUTO RATIONING TO BE RELAXED; MAY AID DEALERS

Change Will Not Create Many New Buyers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 19.—Automobile rationing regulations are to be relaxed next week, opening the way for increased civilian purchases from frozen stocks, it was learned today. Officials are drafting an amendment to the original car rationing order intended to liberalize its terms.

Sources in the War Production board said that for the present the only beneficiaries of the relaxed regulations will be those already eligible to purchase cars under the rationing system. The same category of occupations and endeavors set up to qualify buyers will continue in force, it was said. Those eligible include policemen, doctors, fire apparatus, health department officials, necessary delivery vehicles, visiting nurses, defense workers, some farmers, etc.

It appeared that the only change will be in lowering the requirements to permit more civilians in these classifications to obtain certificates from their local rationing boards.

Follows Stir in Congress.

Earlier in the week, car rationing regulations were denounced in the house of representatives, members demanding that the army and navy buy whatever cars they need for war purposes and release the others for immediate general sale.

It was charged that thousands of automobile dealers, saddled with cars they cannot sell, are being ruined with overhead and other expenses, and no income since the freezing order took effect.

The house attack was led by Rep. Clifton A. Woodrum [D., Va.], a ranking majority member, for whose influence among his colleagues the administration has a healthy respect. Woodrum disclosed today that on the day after the uprising he received a letter from Leon Henderson, President Roosevelt's price fixing czar, in which the latter said action was being taken "to ease the regulations" on automobile buying "so that dealers will sell something like their quotas in the near future."

Sales Fall Below Quotas.

Rolf Nugent, chief of the automobile rationing section of WPB, admitted a few days ago that car sales under the rationing system had been below expectations.

"It is clear that the movement of passenger automobile is slower than had been intended," he said. "If these provisions are too strict, it is the responsibility of government to liberalize them."

In his letter to Woodrum, Henderson said that the decision to ease car purchases resulted from a summary of the first month's operations, which showed that sales were only 40 per cent of the quota rate established under the rationing regulations.

Working Out Buy-Back Plan.

As to the plight of car dealers wanting to dispose of their frozen stocks, the price czar informed Woodrum that plans are being developed for mass purchases of frozen stocks by the government, as in the case of tire rationing.

Under the tire plan, retailers were permitted to sell their stocks back to the manufacturer, who in turn was permitted to sell them to the Defense Supply Corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Henderson said the RFC had been working out a car purchase program which should prove helpful to dealers.

$600 COAT STOLEN.

Mrs. Catherine Doty, 8129 Prairie avenue, reported to police last night that her Persian lamb coat, valued at $600, was stolen in the hotel at 5454 South Shore drive.

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—The War Production board today prohibited manufacture of commercial laundry equipment after June 1, and dry cleaning machinery after July 1, except to fill army, navy, or maritime commission orders. All stocks of such equipment held by manufacturers were frozen immediately subject to government distribution and demands of the services.

WPB said equipment now held by manufacturers and other sellers, plus the forthcoming output, will be adequate to meet civilian requirements. Persons desiring to purchase a commercial laundry or dry cleaning machine will be required to apply to WPB for permission.

U.S. REQUISITIONS ALL OCEANGOING CARGO VESSELS

Taken Over in an Effort to Cut Sub Losses.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Adm. Emory S. Land.

Washington, D. C., April 18.—All oceangoing American owned tankers and cargo vessels were requisitioned by the federal government tonight.

The action was ordered by Adm. Emory S. Land, head of the War Shipping administration, 24 hours after Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson announced that the army is nearly ready to take the offensive, no matter how difficult such action may be.

It also came at a time when ship losses from submarine attacks along the Atlantic coast are averaging two a day, while construction of new vessels averages one a day. The construction average of one ship a day was maintained in February and March, and the number of new ships constructed in April is expected to total 35 or 40. The ship building program is not expected to reach the rate at which ships are being sunk until late June or early July. The goal is three ships a day by September.

Several Hundred Affected.

The requisitioning was said to affect "several hundred vessels." Exact figures were withheld because such information would be of value to the enemy. It is known, however, that the government has taken title to or is using 75 per cent of American freighter tonnage.

At the outbreak of the war in 1939 the United States had 1,398 ocean going vessels in its merchant marine which aggregated 8,134,890 gross tons. Of these, only 319 ships of 2,094,212 tons were engaged in foreign trade.

Since then the merchant marine has been increased approximately 2 million tons by new construction and seizure of axis and neutral vessels. Plans call for the construction of 8 million tons of ships this year and 10 million tons in 1943.

Owners Become Agents.

Under the requisitioning action the owners of the vessels will become agents of the War Shipping administration, which will conduct all future merchant marine operations, presumably in close coöperation with the navy. It is felt such action will reduce the submarine sinkings.

Officials said the government is not taking title to the affected vessels, but is taking possession on a charter basis, which contemplates reasonable payments to the owners.

"The action was taken to give the government full control over these ships and to place all shipping on a uniform basis," an official of the War Shipping administration said. "Under the new setup the government will not have to negotiate with ship operators but merely will order ships to go where they are needed."

Lake Ships Unaffected.

The order does not affect ships operating on the Great Lakes, altho some of the lake vessels could be transferred to ocean duty, it was said. The order does not affect purely passenger vessels, but does affect passenger cargo vessels and all tankers and freighters.

It was emphasized the order does apply to vessels owned by Americans which are flying the flags of other nations. A considerable number of American owned vessels are flying the flag of Panama and other Latin American nations.

The government plans to insure all its operations under the new plan, just as it has insured all vessels it has purchased or leased previously. The government will reimburse owners for all operation costs, except ordinary wear and tear.

Provided in Act of 1936.

The order was issued under the merchant marine act of 1936 which stated:

"Whenever the President shall proclaim that the security of the national defense makes it advisable or during any national emergency declared by proclamation of the President, it shall by lawful for the [maritime] commission to requisition or purchase any vessel or other water craft owned by citizens of the United States, or under construction within the United States."

The War Shipping administration was created recently by the President to take over the functions of the Maritime commission relating to operation of the American merchant marine.

Losses as a result of submarine attacks along the Atlantic coast have become a serious problem. Sinkings have averaged two a day in recent weeks. Deliveries of completed ships averaged one a day in February and March, and this month will total 35 or 40. The ship building program is not expected to reach the rate at which ships are being sunk until late June or early July. The goal is three ships a day by September.

Launchings Average One a Day.

The program calls for 750 ships this year and 1,550 next year. The program faces possible delays thru shortages of steel and workers.

Military experts believe that the ships are being sunk by a pack of 8 or 12 submarines. The submarines can ply commercial lanes two or three weeks before returning to European bases. They have been most successful in night attacks.

Most of the American patrol vessels are said to be too slow to do more than loose a few hasty shots at the submarines before the undersea craft escape into the night. Merchant marine operators have been slow to change their routes and take other precautions urged by the navy department.

Altho Navy Secretary Frank Knox expressed optimism last week at a decline in ship sinkings, his optimism proved to be unwarranted.

U. S. OIL THIEVES MAY BE FUELING ENEMY U-BOATS

Arrest of N. Y. Ring Suspects Bared.

New York, April 18 [Special].—A widespread investigation by federal, state, and local authorities into the theft of millions of gallons of fuel oils from the port of New York, some of which may have refueled enemy submarines, was disclosed today.

Following the court arraignment of Joseph Nowicki, 26 years old, of Bayonne, N. J., a dock worker on the Jersey City waterfront, Deputy State Tax Commissioner Spencer E. Bates revealed that his department, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Staten Island city police, New Jersey authorities, and the coast guard were coöperating in a drive against a ring of bargemen, dock workers, gasoline and oil dealers, and "others." The ring is accused of syphoning oil from tankers or storage tanks on docks to the extent of "millions of gallons a year."

Loss Set at $1,000,000.

Commissioner Bates said he believed the syphoning operations have been going on for several years. He estimated the total loot has exceeded $1,000,000. One company lost 250,000 gallons to thieves in one month, he said.

Nowicki is charged with the theft of 28,000 gallons of fuel oil. He was released on $5,000 bail for examination later on a charge of grand larceny.

Nowicki is the fourth man arrested, with many more arrests to follow, according to Nathan Mitchell, state tax department investigator in charge of the inquiry.

Federal agents have been investigating the possibility that some of the stolen oil has been delivered to enemy ships at sea, while oil company employés have been warned to watch for suspicious sales of Diesel fuel oil or kerosene.

Tells Plan of Operation.

Oswald Johansen, 34 years old, a ship's engineer and allegedly a confederate of Nowicki, was arrested last Thursday and is free under $500 bond for examination Monday.

Mitchell charged that Nowicki on Oct. 22 arranged to divert oil from a Mexican tanker to a barge manned by Johansen. Mitchell said that was done under cover of darkness by inserting a small by-pass line into the dump pipe connection between the tanker and shore tank.

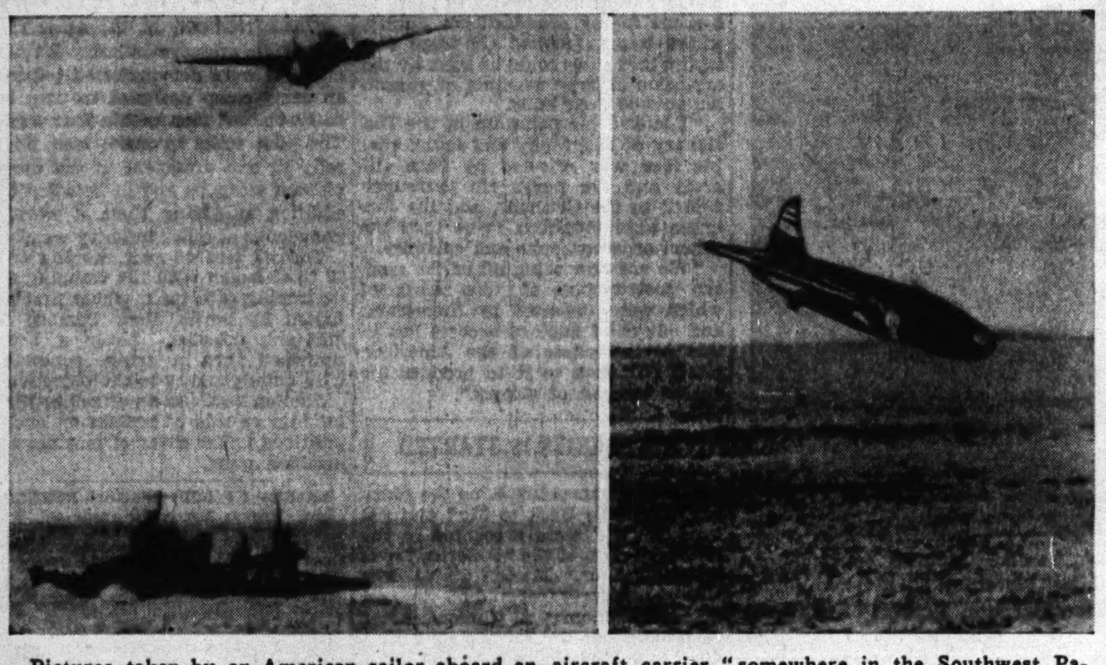
Others accused are Chris Hinson, 34, and Paul Freeman, 32, captain and engineer, respectively, of the tank barge Mary Anna. They were arrested April 9 and freed under $1,000 bond on a charge of moving cargoes of oil without keeping proper records.

Mitchell said the Mary Anna transported 175,000 gallons of stolen oil, which was sold to New Jersey dealers at half the market price.

Wellesley to Have 6 Week Vacation to Conserve Fuel

Wellesley, Mass., April 18 (AP).—Wellesley college will have a six week vacation next winter to conserve fuel, President Mildred H. McAfee announced today. Miss McAfee estimated that between 50,000 and 74,000 gallons of fuel oil will be saved.

Japanese Bomber vs. Carrier—Bomber Loses



Pictures taken by an American sailor aboard an aircraft carrier "somewhere in the Southwest Pacific" show the fiery plunge into the ocean of a Japanese bomber attacking the carrier. The bomber (left) has been badly damaged but it continues to race toward the carrier. The carrier, however, swerves, and the bomber (right) is about to plunge into the sea.

A pillar of smoke rises from the spot at which the bomber, one of a flight of nine, crashed. The pictures were made Feb. 20.

ALLIED SHIP SUNK IN WESTERN ATLANTIC; 38 OF CREW SAVED

AN EASTERN COAST CANADIAN PORT, April 18.—Thirty-eight survivors of an allied merchantman which was torpedoed and sunk in western Atlantic were landed here today by; another merchant ship which picked them up after they had been adrift two days and a night in a crowded lifeboat.

136

Several of their shipmates were lost when the vessel sank five minutes after being struck by a second torpedo. Six of the survivors were taken to a hospital.

The ship was the 136th which has been sunk in the vicinity of American shores since Pearl Harbor. In these sinkings 870 persons are known to have lost their lives, at least 1,104 are missing and believed dead, and 3,754 have been rescued.

U. S. DESTROYER, BUILT IN ONLY 60 DAYS, LAUNCHED

Portsmouth, Va., April 18 (AP).—The destroyer Shubrick, built in the record time of 60 days, was launched at the Norfolk navy yard today. The navy said this was the fastest construction job on record for a ship of the Shubrick's size and design.

The Shubrick's sister ship, the Herndon, launched here Feb. 5, was under construction 163 days.

Yard officials attributed the speedy construction of the Shubrick to the fact that more men were employed and that some construction problems were ironed out thru experience with the Herndon.

The new destroyer was named for Rear Adm. William Brandford Shubrick, commandant of the Norfolk navy yard about 100 years ago.

FACES COURT ON BOY'S CHARGE.

William Fisher, 51 years old, the owner of a used car lot at 4305 Lincoln avenue, is to appear before the Town Hall court tomorrow to answer charges of having smeared tar on the clothing of the 4 year old son of Mrs. Herman J. Mueller, 4328 Lincoln avenue, last Thursday.

5 BLASTS AT SEA ROCK BOARDWALK IN ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, N. J., April 18 (AP).—Residents were awakened at 2:30 a. m. today by five reverberating explosions at sea. Other explosions were heard last night. A store proprietor said they were of such intensity that "the boardwalk was shaking under my feet."

Authorize Flying School to Be Built at Vincennes

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—The war department today announced that construction of an air force flying school has been authorized at Vincennes, Ind., and in adjacent Lawrence county, Illinois. The contract for architectural-engineering services has been awarded to Miller & Yager of Terre Haute, Ind., and Bevington-Williams, Inc., of Indianapolis.

U. S. SEIZES TWO WITH BLUEPRINTS OF GIBRALTAR

Charge Plot to Deliver Data to Italians.

New York, April 18 (AP).—Arrest of two men, charged with attempting to deliver photographs, blueprints, and other information on the fortification and defenses of Gibralter to the Italian government, was announced today by the federal bureau of investigation.

P. E. Foxworth, chief of the New York office of the FBI, identified the men as Rudolph Garvin Keller, 25 years old, second steward of the Swiss freighter St. Cergue, and Hermann Peter Stahlder, 38, a greaser on the freighter.

Admits Conspiracy.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Martin C. Epstein, Keller pleaded innocent to being an unregistered agent for a foreign government, and guilty to a charge of conspiracy to transmit information to that government.

Stahlder pleaded innocent to a charge of conspiracy.

Each was held in $25,000 bail for hearing May 4.

The FBI said the arrests were the first in this country involving alleged assistance to the Italian government. If convicted, the two men are liable to the death penalty under the espionage act.

Italian Agent Named.

Named in another complaint was a John Doe, believed to be one of three Italian secret service men who reportedly approached Keller in Genoa and asked him to obtain the information for them.

Sixteen photographs showing Gibralter's fortifications, facilities, and warships at anchor were found in Keller's possession, Foxworth said, adding that Keller said he took the pictures as the ship passed the British stronghold.

Foxworth said Stahlder admitted a part in the espionage conspiracy. He claimed Swiss citizenship and said he once was imprisoned in a German concentration camp.

Both men were arrested on the ship, which plies between Genoa and New York.

U. S. WILL DEVISE VICTORY WEAPON: COL. M'CORMICK

Recalls Contributions of American Inventors.

Americans have invented most of the modern instruments of war and the country relies on the inventive genius of its citizens to produce the weapon that will win this war, Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, said in a radio address last night.

"We are now using all of the modern instruments of war, most of which were invented by Americans, and our chief hope of success lies in this inventiveness of the American mind," said Col. McCormick. "We look to it to produce for us the weapon of victory."

Col. McCormick's address, delivered in New York, was broadcast by W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system as a feature of W-G-N's new "America Loves a Melody" hour.

TEXT OF THE ADDRESS

The text of the address follows:

"A new use of a fairly old weapon is dominating this war. From time immemorial, the objective of cannon, hand guns, and the mechanical weapons of pregunpowder days was always to throw a missile to make a hole in a man, a ship, or a fort. When the exploding shell was invented, the explosion was only intended to hurl the fragments. The shrapnel itself is nothing but a shotgun thrown some miles before being fired.

"The first mention of effective explosion that has come to my attention was the effect of the exploding shells of the Kearsarge on the hull of the Alabama in the Civil war. Explosion was used in underwater mines in that war, and did some execution, and so did torpedoes fastened to the ends of long booms. As I have said before, the Union ship Husotonic was sunk by a torpedo from a submarine. The Confederate ram Albemarle was sunk by a torpedo pushed against it from a small steam launch.

Fragmentation Shells Used by Japs.

"The Japanese used torpedoes in a surprise attack at Port Arthur in the war against Russia, but in the sea battles attention was directed to their shells, which were of the fragmentation type and won their battles by penetrating the portholes of the guns and killing the crews inside.

"The field artillery prior to the great war depended entirely upon missile effect, but as the guns became larger in that war, and the detonations greater, we began hearing of the effect of shell shock. Many men were sent to hospitals without a wound on their bodies.

"A shell fired from a cannon must consist principally of metal to avoid destruction by the force of the propelling charge, so the explosive percentage of the shell forms a small part of the total weight. With the advent of airplanes and torpedoes strength is not necessary, and most of the weight of the projectiles can be, and is, devoted to the explosive charge.

No Bomb Aiming in Last War.

"In the last war methods of aiming bombs had not been invented; and until almost the end the bombs themselves were so small as not to be very effective.

"This war has brought in bombs up to several thousand pounds, all of the weight in explosives. Such accurate sights have been invented that a Jap bombing plane flying at 10,000 feet was able to hit and destroy the British armored cruiser Repulse, and an American plane destroyed the Japanese battleship Haruna from 20,000 feet. The Langley was entirely smothered in bombs from a height of 15,000 feet.

"Dive bombers are more accurate than artillery at even the medium ranges, so that large bombs can be placed on any target. With these large bombs the damage is not done by the missile, but by the explosion; and ship upon ship has been destroyed by the explosion of bombs or torpedoes, while troops in defensive positions have been blown into oblivion.

No Impenetrable Defenses.

"At the end of the last war it was thought that impenetrable defenses could be constructed; but tanks and enormous bombs and air infantry did to these defenses what torpedoes and bombs have done to battleships at sea.

"Torpedoes can be propelled as far as 30,000 yards, say 17 miles, and may be discharged from airplanes, submarines, and surface craft as small as 100 feet in length and speeding 50 miles an hour.

"You may remember that in my lecture on ancient and medieval fighting craft I said there was a size beyond which boats propelled by man power became less effective. With the advent of sail power and of steam power and of cannon, ships became more powerful almost in the square ot their size, because the larger ships carried heavier guns—guns of longer range and heavier armor.

Big Ships at Disadvantage.

"Now, since torpedoes and bombs are able to sink the largest ship, size has not only lost its value, but has become a disadvantage as the large ship costs more, furnishes a larger target, and cannot dodge.

"Now the only defense against these weapons is in avoiding them, so speed and maneuverability are of prime importance and a smoke screen replaces armor for the surface ship. The submarine can hide under water —the airplane in a cloud.

"The early phases of the battle of Jutland suggested the passing of the battleship when the big ships failed to hit the little ones, but the bungling of the destroyer attacks in the closing phases of the battle confused the lesson. Within the last few days a squadron of British light cruisers and destroyers using smoke screens has fought off an Italian fleet including two battleships.

Recalls Idea of 50 Years Ago.

"When I had written this far my memory went back nearly 50 years to a scene in my grandfather's library, where a man named Gathman was saying that ships could be sunk by the explosion of large amounts of guncotton outside their hulls.

"I looked his name up in the Dictionary of Biography and found that his idea was rejected by both the army and the navy. He thereupon sold it to the Germans, and the Japanese have taught it to us thru the school of catastrophe and calamity.

"We are now using all of the modern instruments of war, most of which were invented by Americans, and our chief hope of success lies in this inventiveness of the American mind. We look to it to produce for us the weapon of victory."

NEW SERIES IS STARTED

Real life dramas involving the songs "Lover, Come Back to Me" and "O Promise Me" were presented in the nitial program of the "America Loves a Melody hour." Marion Claire, who will be regularly featured on the new hour, and Thomas L. Thomas, noted baritone, sang the former song as a duet, and Miss Claire sang the latter as a solo. Henry Weber directed the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and chorus.

W-G-N announced that it will award two cash prizes of $25 each week for the two best letters telling true stories of experiences connected with listeners' favorite songs. The stories told in the winning letters are to be dramatized in the radio show.

Making the War a Family Affair

Pays Off Bet

Several weeks ago Isadore Moloski, 45 years old, a construction foreman of Palatine, made a $25 war bond bet that he would be accepted by the navy before his 18 year old son, Willard, could enlist in the army. Last Thursday Willard became a private. Yesterday the father was sworn in as a chief carpenter's mate and paid off his bet to his son. Moloski, who was in the army for 18 months overseas during the World war, has two other sons in service. They are Howard, 21, a naval aviation machinist's mate at Pensacola, Fla., and Louis, 20, a private assigned to an army task force. The mother, Eunice, said yesterday after Moloski was sworn in that she'd enlist herself if either the army or navy accepted women.

Navy to Close Class V-7 to 3 Groups About May 1

Lieut. David N. Goldenson, navy recruiting officer in Chicago, said yesterday that class V-7 of the naval reserve would be closed to college seniors, juniors, and graduates on or about May 1. Class V-7 is the classification given college men who enlist in the naval reserve for training as deck and line officers. Applicants must be between 19 and 27 years old.

TROOPS TRAINED IN FOUR WEEKS IN NEW ZEALAND

WELLINGTON, N. Z., April 18.—New high pressure infantry training methods were demonstrated today at an army camp designed to turn out battle-trained men within four weeks. The plan seeks to make men physically fit and proficient in the use of platoon weapons and in field craft in addition to giving them a working knowledge of other infantry weapons.

Today's test of men ranging from 18 to 46 began with the trapping and destroying of a tank, which first was halted by mines, then bombed by anti-tank missiles. Later a squad squirmed thru a triple concertina wire entanglement to the objective.

Another test was an attack by three infantry squads of rookies on enemy positions under cover of mortars and machine guns.

INVENTORS HATCH FRESH WONDERS TO SPUR AIR WAR

Rockets and Flying Wings Aid Speed Quest.

Devise Oil Bomb

New York, April 18 (AP).—An oil bomb that bursts and spreads fiery havoc instantly may prove one of America's most powerful weapons, newspaper editors concluding a three day convention were told today.

Members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors attended a chemical warfare demonstration on the parade grounds at Governors Island, at which they were informed that the new incendiary sends up a solid sheet of flame that burns fiercely for several minutes in an area with a 25 to 30 foot diameter.

New York, April 18 [Wide World].—Only the high commands of the allies and the axis know what aces they have face down on the table for the air war, but enough hints of strange new devices are being dropped to forecast a spectacular acceleration in the fighting aloft. The following are in store:

A flying wing German bomber armed with four cannon and four machine guns.

An American fighter with a 2,500 mile range and a top speed of 445 miles an hour.

A German bomber apparently capable of discharging small cannisters of explosive from its tail at attacking pursuit planes.

Axis gliders built to carry light tanks.

Axis and possibly allied planes catapulted into the air by rockets.

Mean Major Changes.

Technical publications discuss these developments calmly, but these planes' effects on the progress of the war will speed the race for air superiority and italicize the horror of bombing raids.

The competition today hinges on the production of faster and more heavily armed defensive and protective fighters, of bombers which can fly farther and higher to reach objectives, and of transports to speed men and materials to the fighting fronts.

American research and construction in the glider field are hedged by secrecy, but reports from abroad indicate that glider production is going on apace in Germany.

The race for better pursuit planes revolves around the production of higher horse power engines and of planes of revolutionary design. Engines of 2,000 horse power already are in heavy production in this country. One of our fastest fighter types, the Republic P-47, carries such an engine.

Push Four Engined Bombers.

For several years the United States was alone in the field of four engine, long range bomber operation, but now it has been joined by the Russians, Japanese, British, and Germans. The Germans are employing such planes to attack the bridge of ships between the United States and England.

The man from Mars motif in wartime aviation is most evident in rocket experimentation. The air correspondent of the London Daily Mail stated in February that rockets for takeoff propulsion were used on the Junkers twin engined bomber and gave the plane an additional bomb load of probably 3,000 pounds.

CHINESE FALL BACK TO NEW LINE IN BURMA

Japs Outflank Defenders from Both Sides.

CHUNGKING, China, April 18 (AP).—The main Chinese forces on the Sittang front in central Burma have withdrawn to a new line after many days of a powerful offensive by overwhelming Japanese forces, the Chinese command announced tonight.

The fighting on the eastern wing of the Burma front continued fiercely, with the Chinese forces under the command of United States Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell executing a difficult delaying action, altho outnumbered and outflanked from both sides.

The Chinese command said that heavy casualties had been inflicted on the Japanese as the Chinese withdrew to their prepared positions to the rear in the face of great pressure.

On the western flank of the Burma line the British troops also were engaged in a rear guard action as they continued to destroy the Irrawaddy valley oil wells despite the infiltration tactics of the Japanese seeking to save the fields.

U. S. Planes Raid Rangoon.

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—The war department announced today that Maj. Gen. Lewis H, Brereton had reported from India that American army flying fortress bombers successfully raided harbor installations at Rangoon, Burma, attacking docks and other facilities.

It was the second American raid on Rangoon. The squadron also has set fire to Japanese troopships and a cruiser in the Bay of Bengal.

A communique said that Brereton reported heavy explosions were heard but because of poor visibility it was impossible to determine the extent of the damage. All the bombers returned safely to their base.

[In New Delhi, India, military experts said continued American raids on Rangoon and the roads along the Sittang and Irrawaddy rivers may relieve the Jap assaults on the allied lines.]

Claim 4,500 British Killed.

TOKIO, April 18 [from Japanese broadcasts]—(AP).—Japanese army headquarters announced today that 4,500 British troops had been killed or wounded in Burma between March 10 and April 15 to Japanese losses of 590. The Japanese also said 150 prisoners had been taken, and listed this booty: 120 airplanes, 62 tanks, 37 cannon, and 238 trucks.

'FREE FRENCH' SUB, WORLD'S LARGEST, REPORTED SUNK

LONDON, April 18.—The "Free French" announced today that the submarine Surcouf was considered lost. The Surcouf, a vessel of 2,880 tons, was the largest submarine in the world and accommodated a seaplane in a small deck hangar.

The Surcouf, 361 feet long and mounting two eight inch guns, carried 150 men. It participated in the Free French seizure last Christmas of the Vichy ruled islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off the Newfoundland coast.

The British seized the ship, then in a British port, after France sued for an armistice. Within two months after the war began the French crew aboard captured a German merchant ship 1,000 miles at sea. The Surcouf underwent repairs at Portsmouth and Boston navy yards last year.

MUSICAL EQUIPMENT STOLEN.

Guitar equipment valued at $200 was taken yesterday from the automobile of Miss Francis Lewis, an entertainer, at 878 North Clark street, she reported to police.

SMASHING OF NAZI AIR FLEET URGED BY DE SEVERSKY

Expert Says Big Bombers Will Win War.

Only after the German air fleet has been knocked out of the skies can a successful invasion on the west coast of Europe be made, Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky, air plane designer, yesterday told an audience of 1,500 in the Palmer House.

Maj. De Seversky addressed the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations and was emphatic in his statements that air power, more specifically long range bombers, will win the war.

"To increase our fleet of airplane carriers enough to permit us to launch air raids on all the far flung objectives we must hit would take too long and cost too much," he said.

Says U. S. Planes "Can Do Job."

"The answer is long range bombing. We have bombers now that will do the job. Our task, then, is to strengthen our present force."

The air expert said America bombers soon will be equipped with a new device which will enable flyers to bomb targets they cannot see.

"Ships and factories will be bombed thru clouds, he said. "There will no longer be any difference between day and night bombing.

"Nor will it be long before we have huge air transports to carry men and materials. The enemy submarine will be useless."

Puts Emphasis on Quality.

When the major finished his talk he answered questions from the audience.

"Can we build 60,000 airplanes this year?" he was asked.

"We're putting too much emphasis on number," he replied. "The emphasis should be on quality. For example, we found that the planes our fighters used in the Philippines were inferior to those used by the Japs. That must be corrected and we have the models now in production that are far superior to those of the enemy."

"What does the bombing of the Jap cities signify?" was another question.

"In my opinion, it was a solar plexus punch," he answered. "A blow to make the Japs drop their guard—pull in part of their air force. But that is just my opinion.

HEAR NAZIS MINE BELGIAN FIELDS, FEAR LAND DRIVE

LONDON, April 18 (AP).—Inbel, "Free Belgian" news agency, said today the Germans were busily mining fields in an area of Belgium between the Sambre and Meuse rivers in apparent fear of an invasion thrust. Some farms in this strategic triangle south of Namur and north of the French border in southeastern Belgium were said to have been vacated on order of the Germans. Mines were reported laid at Louprelle, Gerpinnes, Fleurus, Farciennes, and Walcourt.

GLOOMY SUNDAYS KILL JOY FOR THE AEF IN AUSTRALIA

One Camp Will Have Its Own Movies.

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pvt. Frank Stockmal.

UNITED STATES ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, April 18.—The milkmen whistle in Australian cities on Sunday, but for everybody else the day is very quiet—gloomy Sunday, say the American troops.

The milkmen do not whistle because they are happy. They whistle because a British law brought into effect under Charles I. forbids milkmen "yodeling" on the Sabbath, by which is meant crying their wares. To this whistling now may be added Sunday movies for at least one American camp.

"Boy, these Sundays sure are blue," said Pvt. Frank Stockmal, 2901 W. 39th place, Chicago. "There just isn't anything to do."

Australia's two largest cities are among the most crowded in the world on week days and on Saturday nights the sidewalks are jammed. But on Sundays the streets are all but deserted.

Bars Are Closed.

Bars are closed and it is also difficult to get soft drinks on Sunday.

There is now a nation-wide controversy going on over the issue of Sunday movies. Nearly every one seems to favor them, but no one seems able to untangle the laws against opening theaters on the Sabbath.

Another obstacle hard to surmount in this highly unionized country is the refusal of the theater employés' union to work on Sundays.

An American army spokesman said that if the Australians will not open the theaters the army will put on its own movies and a start will be made on this program tomorrow at a camp near one of the large cities, with the troops using borrowed equipment. Lieut. Joe Weisberger, army morale officer, said:

"It is my job to see that the boys are entertained after working hard all week and I am going to do it."

Arrange Outdoor Sports.

Baseball and football games also are being arranged for the troops.

One large city has a town hall concert as its only organized entertainment tomorrow. In some of the towns small amateur organizations are extending themselves to entertain the troops, but are unable to take care of large numbers.

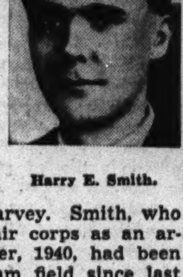
Newspapers print letters from readers expressing their views on Sunday entertainment. Most of the newspapers favor it. One Sydney daily today printed a number of letters from people who, it said, are "fighting a rear guard action in favor of gloomy Sundays."

Staid Element Opposes Move.

One subscriber, who said that he wrote "more in sorrow than in anger," asserted that the attacks on "killjoys and wowsers" are a "gross insult to a large section of the community." Another, who said he is a "wowser," and "proud of it," claimed that he "bowed his head in shame" when he read an editorial advocating Sunday movies.

"Wowser" is Australian slang for the more staid element which is against open Sundays.

HARVEY SOLDIER, KILLED AT POST, AWARDED MEDAL



Harry E. Smith.

A Harvey youth who remained at his post repairing bombers until he was killed in the Japanese attack on Hickam field, Honolulu, Dec. 7 has been awarded the silver star for gallantry in action, his parents were notified by the war department yesterday. He was Pvt. Harry E. Smith, 19 years old, of 15322 Burlington avenue, Harvey. Smith, who joined the army air corps as an armorer in November, 1940, had been stationed at Hickam field since last June. He was a graduate of Thornton Township High school. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith. His father, a machinist, was in the submarine service during the first World war.

FIVE MARINES CABLE FROM CORREGIDOR TO BUY BONDS WITH PAY!

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—Shells and bombs dropping on Corregidor haven't stopped the United States marines on the island stronghold from adding financial aid to their war efforts.

The marine corps announced today that cablegrams have been received from five officers and men of the 4th regiment on Corregidor asking that their pay checks be used to purchase war bonds.

The 4th regiment went to the Philippines from Shanghai five days before the Dec. 7 attacks on United States islands in the Pacific. The withdrawal of the regiment to Corregidor was accomplished under cover of darkness during closing hours of the Battle of Bataan.

NEW BRITISH FIRE BOMBS DRIFT TO SWISS TERRITORY

LONDON, April 18 (AP).—A new weapon, developed apparently by the RAF, has made its appearance on the aerial battlefields of Europe: incendiary charges floated to their targets by small, hydrogen filled balloons. The Swiss radio broadcast today an army warning to civilians against the contraptions, some of which apparently have been drifting onto Swiss territory.

"Numerous cases have been reported in which balloons carrying metal cases filled with burning liquid attached to which is also about 300 yards of steel wiring have been found over various parts of Swiss territory," the announcer said.

Reports from Berlin received in Switzerland also mentioned a new type of incendiary bomb dropped by parachute and said some of them had been carried as far as Tilsit in East Prussia.

The Berlin correspondent of the Swiss newspaper La Suisse described the bomb as a "jug of liquid phosphorus." He said it was "not easy to combat" and "it is not doubted it can cause great damage to forests and buildings."

SO SORRY; YANKS NOW TOUGHEST FOE, JAPS ADMIT

BERLIN, April 18 [from German broadcasts]—(AP).—The Tokio newspaper Nichi Nichi corrected the Japanese press today on a recent statement that of all Japan's foes the Chinese soldiers are the toughest. The Americans now head Nichi Nichi's list.

Earlier the Chinese had been ranged ahead of the Russians [whom the Japanese fought on the Korean border in 1938 and on the Manchukuo border in 1939], British, Americans, Australians, and Indians.

Nichi Nichi said the "weak showing" made by the British and Americans in the east Asia war was due to native troops who fought unenthusiastically. In more recent fighting between Japanese and United States troops, Nichi Nichi said, the Americans proved to be considerably tougher than the Chinese.

Food for Vatican Reaches Italy; Believed from U. S.

BERNE, Switzerland, April 18.—Another example of the strange situations brought about by the war is provided by the arrival in the Genoa, Italy, harbor of a freighter flying the Swiss flag and bringing a cargo for Vatican City. It is understood that the ship came from America. A special train will carry the cargo straight to the special railroad station in Vatican City.

Report Portuguese Ship Sunk Off Lisbon; 15 Saved

LISBON, Portugal, April 18 (AP).—A small Portuguese freighter was reported today to have been sunk by an unidentified warship off the coast near Lisbon last night. The crew of 15 landed at a nearby port without suffering any casualties.

CORREGIDOR GUNS DESTROY MORE JAP BATTERIES

Bridges and Roads Also Blasted in Bataan.

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—Corregidor's gunners encouraged hopes of a prolonged defense of the Philippines stronghold today by blasting additional batteries of enemy siege guns, as well as roads and bridges.

As a result of the effective counterblows, the war department said, Japanese bombing and shelling of the island fortress at the entrance to Manila bay showed "somewhat decreased intensity."

Cebu City in Flames.

The war department's announcement followed an official report on Friday that three enemy batteries had been put out of action in the past 24 hours. In addition the guns of Corregidor and the three outlying Manila bay forts blasted roads and bridges in Bataan, disrupting enemy communications.

Reporting on the situation elsewhere in the islands, Lieut. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright advised that Cebu, the Philippines' second city, was in enemy hands and was burning. Fierce fighting continued in the vicinity of the city, which is more than 300 miles south of Corregidor.

Fighting on Panay.

On the Island of Panay, where an invasion force landed Thursday from a fleet of eight transports supported by warships, the Japanese likewise were still meeting determined resistance.

The Island of Cabu, on which the city of the same name is situated, was invaded eight days ago, almost simultaneously with the fall of Bataan.

"Air Fields on Panay"—Berlin.

BERLIN, April 18 [from German broadcasts] — (AP). — Tokio dispatches said today that it was believed five large air fields on Panay Island were used by the Americans in making their raid this week at Manila and elsewhere in the Philippines.

All important places on the coast of the island now are in Japanese hands, the dispatches declared.

Manila is only two hours bomber flying time from Panay, the dispatches said.

ALLIED BOMBERS HIT PLANES, SHIPS IN RABAUL RAID

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 18 (AP).—Allied bombers attacked the Japanese held port of Rabaul, on New Britain Island, today and damaged a Japanese transport with two near misses and set a smaller vessel afire, united nations headquarters announced tonight.

A Japanese naval bomber and three flying boats moored in the harbor also were reported hit. Heavy bombers and four fighter planes also were destroyed on an airdrome which was damaged in an attack pressed home despite fighter plane and anti-aircraft fire opposition. The announcement said.

A high explosive and incendiary bomb raid was made by the RAAF last night on Koepang, Japanese seized capital on Dutch Timor.

MacARTHUR CHIEF OF STAFF JOINED ARMY AS PRIVATE

Gen. Sutherland Veteran of Last War.

New York, April 18 [Wide World].—It usually takes a lieutenant colonel 15 years to become a major general—if he becomes a major general. But it took Gen. Douglas MacArthur's right hand man, Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland only one year.

Sutherland, MacArthur's chief of staff, who went with him from the Philippines to Australia, has had to come up the hard way. The son of a former United States senator, he went into the army as a buck private. He went in without West Point's four years of schooling in strategy, tactics, and command. But he didn't go in without any knowledge of these things.

Studied Military Books.

Ever since he was a youngster, Dick Sutherland had wanted to be a soldier. Perhaps the fact that his great-great grandfather was a colonel on Gen. George Washington's staff had some influence.

Evenings in the big living room of the Sutherland home in Elkins, W. Va., while his parents and their friends played cards or talked, Dick would be curled up in a big chair reading books on military campaigns and heroes.

After his preparatory studies at Elkins academy and Andover, Mass., he entered Yale university. Years later the senior Sutherland said, "Dick wanted to go to West Point or Annapolis," but he was advised that greater opportunities probably would be found in other fields. "I didn't learn for some years how greatly disappointed he was that he did not go, preferably to West Point," said the senator.

In 1915 he joined one of the Yale batteries being formed by Gen. Leonard Wood and when in 1916 he stepped on the platform to receive his diploma at Yale he was wearing khaki. The battery had joined the Connecticut National Guard in order to get its equipment from the state, and was under orders to go to the Mexican border.

Enters Regular Army.

Young Sutherland took competitive examinations, first for a second lieutenant's commission in the National Guard, then for the regular army. By the time the United States entered World War I. he was a captain. He went to France with the second division—one of the first divisions to go over—and participated in the battles of Belleau Wood, Champagne, and the Argonne.

He was recommended for the rank of major, but the war's end left the promotion unfulfilled.

Before he went to France he had changed from the field artillery to the infantry, and in this branch he served varied post-war details. They included the staff school at Fort Leavenworth, two years of study at Ecole Supérieure de Guerre in France, a tour of duty at Fort Benning, service at the war college, and four years in the G-3 office of the general staff at Washington, D. C.

In July, 1937, he went off to foreign service at Tientsin, China. By the following March conditions were such in China that the battalion which Sutherland headed was ordered home. But he was sent to the Philippines, where after a term as procurement officer for the Philippine army he became MacArthur's chief of staff.

NEW ARMY MEN TO GET LEAVE TO WIND UP AFFAIRS

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—Men inducted into the army now may obtain furloughs in which to wind up their personal affairs shortly after entering the service.

Furloughs as long as 15 days, to begin not later than five days after induction, will be granted under a new, liberal policy. Requests for leave should be made in advance to draft boards.

Men accepted for service will be sworn in immediately upon their induction at reception centers so that they will not be eligible during furloughs to enlist in the navy or marine corps. The war department advised that the rate of physical rejections by army examiners made it undesirable for selectees to assume that an order for induction would mean immediate military service.

BLAMES LIGHT PLUG FOR FIRE.

Fire Attorney Henry Eckhardt said yesterday that the $5,000 fire Friday on the sixth floor at 101 South Wells street was caused by a defective light plug.

QUISLING SEEKS TO KEEP CHURCH MEMBERSHIP UP

LONDON, April 13 (AP).—The Nazi backed Norwegian government of Maj. Vidkun Quisling has promulgated a decree intended to prevent laymen from quitting the state church in support of clergymen who resigned in mass, the Norwegian Telegraph agency reported today.

The agency said the decree required all persons wishing to resign from the Norwegian church to obtain permission of the bishops.

The original bishops have resigned in protest against Quisling government interference, the agency said, and "acting bishops" appointed by Quisling thus virtually have the power to determine to what church Norwegians may belong.

FARMER DIES UNDER TRACTOR.

Du Bois, Ill., April 18 (AP).—Ignatz J. Frost, 39 year old Perry county farmer, was killed late yesterday when he attempted to extricate a mired tractor and the machine overturned, crushing him. His father, Robert, and a brother, Sylvester, witnessed the accident.

JAPAN WARNED OF MORE RAIDS BY U. S. PLANES

Bombers Came from Air Carriers, Report.

dential districts in the suburbs. Schools and hospitals unfortunately received several hits."

[Tokio's suburbs contain huge industrial plants as well as residences—airplane plants, arsenals, munitions factories, huge military depots and cantonments. The reports of schools and hospitals bombed follow the normal pattern of axis propaganda.]

Domei continued: "The planes which carried out 'blind raids' on the Tokio-Yokohama region were without doubt United States planes, observers declared. They said the American air insignia of a blue star against a red circle could be seen clearly from the ground.

"A Domei reporter described one enemy plane which was shot down as falling like a 'smoking comet.'"

Two Planes Raid Nagoya.

Nagoya is Japan's third city, with a population of 1,400,000, site of the big Kawanishi, Mitsubishi, and other aircraft plants, 217 miles west of Tokio.

"At 2:30 this afternoon two enemy planes raided Nagoya," central defense headquarters announced. "Although they dropped bombs, damage was slight."

Kobe has a population of 1,200,000 and is Japan's largest port, shipping point for supplies flowing to the Japanese forces in the southwestern Pacific. It is 376 miles by rail from Tokio.

"A single enemy plane raided Kobe around 2:30 p. m., dropping incendiary bombs but no serious damage was caused," said a communique.

Farming Towns Hit.

Yokohama with 950,000 population is the port for Tokio, 18 miles away. It is Japan's chief port on the Pacific, site of big shipyards and a wide variety of industries. Any damage done there was covered by the general communique covering the Tokio-Yokohama district.

Osaka defense headquarters reported one other area under attack: "The enemy strafed farming villages in Wakayama prefecture, Shiga prefecture, and the Yokkaichi area with machine guns, but no damage was caused."

[These areas contain many farming villages but they also are thick with factories producing war goods. Wakayama is the southernmost prefecture of Honshu; Yokkaichi is an important port across the Bay of Ise from Nagoya; Shiga is a thickly peopled prefecture just east of Kyoto, containing the famous Lake Biwa.]

Alarm in Other Islands.

The great cities of Osaka [3,600,000] and Kyoto [1,200,000] were under air raid alarm during much of the afternoon with the rest of the highly industrialized, densely populated district within 100 miles radius of Osaka, which, however, apparently was not bombed.

For the main cities, including Tokio, the alarm ended at 3:50 p. m., 3 hours 20 minutes after the first planes appeared over Tokio.

Also under alarm was the entire island of Hokkaido, northernmost of the main islands, and Shikoku, just south of Honshu, the principal island; all the northeast coast of Honshu above Tokio; all the Tokaido coastal district between Tokio and Osaka; western Honshu as far as Okayama, 100 miles west of Osaka.

Domei gave this account of Tokio under air attack:

"In the downtown districts of Ginza and Marunouchi [the shopping and financial centers] business flowed on as usual with buses, trolleys, and other vehicles running without interruption.

'People Remained Calm.'

"While Japanese air defenses smashed down the invaders lunch hour crowds unhurriedly finished their meals and returned to their offices satisfied that the defense forces were doing their work well.

"Children peered into the sky for hostile craft. The people remained calm and unruffled. Unperturbed housewives and civil defense units closed windows and checked anti-raid equipment with the same cool efficiency shown in practice."

"Tokio theaters continued their performances as usual with the exception of two which canceled their matinées," said Domei.

[The canceled matinées suggest either damage or fears of further attacks. The Japanese are great theater goers, and Saturday afternoon finds the playhouses filled for long drawn dramas which begin soon after noon and last into the night.]

Domei news agency quoted Mamoru Shigemitsu, adviser to the foreign office, as advising the Japanese people not to lose their composure.

"Mr. Shigemitsu, who had a good deal of experience of German raids as ambassador in London, said the Japanese nation need not become worried over 'enemy raids on Japanese cities,' Domei reported.

"'The British,' he said, 'have endured deluges of bombs for more than two full years. If we lose our composure the Americans and British will clap their hands and laugh at us.

"'Compared with the German raids on London today's raid would not even be worth mentioning as an air raid.'"

A Chinese language announcement said the raiders flew "American airplanes." [This might mean that the crews were from the United States. However, American built craft have been assigned to British, Dutch, Australian, and Chinese forces.]

[The Berlin radio reported that a fire—of an origin unannounced—had destroyed more than 400 buildings and killed or injured a considerable number of persons in Oguni, in northern Japan. It was not known whether that disaster had any connection with the raids.]

Chased by Interceptors.

A Japanese radio announcement alleged the raiders did not attempt to hit military establishments and "inflicted damage on grammar schools, hospitals, and cultural establishments.

"These planes were repulsed by a heavy barrage of our defense guns," the announcer said. "I wish to reveal that our losses were extremely light."

The broadcast closed with a statement that "mounting indignation over the indiscriminate bombing is being felt among the people."

Officials Call on Hirohito.

San Francisco, April 18 (AP).—Japan's premier, navy minister and foreign minister paid a personal call on Emperor Hirohito today to report on the air raid and inquire after the emperor's well-bing, radio Tokio said today.

The broadcast said the trio found the emperor "composed as usual, but undoubtedly he was greatly concerned over the incident."

"The empress, the princes, and the princesses and other members of the imperial family were safe from the attack," the announcer added.

The emperor's visitors were the premier general, Hideki Tojo; the navy minister, Adm. Shigetaro Shimada; and the foreign minister, Shigenori Togo.

400,000 SCHOOL CHILDREN TO AID CLEAN UP DRIVE

More than 400,000 school children are expected to aid this week in a "Clean Up for Victory" campaign sponsored by the Chicago Association of Commerce and the board of education. Miss Ethel Foster, director in charge of the association's effort, said the youngsters would be asked to gather salvage tomorrow. Tuesday is "War Against Waste day"; Wednesday is "Victory Garden day"; and Thursday is "Fire Prevention day." Parades of young workers are to be held Friday. Saturday is to be observed as "Neighborhood Improvement day."

BATTLE THIRD BLAZE IN HULK OF NORMANDIE

Torch Cause of New Naval Fire.

moved. The funnels and upper decks are gone and there is no bridgework above the main deck.

The Normandie and 13 other French boats were seized Dec. 12, and the navy at once set about converting the liner for naval purposes. She was within a few days of putting to sea when the first fire decommissioned her.

A picture of inefficiency and neglect in the navy department was drawn by the house naval affairs committee in its report of the first blaze.

"It is difficult to imagine a more confused state of affairs than that which existed on the Normandie at and during the course of the fire," the committee said.

WHAT! AGAIN?

New York, April 18 [Special.]—The third burning of the liner Normandie was unspectacular but the people who gathered to watch it were affected curiously. They were a bit angry and considerably disgusted. The crowd's attitude seemed to be: "What! Again?"

Wandering thru the crowd of several hundred spectators one heard such remarks as: "Is that thing burning again?" "Why don't they just tow her over to Hitler?" or "Make a present of her to Laval."

For a few minutes, newspaper men with official police press cards were permitted to stand near the side of the pier to watch. Then a policeman came running over, waving his arms and shouting: "Across the street. Navy orders." The reporters went.

Wardens Shooed Away.

The air raid wardens, who were thick as ants at the first burning, began showing up, but the police shooed them as firmly as anybody. Then the fire auxiliary wardens, with their special arm bands, showed up. They, too, stayed on the far side of the street—by orders.

The annoyance of the crowd began to spread. Even a navy officer, who showed up in an unofficial capacity, made no bones about his disgust. Gloomily he eyed the smudge wreathed vessel and said:

"A workman with a torch, they say? If that's true, what a bunch of ——s we are! Lord, I wish I was the admiral tonight!"

From a standpoint of news coverage, it was a hit-and-miss affair; almost an epic of frustration. There was no one present to tell newspaper men exactly what had happened, and what was being done about it, and most of the information seeped back "unofficially."

The navy had no public relations officer present, according to the best available information. One of the few contacts the press had with the navy was when a lieutenant, who said he was the duty officer, came riding across the cobbled street on a bicycle, a large pistol strapped around his waist.

He identified himself, but said he could say nothing.

RAID DELIGHTS CHINA; 'WE HAVE WAITED FIVE YEARS FOR THIS DAY'

CHUNGKING, China, April 18 (AP).—"We have been waiting almost five years for this day. We are glad the Japanese people know at last the din of bombs and the smell of explosives."

Thus the average Chinese today expressed his elation at the news that American warplanes had swooped upon Tokio and other big cities of Japan.

Maj. Gen. Chou Chih-jou, head of the aeronautical commission, said the attack marked the beginning of offensive strategy of the united nations and proved that the strength of America would be a lesson to the Japanese.

Chinese newsboys established records selling extras on the bombing. Theaters interrupted their programs to announce details, while their audiences cheered.

CAPITOL HAILS RAID AS START OF U. S. OFFENSIVE

"Just a Part of What Tokio Can Expect."

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—Word that American planes had finally bombed Japan exhilarated and excited this capital today, and was hailed by members of congress as the harbinger of a vast offensive that ultimately will crumble the Mikado's empire.

In combination with this week's air raids on Japanese bases in the Philippines it cheered a country which, contrary to its traditions, had been fighting a defensive war.

Elation over the raids on Japan was mingled with intense speculation as to the kind and number of planes used and how they reached the cities of the enemy. All possible points and methods of approach were discussed—aircraft carriers, bases in the Aleutian Islands, in the Philippines, China, and even Russia.

Confirmation Held Up.

Officials at the war and navy departments were wearing broad smiles but saying nothing. Presumably no announcement will be made until the planes are back at their bases or carriers, and official reports have been received.

Assuming Tokio to be telling the truth, there are several explanations of the lact of confirmation. If the raiders operated from an aircraft carrier there would be no reports from the United States forces until their radios could be operated without disclosing ocean positions. The raid of a United States task force on Wake and Marcus Islands was not officially announced for weeks afterward.

Senators Are Jubilant.

At the capitol, Sen. Hill [D., Ala.] echoed a popular statement when he said:

"This is just a beginning; it's hardly a token compared with what we're going to give them."

"That's the way we're going to win the war," said Sen. Clark [D., Idaho], "bombing them right at home."

"It is the beginning of a general offensive," asserted Rep. May [D., Ky.], chairman of the military committee. "While it is hard for me to believe anything Japan says, this bears out my prediction of 10 days ago that Tokio would be bombed shortly."

Rep. Vinson [D., Ga.], chairman of the naval committee, said: "It appears to me that the allied nations are beginning to take the offensive."

More Raids Predicted.

House Majority Leader McCormack [D., Mass.] said it was only a matter of time when our forces would take the offensive. From now on Japan can expect to be on the receiving end. Our men of the navy and the air force have done a wonderful job to date under trying difficulties confronting them. We can rely on the army when it meets the enemy."

Rep. Snyder [D., Pa.], chairman of a house appropriations subcommittee on war expenditures, said: "This will prove TNT in boosting morale, not only at home but especially in China and Russia. The great masses in Russia will have foundation to believe that they won't have to fear an attack to their rear while they are battling the Germans. I predicted in January that Tokio would be bombed before May 1, and I now predict that it will be bombed from many quarters by July 1."

DESERT WINDSTORM HALTS LIBYAN WAR; SINK SUB, ROME SAYS

CAIRO, Egypt, April 18 (AP).—The British reported today that a hot desert windstorm had curtailed operations in Libya.

"There is nothing to report beyond patrol activities," a communique said. "Movement yesterday was hampered by weather conditions. A khamseen [hot wind] has been blowing for the last two days."

Claim Submarine Sunk.

ROME, April 18 [from Italian broadcasts]—(AP).—An Italian torpedo boat has sunk a submarine in the central Mediterranean, the Italian high command announced today. On the Libyan front heavy sandstorms were reported to have hindered patrol activity in the Cirenaica war sectors. A communique said Italian planes bombed British communications lines in the rear and that one Hurricane plane was shot down by anti-aircraft defenses.

Axis Raids Malta.

VALLETTA, Malta, April 18 (AP).—After a raidless night axis bombers attacked airdromes and harbors of this island fortress today and caused some casualties. One German bomber was knocked down and two others listed as probably destroyed.

RAF TELLS HOW IT HIT DEEP INTO GERMANY'S HEART

Bombers Hedge-Hopped All the Way to Augsburg.

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 18.—Details of the most daring single exploit of the royal air force bomber command—a daylight attack on Augsburg, deep in Germany—were made public today while Britain thrilled to the report that American planes had bombed Japan's four major cities.

Meanwhile the RAF kept on hammering at the invasion ports on the French coast.

Despite the loss of seven of the 12 giant bombers which raided Augsburg, the British called the assault a splendid feat. The planes which carried out the offensive deep into Germany's heart were revealed as Lancasters, which the British describe as the world's most formidable bombers. They are four motored and have a big bomb capacity.

Fly Only 50 Ft. Above Ground.

Twelve of these big ones took off yesterday afternoon. As soon as they were over the French coast they dropped down until they were flying only from 50 feet above the ground. At that level they roared over 1,000 miles of country thickly covered with air defense — across France and around Switzerland, 500 miles into southern Germany—coming and going so fast that the enemy defense hardly had time to organize his defenses.

South of Paris they were attacked by a large group of Focke-Wulf 190's. Flying in tight formation, they fought off the cannon shooting fighters without deviating from their course, altho four of the 12 Lancasters were shot down there.

Gunners in the power operated turrets of the bombers were certain that some of the attackers were shot down, but were uncertain as to how many. The Germans finally gave up.

Aim at U-Boat Motor Plant.

The bombers continued hedge-hopping all the way to Augsburg. One pilot described it:

"I pulled the nose of my plane up a trifle to clear a hill and pushed it down the other side. And, there was Augsburg."

The target had been predetermined after a long study of aerial pictures. It was a factory which manufactures half the Diesel engines which power Germany's U-boats.

The theory of the raid was that if the factory's production schedule were disrupted, the German shipyards would become cluttered with incomplete U-boats until the factory could be restored. By bombing one plant the whole U-boat construction program could be thus delayed, with valuable results for the united nations in the Atlantic battle.

Run Into Heavy Fire.

A terrific bombardment of anti-aircraft fire went up. One pilot said:

"Low angle 'flak' began to come up thick and fast. We were so low that the Germans were shooting into their own buildings. Big sheds which were our targets rose up exactly ahead of me. My bomb aimer let go. The bombs, of course, had delayed action fuses or they would have blown us all up."

Eight of the original 12 survived to score direct bomb hits on the engine plant. But three were knocked down later at Augsburg by anti-aircraft fire. The remaining five turned homeward. They flew at a low level until the light failed, then climbed. All were tucked into their hangars by midnight.

Start Fires at Hamburg.

Meanwhile, other RAF bombers attacked Hamburg, Germany, starting many fires; the U-boat base at St. Nazaire, France; docks at Le Havre, and air fields in France and the Low Countries. During the night German bombers made light raids on the English south coast.

In today's assaults, the RAF reported that it attacked the invasion ports, railways, and other objectives in northern France, encountering no German fighter opposition. During the day German raiders approached the southeast coast but were driven off by fighter planes.

Two American Flyers Lost.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 18 (AP).—Two Americans were listed as killed in action in a Royal Canadian air force casualty list issued today. They were Sergt. Melvin Henry Smith of Arcola, Ind., and Flight Sergt. Lew Wallace of Beckley, W. Va.

7 Ships Sunk, Says Berlin.

BERLIN, April 18 [From German broadcasts]—(AP).—Six transport sailing ships and a patrol craft were sunk by German bombers off the south coast of England yesterday, the high command reported today.

Heavy damage was reported caused in a raid on the British port of Southampton last night while Berlin admitted RAF raids on Augsburg and Hamburg, but said the damage was slight. Claiming 17 British planes shot down last night, the Germans put the RAF's losses in the last 24 hours at 33.

CATHOLIC LEADER SAYS POLES WILL DRIVE NAZIS OUT

Await Hour of Revolt, Fugitive Priest Says.

Msgr. Zygmunt Kaczynski.

Millions of Poles, eager to regain their independence, will rise against their Nazi conquerors and help to drive them from Poland when the time is right, according to Msgr. Zygmunt Kaczynski, vice president of the Polish National council in London and former undersecretary of the Polish ministry of information, who is in the United States for a short visit.

"Poland looks forward," said Msgr. Kaczynski, "to the day when two millions of their countrymen will be freed from forced labor in Germany, when uncounted thousands of their women and girls will be repatriated and when Poland again can take her place among the nations of the world.

Nazis "Liquidate" Religion.

"Poland also looks forward to restoration of religious freedom. Since the Nazi invasion of western Poland seven Catholic dioceses have been liquidated. Where formerly 800 pastors served a population of 2,200,000 Poles, only about 30 remain and these are not permitted any religious freedom.

"The Nazis have cast seven archbishops and bishops and 1,200 Catholic priests into internment camps, offering no reason. Protestant churchmen fare no better and Julius Bursche, superintendent of the Lutheran church in Poland died in an internment camp."

Gestapo "Even Shocks Nazis."

Msgr. Kaczynski said the people of Poland are eager for Russian success in the war. Reminded of the stories of Russian oppression which came from Poland after the Nazi attack, he said nothing that the Russians ever did to Poland could be compared with what the Nazis have done.

All civil administration in Poland, according to Msgr. Kaczynski, is in the hands of the German gestapo, which he said was so ruthless that even German army officers protested and were removed from the conquered land.

Msgr. Kaczynski was executive director of the Polish Roman Catholic press agency before the war. He was wounded in the siege of Warsaw.

He escaped from Poland by fleeing from the hospital before complete recovery, made his way into Germany, then into Italy, and finally to London. He came to the United States by plane and will return to England in two weeks by bomber.

DR. JAN MASARYK TO DISCUSS WAR ON N. U. PROGRAM

Dr. Jan Masaryk, vice premier and foreign minister of the Czecho-Slovakian government in London, will speak on the Northwestern Reviewing Stand program from 10 to 10:30 a. m. today on W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Professors Franklin Scott and John Eberhart of Northwestern university also will participate in a discussion of economic, political, and moral issues involved in winning the war.

After analyzing war issues and endeavoring to interpret the four freedoms and the Atlantic charter to establish a definite point of view by the people of the United States toward smaller nations, the speakers will attempt to find a name for the war.

Parker Wheatley, radio director of Northwestern university, is moderator of the Reviewing stand. The W-G-N main audience studio will be filled for the broadcast by a group of treasury volunteer workers.

SEIZURE OF GREAT INDUSTRIAL KEY NEAR, REDS CLAIM

Mass at Dnepropetrovsk; Gain Against Finns.

KUIBYSHEV, Russia, April 18 (AP).—Russian military dispatches tonight declared that "the hour is near" for recapture of Dnepropetrovsk, great industrial center at the Dnieper bend in the Ukraine, and said a key zone of Finnish resistance had been won in a two day battle on the Karelian front northeast of Leningrad.

In addition, the Russians reported smashing into German defense positions on the central front west of Moscow where, the army newspaper Red Star said, Nazi commanders had thrown artillery reserves into action as improvised infantry.

Tass, the Russian news agency, said that in the break deep into Finnish defenses the Red army advanced several miles, capturing several settlements and killing 1,000 Finns.

(A Moscow broadcast heard in London said the Red army had made gains on both sides of Leningrad. The broadcast said Russian forces took key villages and cut the Chudova-Novgorod rail line some 60 miles southeast of the big Russian port.)

Ready for Big Attack.

Dispatches from the southern front where Russian troops were drawn up for a major test of the Nazi defenses of Dnepropetrovsk, which the Germans have held since Aug. 26, said guerrillas blew up the German staff headquarters there, killing 100 officers.

A report from Smolensk province, said guerrilla forces killed 11,00 Germans, including five generals, there in the last nine months.

The Germans were said to have been beaten back in attacks on the Bryansk front southwest of Moscow.

Germans Claim Gains.

BERLIN, April 18 [from German broadcasts]—(AP).—German attacks in central and northern sectors of the Russian front have been successful and the Nazi air force has sunk a 7,000 ton freighter in the Black sea, the high command said today.

"In the destruction of an enemy fighting group reported in the communique of April 16, part of the 33d Russian army was cut off and, in fighting lasting several days, 45 localities and about 1,000 firing points were taken in the face of tough enemy resistance," it was declared.

The Red air force was declared to have lost 872 planes in the period from March 21 to April 10.

Report Nazi Marshal Ousted.

LONDON, April 18 (AP).—Reports reaching London tonight said Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb, Nazi commander on the Leningrad front, has been relieved of his post. His successor was said to be Col. Gen. Georg von Kuechlen.

LEND-LEASE TOTALS FOR RUSSIA INCREASES; AMOUNT KEPT SECRET

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—The White House today reported a sharp increase of lend-lease aid to Russia, saying that two and a half times as much was sent in March as in February.

Exact figures on Russian aid, which President Roosevelt ordered accelerated several weeks ago, were not disclosed, but Stephen Early, White House secretary, said the report showed "very favorable progress."

The monthly report showed that lend-lease aid to all united nations passed the 3 billion dollar mark by the end of March, an increase of 1 billion dollars in two months. Total aid to the united nations during March amounted to nearly 600 million dollars.

Pope Asks World to Pray for Peace Next Month

BERNE, Switzerland, April 18 (AP).—Pope Pius XII. asked today, in a letter to Cardinal Maglione, papal secretary of state, that May be devoted to prayers for peace in all the world, the Swiss Telegraph agency reported. The pope asked particularly that children join in the prayer, and said: "The peace which we desire ardently is a true peace—a peace stable and durable and nourished and inspired by the principles of justice and charity."

PETAIN RETAINS RULE AS LAVAL'S REGIME IS NAMED

Pro-Nazi Gives Himself 4 High Cabinet Posts.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VICHY, France, April 18.—Europe's newest political epic was concluded today when proaxis Pierre Laval presented his new cabinet of 22 members to Chief of State Marshal Petain. Altho Laval had organized the new régime on a proaxis basis and retained four important ministerial offices for himself, he left the final authority of France in the hands of the aged marshal, to whom he agreed to submit his programs for approval.

As chief of the government, Laval will have control of all policies except those of the armed forces. In the decree in which he brought Laval back to power, Petain put his heir apparent and former vice premier, Adm. Jean Darlan, in complete command of all land, sea, and air forces, responsible only to him.

Laval, in addition to being chief of the government, will retain the portfolios of the ministries of foreign affairs, information, and the interior, which controls the police of the nation. Thus it transpires that almost exactly 16 months after he was dismissed as vice premier, Laval comes back to shape France's destinies, as he had proposed to do when he was swept from office.

Only Five Officials Retained.

This time it was Laval who did the purging, sponging the slate clean of all but five of Petain's cabinet ministers and secretaries.

Defining Laval's functions as chief of the government, an official communique tonight said he "will serve in that post under the high authority of the chief of state [Petain], to whom he will be responsible and to whom he will render account of his undertakings and his acts. It falls upon him, therefore, to present the ministers for approval of the chief of state," adding:

"He will assume the effective direction of the external and interior policies of France. He will, in addition, assume personally the functions of minister of interior and foreign affairs and minister of information."

Tomorrow Petain is expected to broadcast to the nation, explaining the cabinet shakeup and perhaps indicating the policy of the new government. On Monday Laval again will present his cabinet to Petain and preside over its first meeting.

Five Minutes in Inner Cabinet.

The new inner cabinet will consist of Laval and five ministers, two of whom are holdovers. Petain won a significant point by retaining Lucien Romier, his minister of state without portfolio, and Joseph Barthelemy, minister of justice.

The three other members of the inner circle are old friends of Laval: Pierre Cathala, a previous government associate of Laval, finance; Jacques Leroy-Ladurie, agriculture, and Abel Bonnard, a member of the French academy and a longtime collaborationist, education.

Aside from the five inner ministers, Laval will have 15 other assistants as secretaries. Seven are intimate collaborators of Laval and as secretaries of state are expected to help him plan his foreign policy. They include such outstanding collaborationists as Count Fernand de Brinon and Jacques Benoist-Mechin, Vichy representatives to the German military administration in Paris; Georges Hilaire and Robert Bousquet, two young departmental prefects who will direct activities of the interior ministry; Paul Marion, held over as information and censorship director, and Jacques Bernaud, who has been a general delegate for Franco-German collaboration.

Other Officials Named.

Other attachés of Laval's ministries will be Adm. Rene Platon, Petain's colonial minister, and Jacques Guerard, one-time foreign minister and later a Petain minister of state.

The remaining state secretaries are: Colonies, Jules Brevie; war, Gen. Eugene Bridoux; navy, Vice Adm. Paul Auphan; agriculture and food supply, Max Bonnafous; labor, Hubert de Legardelle; communications, Robert Gibrat, and health, Dr. Raymond Grasset.

Jean Borotra, famous tennis player known as the "Bounding Basque," was replaced as sports commissioner by Col. M. Pascot.

Leahy Prepares to Leave.

Altho the tendency of the government, as indicated by its membership, is toward collaboration, it was less pronounced than might have been expected on a basis of reactions abroad when Laval's return became known. Some circles said Laval's cabinet might indicate a wish to collaborate with Germany, but avoid any difficulties with the United States.

However, Adm. William D. Leahy, American ambassador, continued his preparations to leave Vichy. He was recalled to Washington, D. C., for consultation when Laval was raised to power.

At the same time, there was a report of a new outbreak of violence in the occupied zone. German authorities announced an 8 p. m. curfew and reprisals against the Pas de Calais department's population because hand grenades were thrown into a German office in Arras on April 15.

Deal on French Forces Reported.

LONDON, April 18 (AP).—Reuters news agency tonight heard the Moscow radio broadcast a Tass agency dispatch from Geneva saying that an agreement had been reported reached providing for German control of all French armed forces. The report added:

"The agreement also provides for the transfer to the German naval command of three French battleships, six ships of various classes, one aircraft carrier, nine flotilla leaders, 10 destroyers, and a certain number of damaged ships which are to be repaired."

The German controled Paris radio announced that Rear Adm. Collinet had taken command of the navy in French West Africa and would act as delegate of the Vichy admiralty at Dakar. Adm. Collinet was in command of the battleship Strasbourg when the British attacked the French fleet at Oran and Mers-el-Kebir, Algeria in 1940.

Envoy to Argentina Quits.

BUEONS AIRES, Argentina, April 18 (AP).—French Ambassador Marcel Peyrouton today disclosed he had asked Marshal Petain to be relieved of his post.

Regarded as personally hostile to Pierre Laval, he explained that he regarded the maintenance of friendly relations between France and the United States important. He formerly was Petain's minister of interior.

Mary I. Burns, 31 years old, 7407 Eberhart avenue, a nurse employed by the Veterans' hospital in the Bronx, New York City, was found dead early yesterday in her bed in her hospital room. She left Chicago three weeks ago. Authorities said she evidently committed suicide from an overdose of a poisonous drink.

Warns Premier He Must 'Start from Zero.'

BERNE, Switzerland, April 18.—That Germany looks upon all that happened in Vichy today as mere formalities is made evident by dispatches received here. The Wilhelmstrasse says simply: "M. Laval fully realizes that he must begin from zero."

In the German view, everything that has been done in Vichy since Pierre Laval was deposed on Dec. 13, 1940, does not count. The Wilhelmstrasse suggests, therefore, that the "national revolution," which was so dear to Marshal Petain is to be scrapped and replaced by "deep social reforms" and "a radical renewal of administrative services."

The German foreign office statement says:

"In commenting on the reconstruction of the French government, the Wilhelmstrasse expresses the opinion that the assumption of the premiership by M. Laval will unquestionably be welcomed by the French people.

"Understands New Order."

"During his first term in office after the armistice, M. Laval not only manifested complete understanding of the new order in Europe, but also made known his antagonism to communism, which resulted in an attempt on his life. In view of this attitude German quarters are not opposed to his return to office.

"The Wilhelmstrasse believes that M. Laval can have no illusions as to the fact that he must begin at the zero point and that he is faced by momentous problems. It is assumed in German quarters that France will expect of M. Laval, who rose from the common people, the initiation of far reaching social reforms and a radical overhaul of administrative organisms, especially with reference to the agencies of production and supply.

"Won't Stand in Way."

"In the execution of these reforms Germany will not stand in the way of the new premier, since it considers that the recovery of French national life can only promote the attainment of the new order in Europe.

"In this connection attention is directed also to the positive attitude taken by many Germans toward the person of M. Laval. From a foreign political point of view, the success of the new premier will be determined also by the relations of his government with those powers pledged to the new European order.

"The policy of Montoire [the place where Marshal Petain met Adolf Hitler in October, 1940] is not dead if the new France is prepared to revitalize it."

Foreign analysts here underline the fact that this document professes to express French opinion, or at least to suggest the direction it should take. But they learn that it has not yet been mentioned officially in Vichy, and the question is asked: will it be made public?

NAVY SETS UP SCHOOL TO TRAIN CHAPLAINS; 18 IN FIRST CLASS

Norfolk, Va., April 18 (AP).—A school for chaplains, the first of its kind in naval history, has been started here.

Expansion of the navy and the marine corps made the school necessary, and its students are clerics from various denominations who have been commissioned recently in the naval reserve. The course extends two months. The first class has only 18 members, but an average of 30 is expected for the next six months.

In addition to studying the "navy way," the men are put thru physical training to fit them for assignments with fleet units.

GEN. DE GAULLE URGES FIGHT ON VICHY 'TRAITORS'

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the "Free French" movement, in a broadcast from London yesterday, declared that "France must fight relentlessly against the men of Vichy and the enemy. We must drive them out and sabotage them. National revolt only will win."

He warned the peoples of occupied and unoccupied France that the government by placing Pierre Laval in power brought to office "men with hands more firm and more foul."

"Hitler seems to have ordered changes in the traitors in Vichy," a translator quoted the general as saying. But, he added, "the French people are beginning to show Hitler that he was mistaken when he thought he could crush France."

NEW DEAL DEFIES HOUSE, HOLDS UP MONEY FOR DIES

Probers Unpaid, Fascist, Red Inquiries Stalled.

probably be given $100,000 at first and more later if they need it." Dies had asked for $300,000 to carry on the investigation until next January.

It was learned that the Professional Workers of America, a CIO organization, has initiated a "canned campaign" to support Cochran in his position. Thousands of letters have been sent out, urging that telegrams and messages be sent Cochran, encouraging him to persist in his refusal to grant funds to the Dies committee. A sample letter was inclosed to be sent Cochran if the sender does not wish to compose his own.

Issue Is Money, Not Aims.

In his letter to Cochran, Dies noted that critics of his committee sought to raise the same objections to the investigation which they made in a futile effort to prevent extension of the inquiry by the house.

"If your committee permits a reiteration of these false charges, which the house repudiated by an overwhelming vote, I will of course answer them immediately upon my return if any further answer is necessary," Dies wrote. "It would seem to me that the question before your committee is the amount of money which you should recommend to the house for the committee's working during the remainder of the year."

Dies recalled to Cochran that the committee's records, files, and evidence are used by other government agencies on an extensive scale. More than 1,100 requests for information by such agencies have been complied with, he said.

Fought Out in the House.

"I realize, of course," he wrote Cochran, "that there is a concerted plan to sabotage the committee with lies and misrepresentations and by giving us funds wholly inadequate to accomplish the results which we are expected to produce. One would think that having fought the issue out on the floor of the house and having obtained a decisive verdict of approval, the vicious attacks against us would cease until next January, but evidently this is not to be the case.

"A small but vociferous minority, supported by officials who fear an honest and frank disclosure of the truth, is determined to harass the committee at every turn.

Expose Will Continue.

"As long as I am a member of the house I shall continue to expose high ranking government officials who have been affiliated with subversive organizations. If the house does not want me to do this, it can amend the resolution under which our committee operates to prevent the exposure of these people. Until this action is taken, I consider it my solemn duty to proceed without fear to give the people and the congress the full facts.

"I trust that your committee will see fit to give us ample funds to continue our work in compliance with the mandate of congress and the country."

VFW PRESENTS GOLD STARS TO TWO MOTHERS

Two Chicago mothers whose sons were reported killed while serving in the armed forces recently received gold stars in ceremonies held by the William G. Murray Electric post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars last night in the hall at 7938 Halsted street.

The mothers are Mrs. Mary Callahan of 8956 Aberdeen street, whose son, Corp. Thomas J. Callahan, was killed by a rifle bullet in Alaska, and Mrs. Grace Philpot of 7701 Stewart avenue. The latter's son, Lawrence Cripps, 16 years old, was reported killed in action with the naval forces in the far western Pacific.

Earl Southard, commander of the Veterans, presented the stars. Neil J. Linehan, assistant to the commander, was in charge of ceremonies.

FOUND WITH RAT POISON, DIES.

Mrs. Ruth I. Howard, 29 years old, died in County hospital yesterday after she was found unconscious in her room, 804 East 53d street, with a bottle of rat poison at her side.

CHARGE "FEEBLE WHITEWASH" OF NUDIST OFFICIAL

Report of FBI Hit by Dies Probers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—Controversy tonight veered about alleged subversive connections of employés of the Board of Economic Warfare exposed by Rep. Martin Dies [D., Tex.], chairman of the special house committee investigating un-American activities.

Rep. Thomas H. Eliot [D., Mass.], grandson of the creator of the famous five foot book shelf, and foe of the Dies committee, declared nine employés of the board, which is headed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace, had been cleared by an FBI investigation.

New Disclosures Hinted.

Altho Dies was in Texas and could not be reached to answer the Eliot allegations, committee investigators indicated that the board employés are far from cleared of "subversive connections" and that new disclosures are to come.

Eliot made public a letter from Milo Perkins, executive director of the board, which said that there was nothing in FBI reports to warrant "administrative action by the board in connection with alleged subversive activities." Dies committee investigators challenged this statement as open to a difference of opinion.

Claim Nudist Exonerated.

Among those Perkins said were cleared were C. Hartley Grattan, who was revealed as the author of a preface to the German white paper" on Poland, which criticized the administration's foreign policy, and Maurice Parmelee, author of a book of nudism. Dies investigators recalled that Grattan resigned after his connection with the German propaganda was disclosed and added that Parmelee is on the verge of resigning.

Investigators described the Eliot statement as a feeble attempt to "whitewash a very dirty situation."

100 LEADERS IN BOYS' CLUB TAKE EXAMS--- SO THEY CAN RUN CITY

More than a hundred boys from Chicago boys' clubs met in the Sherman hotel yesterday to take a competitive civic examination. The winners, under the sponsorship of the Junior Association of Commerce, will be appointed to take over seven key governmental positions for two hours on Wednesday as a feature of Chicago Youth week, beginning tomorrow.

Positions to which the boys will be appointed are those of mayor, police commissioner, corporation counsel, fire marshal, fire prevention chief, health commissioner, and chief justice of the municipal court.

The boys' clubs represented included the Albany Park Boys' club, the Blackhawk Club for Boys, Chicago Boys' Clubs, Inc., Neighborhood Boys' club, Northside Boys' club, Union League Foundation for Boys' clubs, Young Men's Jewish council, Off-the-Street club, Halsted Street Institutional church, Catholic Youth organization, and Boys' Brotherhood Republic.

CAPTAIN SEIZES 3 AND DISPERSES 25 IN BOOKIE RAID

Capt. Thomas J. Duffy of the Central station yesterday raided an alleged handbook on the fourth floor at 180 West Randolph street and arrested three men. Twenty-five patrons were ordered to leave.

Capt. Duffy reported that the telephone in the place was an extension of a phone listed for a room at 175 North Wells street which was raided as a handbook two months ago. He said that the location on Randolph street was apparently a sneak spot for the original handbook parlor.

Those arrested gave their names and addresses as: Sam Gross, 45 years old, 934 Cuyler avenue; Abe Cooper, 51, of 3653 Leland avenue, and Paul Kaufman, 33, 4131 Sheridan road.

Hitler 53, So 1,000,000 Join Youth Movement

BERLIN, April 18 [from German broadcasts]—(AP).—Nearly 1,000,000 German boys and girls will join the Hitler youth movement tomorrow in solemn ceremonies commemorating the 53d birthday anniversary on Monday of Adolf Hitler.

YANKS WILL JOIN RAIDS ON NAZIS, MARSHALL SAYS

Chief of Staff Inspects AEF in Ireland.

Lord Mountbatten.

WITH THE UNITED STATES ARMY IN NORTHERN IRELAND, April 18 (AP).—Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States army, declared today "the time for action is near" and said that American troops "inevitably will join the commandos," the British shock force which has been raiding the German held continent.

Further forecasting offensive action, he told a press conference that United States air forces will be established in bases "all over the British Isles."

Gen. Marshall said he had conferred at length in London with Lord Louis Mountbatten, chief of the British commandos, as well as with Prime Minister Winston Churchill, and other British service chiefs.

Cites U. S. Training.

He pointed out that the United States army has long trained an entire army corps in land coöperation such as the recent British dash to St. Nazaire, Nazi submarine base on the Brittany coast, and against other important Nazi coastal installation in both France and Norway.

Gen. Marshall flew here Friday with two of President Roosevelt's closest advisers, Harry Hopkins and W. Averell Harriman, after 10 days of "the most intimate and satisfactory" discussions with the British leaders.

He made a speedy inspection tour and review of the bulk of the United States troops here and then told officers that these men are but the first of a "steady flow."

Gen. Marshall told the unit commanders that he was "very much impressed with the apparent state of discipline and the evidence of strenuous training" of the American forces.

Predicts Tough Fight.

Speaking to the same assembly of officers, Hopkins said that production alone would not win the war and that he had "a deepseated belief that in the final analysis, the battle is going to be with our land forces fighting the Japanese and Germans."

"It is going to be a tough business, for our enemies are tough fighters," said Hopkins.

Hopkins congratulated the officers on the men chosen to head the Northern Ireland command—Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle and his chief of staff, Col. Edmund H. Leavey, former deputy WPA administrator in New York.

CANADA TROOPS OVERSEAS VOTE ON DRAFT ISSUE

Nation Seeks Release from Pledge.

BY GEORGE SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., April 18.—The first Canadians to cast their ballots in the dominion's "conscription" plebiscite, members of the armed forces in four countries thousands of miles away, began voting this week in advance polls.

The question they are answering, and which all Canadians will answer in a nation-wide vote April 27, is: "Are you in favor of releasing the government from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

Quebec May Reject Plan.

The government promised not to conscript men for overseas service and now wishes to be relieved of its pledge. All the provinces outside of Quebec are expected to provide affirmative majorities, but from French Canada a negative majority is expected. French Canadian ministers in the federal cabinet commenced last week appealing by press and radio to Quebec to cast "yes" votes.

Municipal councils all over the country are passing resolutions urging "yes" votes on the issue, and the Ontario legislature this week passed a similar resolution despite, it is said, the plea of a deputation of French Canadian ministers to Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn urging him to bar a plebiscite resolution vote in this provincial parliament.

Hint Gasoline Curtailment.

As Canada prepares for the vote which may ultimately render every able bodied Canadian liable to overseas war service, it received notification from Elliott M. Little, director of national selective service, that the dominion may have "labor rationing." As the war effort intensifies, he told a Canadian press luncheon group, it may become necessary to allot each employer only such men as can be spared to meet his essential needs.

From Munitions Minister C. D. Howe came intimation in the form of a public statement that thousands of Canadians enjoying preferred rating in the government's gasoline rationing scheme are to have their gasoline supply further curtailed.

From Transit Controler George S. Gray came a plea to motorists to utilize a "pooled" car arrangement between neighbors. Instead of five business men using five automobiles to get to their places of business, they are asked to use one automobile. Transportation, declared Gray, "has become a national problem."

MEXICO OFFERS $23,995,991 FOR SEIZED OIL LANDS

Sum Fixed by Joint Board; U. S. Companies Silent.

Washington, D. C., April 18 [Special].—The Mexican government is willing to pay $23,995,991 to the United States in full settlement for American owned oil properties expropriated in 1938, the state department announced tonight.

This valuation on the expropriated properties has been fixed by a joint Mexican-American commission which has been at work for several months in an effort to settle the long standing dispute. The American companies valued their properties at from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000, while the Mexican government has contended they were worth no more than $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

The findings of the joint commission are not binding upon the oil companies, it was said, and there was no immediate word concerning the attitude of the companies. It was stated, however, that the commission's report, which provided for payment of one-third of the sum on July 1, 1942, and the balance in five annual instalments, has the complete approval of the Mexican government.

Executives Laud Findings.

Copies of an exchange of telegrams between President Roosevelt and President Avila Camacho of Mexico, praising the agreement, were released by the state department.

President Camacho asserted the agreement carried with it "a definite settlement of the so-called 'petroleum question,'" and described it as "confirmation of the attitude of my government in its desire to grant ample guarantees to the participation of private capital, national or foreign, in the exploitation and development of the material resources of this republic."

Mr. Roosevelt replied that Mexico and the United States "once again have given a demonstration to the world that the most difficult international problems can be solved satisfactorily when approached with good will and in a spirit of fair play."

Sinclair Claims Settled.

The joint commission's valuation is exclusive of claims of the Sinclair oil interests, which made a direct settlement with the Mexican government in 1940 for $8,500,000. The agreement provides that the government of Mexico and each of the claimants shall release each other of all claims except those of the Mexican government against the companies for unpaid taxes and duties.

Mexico is to make its payments direct to the United States government, to which the American companies must surrender all documents and instruments of title to the expropriated properties before receiving their shares.

Allocations of the $23,995,991 among the various claimants were made as follows: Standard Oil of New Jersey group, $18,391,641; Standard Oil of California group, $3,589,158; Consolidated Oil company, $630,151; Sabalo group, $897,671; Seaboard group, $487,370.

Seizure Date Celebrated.

A decree by the then president of Mexico, Lazaro Cardenas, resulted in the seizure by the Mexican government of all foreign owned oil properties on March 18, 1938—a date which Mexico since has celebrated in a holiday spirit with parades of school children and workers, barbecues, and street dances.

The foreign owned oil industry at the time of the expropriation was regarded as a $400,000,000 industry. The Mexican department of industry in 1929 had placed upon it a valuation of 1,038,943,000 pesos, or $499,429,000. In 1930 the Mexican ministry of economy said the foreign oil properties were worth more than $400,000,000.

The oil companies fought the expropriation in the Mexican courts, which upheld the law under which President Cardenas acted. The courts held the companies had no property rights in oil under the ground.

Great Britain protested the seizure so vigorously that diplomatic relations between the two countries were severed. Protests by the United States government were mild, but nevertheless led to strained relations between the American and Mexican governments. Two demands by the American government for arbitration were rejected. Articles critical of the American attitude appeared in the Mexican press.

The arrangement between the two nations for appointment of a joint commission was announced last November. In the previous two years, Germany and Japan made strong efforts to obtain rights to the Mexican petroleum output. Mexican oil exports to Germany, in the first 10 months after expropriation, rose to 5,140,000 barrels, compared with 1,990,000 barrels in a similar period the year before. Most of this oil was sold to Germany on a barter basis.

In the same period, American imports dropped from 5,400,000 barrels to 2,079,000 barrels, while British imports sank from 4,250,000 barrels to 14,000 barrels.

They'll Separate

Perc Westmore and Juliette Novis Westmore after their marriage in June of last year.

Hollywood, Cal., April 18 (AP).—Perc Westmore said today that the June [1941] bride he glamorized with his makeup artistry, Juliette Novis Westmore, prefers New York and a bid for fame as a concert singer to marriage with him. So, the movie makeup man added, his third marriage will end as did his previous two, in divorce. Virginia Thomas was his first wife; Actress Gloria Dickson his second. Juliette formerly was married to Donald Novis, also a singer.

BROOKS TO OFFER WAR RESOLUTION FOR G. O. P. BODY

Committee to Take Stand, Martin Indicates.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Congressman Joseph W. Martin Jr., chairman of the Republican national committee, manifested his confidence on his arrival in Chicago yesterday that the committee in its session here tomorrow will make known its attitude on the war in a forceful, unmistakable manner. He also indicated his certainty that the declaration will be agreed upon with no dissension among the members.

Whether the expression of the committee's views will be in the form of a statement or in resolutions will not be determined until the executive sessions start. But it became apparent that several sets of resolutions will be offered and they may be sent to a subcommittee for a decision upon the final text to be considered by the committee as a whole.

Sen. Wayland Brooks of Illinois, who received a tremendous vote of confidence in his renomination last Tuesday, returned from Washington yesterday. As he fathered the war plank accepted by the Philadelphia national convention of 1940, he was requested to draft a resolution covering the present world situation and this will be introduced by Werner W. Schroeder, committeeman for Illinois.

Another proposal will be submitted by Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio, preconvention candidate for President in 1940, who will participate in all sessions as the representative of his home state. He will hold the proxy of Committeeman David S. Ingalls.

War Is First, Martin Says.

Clarence Budington Kelland of Arizona, executive director for the committee, who passed thru Chicago Friday en route to Denver and will be back for the sessions tomorrow, also has outlined some tenets that probably he will introduce. In addition several other resolutions, including one that Wendell L. Willkie is said to be drafting, also will be introduced.

Chairman Martin said that the Republican party has subordinated everything to win the war and will continue to do so until victory is achieved.

"No other President in history has had such support from the opposition party, and history will prove it," he said.

"At the same time elections must be held and it is necessary for the Republican party to campaign. One of the questions we shall discuss will be how we can conduct the campaign without interference with the war effort."

Full Consideration for Views.

He replied to questions about the prospects of Republican success next November by saying that it was too early for predictions and that much depends on events of the war and other contingencies.

"But there will be a much greater Republican vote," he said. "Your Illinois primary showed plainly that we are on the upgrade."

Chairman Martin, in talking about the probability of the committee's taking a position with reference to the war, said that it would be impossible for any great party to meet without seeking to offer some stimulus to a vigorous prosecution of the war. He said he had no information concerning any of the proposed resolutions, those from Willkie or any other source.

"Naturally," he said, "any resolutions presented will be cheerfully received and given full consideration."

SPEAK STRONGLY ON WAR, DEMAND G. O. P. WOMEN

Assert Two Party System Is Vital to Democracy.

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

Women members of the Republican national committee who arrived here early yesterday for the national committee meeting tomorrow in the La Salle hotel said they are emphatically in favor of passing a forceful resolution concerning the party's attitude on the war effort.

Several criticized the administration's prosecution of the war and looked with disfavor on adjournment of politics for the duration. All held that elections during wartime maintained the two party system as the foundation of the democratic form of government. Their remarks:

Mrs. Grace B. Reynolds of Cambridge City, Ind.—We women are anxious that the war be prosecuted as quickly as possible and that every sacrifice be made to end it favorably. There has been mismanagement by the administration and it is important that the Republican minority point out these mistakes and offer suggestions. Now more than ever we need an election to maintain the two party system."

Mrs. Ralph A. Harris of Ottawa, Kas.—I agree with Joseph W. Martin Jr., chairman of the national committee, that a resolution expressing the forceful attitude of the Republican party on the war be passed at the coming meeting. I was pleased with the returns in the Illinois primaries and believe that they show a definite Republican trend.

Mrs. Katherine Kennedy Brown of Dayton, O.—The coming election cannot in any way impair the war effort. It will have quite the reverse results and carry on the American way of life. As Lincoln said in the Civil war, elections during wartime are a test of democracy. We settle our differences in America by ballots not bullets. Any adjournment of politics now would be a great mistake.

Mrs. Chris Carlson of Blue Earth, Minn.—The war effort has been bungled and mismanaged terribly by the administration. The whole mood of the administration has been political. Every appointment to a key position has proven that. The Republican party must come forward with a definite all-out attitude and campaign for its place in the war effort. The most important thing at the present time is the successful prosecution of the war and the second most important issue is the coming elections. We can lose democracy by adjourning the two party system.

Mrs. E. L. Moulton of Albuquerque, N. M.—I believe in coming out for all aid to the war effort and in speeding up production of supplies. The delays on the part of the administration have been disappointing altho there is a great spirit of coöperation between the Democrats and Republicans in our state. We must continue to work for our party to prevent dictatorship, but we must work together for the successful culmination of the war.

Mrs. V. E. Stenersen of Minot, N. D.—We Republicans want an all-out attitude on this war. We are sending our boys into service and we want them equipped. In North Dakota we have not large defense industries, but we are doing all we can to feed and clothe the army. Politics should not be adjourned because the Republican minority is strictly American and has a contribution to make to the prosecution of the war. Its advice should be heeded.

WILLKIE SUPPORTERS IN NEW YORK OFFER ANTI-DEWEY TICKET

Albany, N. Y., April 18 [Special].—The first open move in opposition to control of the Republican party in the state by the forces supporting Thomas E. Dewey for governor was taken today. It emanated within the New York State Association of Young Republican clubs, where a group announced an anti-isolationist ticket to oppose the organization's nominees in the Young Republican organization.

The group launching the move is known to follow the lead of Wendell Willkie. Whether today's move had Willkie's approval could not be learned. Political observers, however, considered the anti-Dewey group's intent unmistakable. Two years ago, at a similar Young Republican convention, supporters of the late Kenneth F. Simpson, a political foe of Dewey, did their best to destroy unanimity for the Dewey presidential nomination.

The group today announced the candidacy of Edward Wright of Brooklyn for the organization's president and Bryce Barden of Penn Yan for national representative. Wright will oppose Gene Martin of Buffalo and Barden will run against William Kiley of Oneida for representative.

R. J. Reynolds, Democratic Treasurer, to Enter Navy

Winston-Salem, N. C., April 18.—Richard J. Reynolds, treasurer of the national Democratic executive committee and mayor of Winston-Salem, announced in a radio address last night that he had obtained leave of absence from his duties and had been accepted for service in the navy.

WE'RE GOING BACK TO BATAAN!

AN ADMIRAL WHO TALKS IN HIS SLEEP.

About ten days ago, Rear. Adm. Clark H. Woodward, retired, came out to Chicago to lecture the central and midwestern states out of what he regarded as their complacency. He announced that the "United States has been engaged in total war for more than four months," and added that "surprising as it may seem, this fact is not yet realized by the people of this part of the country."

Where did he get the idea that we needed him to tell us that we were at war? This section is completely aware not only that our country is at war, but that America is in peril. And we are doing what it takes. Enlistments in the armed services have lagged in the part of the country that Woodward hails from, but not in the central west. Crippling strikes in the east and in the far west have endangered the production of defense matériels since Pearl Harbor, but not in this part of the country. The government has found it necessary to take over and operate plants in which employers and employés could not subordinate their differences to the national welfare, but none of those plants was around here. If the admiral has observed any lethargy about the war, it must have been in Brooklyn where, until he was retired, he had his headquarters as commandant of the 3d naval district.

This high naval officer told his Chicago audience that "many have elaborated on the fighting ability of Americans, without giving serious thought to what steps are necessary to bring such results about."

Of no one could this have been better said than of Adm. Woodward himself. On Nov. 13, 1940, the admiral made a speech in New York at the Academy of Political Science. He gave a very optimistic account of our naval strength. He asserted that we then possessed "the greatest, most powerful, and most effective navy of any single nation on earth. When I say that I mean not tomorrow, or next year, but today." He referred to the naval vessels which were being built and asserted that upon completion "we will be well prepared to take and retain command of the sea in its fullest meaning." [Note that he would do this with ships of the sea.]

Following him on the program in New York was an army air corps officer, Col. Robert C. Candee, who described how the Germans had used aircraft in defeating France. When the army colonel had finished the old sea dog who lectured us the other day arose to present the claim of the warship against the airplane. With great heat he declared that airplanes cannot sink battleships. He continued:

"As far as the aircraft are concerned they have done no severe damage to battleships or armored cruisers. They have sunk a few torpedo boats and done some damage to the upper works, but the decks of battleships are constructed to resist 16 inch armor piercing shells and, therefore, are automatically protected against any bomb that is used today or that will be used in the near future.

"So the battleships are not worried. Do not misunderstand me; we do think that the air arm is a very efficient and very necessary adjunct, but it is only an adjunct to the navy and it can be nothing else. Airships can never win a war; they can never win a battle. They can help and go out to protect the army, or be an advance guard for the navy; but they can never win a war or win a battle. Their very nature prevents that. They cannot go out in storms. They cannot go out in a fog. They cannot go out in the night and do any damage to a fleet that is maneuvering without lights, as we always do at night. They cannot even find us."

This was as much as Adm. Woodward knew about modern warfare near the end of his active service in the navy, and only a year before Pearl Harbor. A few days after he made his speech in New York the news came out that two days earlier the British, by skilful use of airplanes, had destroyed at Taranto 3 Italian battleships, 2 cruisers, and a large number of destroyers. Six months after the admiral's New York speech the Bismarck, the most powerful battleship afloat, was so badly crippled by a British warplane that it could not be maneuvered and was quickly disposed of by surface craft. Soon the Japanese with planes were to dispose of two of our battleships, the Arizona and Oklahoma, at Pearl Harbor, and two British battleships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, off the Java coast. Meanwhile an American flyer, the immortal Colin Kelly, knocked out a Jap battleship singlehanded. Other American flyers took care of another battleship. And this does not exhaust the list of recent successes of the plane over the warship.

Adm. Woodward, who insisted that the warships were invincible against aircraft, does not have to worry about the middle west's lack of awareness of the nature and scope of this awful war. But we of this part of the country have reason to be alarmed lest there be still in important places in the navy admirals who were so badly informed about even the weapons of modern war as Woodward revealed himself to be only a short time ago.

THEY SAID WE COULDN'T DO WITHOUT IT.

Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt has demonstrated that the physical fitness division which he inherited from the Office of Civilian Defense could have been appropriately titled the Office of Dispensable Civilians. With a stroke of his pen he has whittled this bureau down to five employés who will work on an annual budget of $9,000.

Only a few short weeks ago the nation was being told that this division was indispensable. It was the subject of all that hullabaloo about Mayris Chaney, who will be recalled dimly, if at all, as a dancer protégée of the President's wife. It was stocked with those 61 coördinators of code ball, bowling, weight lifting, etc.

When it was suggested that this boondoggle could be eliminated and that no one would miss it, Mrs. Roosevelt resigned as assistant director of the OCD, took to the radio and described the issue as "the age-old fight of the privileged few against the good of the many." At the same time Mr. John B. Kelly, the director of the physical fitness division, threatened to resign if he were not given a budget of a million dollars.

Mr. Kelly has now been demoted. Mr. McNutt, the Golden, or at least the Silver Boy of the New Deal, has assumed the directorship himself. Mr. Kelly had demanded 102 assistants, but he doesn't get to keep the 36 already on the pay roll. There will be four clerks in addition to himself. Instead of a million, the budget will be $9,000. And yet, somehow, the nation survives and Mr. Kelly hasn't even resigned.

The physical fitness division is only one of the numberless New Deal enterprises which was supposed to be indispensable. Its fate provides a useful illustration of how a tax wasting boondoggle can be stripped of the myth of indispensability. The stroke of a pen can do it in an instant and then the boondoggle is gone and forgotten, with no harm to any one except a few burocrats taking a free ride on the public treasury.

GRAFTERS AND SKULKERS FIND A FRIEND.

Mr. Archibald MacLeish as director of the Office of Facts and Figures was invited to address the American Society of Newspaper Editors which met in New York last week. He took the occasion to abuse the hospitality which had been offered him. He dared to tell the society that it harbored traitors among its members, men who were guilty of practicing "the most poisonous and pervasive defeatism."

There is not a newspaper of general circulation in the United States—and it was to the editors of such papers that Mr. MacLeish was speaking—which has been in the remotest sense disloyal or defeatist. Every newspaper worthy of the name has been critical of displays of incompetence, venality, and stupidity in Washington precisely because the editors, like their readers, want to win the war and don't want a lot of futile and venal men to delay the victory. Mr. MacLeish wishes the editors to believe that only ineffective criticism is loyal. If it stings sufficiently to force correction, it is treason.

The dunderheads, the slackers, and the war profiteers in the capital must have been rejoiced at Mr. MacLeish's speech in their behalf. They want the American press intimidated. If criticism can be silenced, the cowards and the grafters will have things their own way and the burocracy can be as stupid and inefficient as it chooses.

Mr. MacLeish knows that, and he knows also that the American press is vigilant in defense of our form of government. There are those who would use the war as an excuse to overthrow the Republic and replace it with something in the totalitarian pattern. The threat doesn't seem to disturb Mr. MacLeish. Presumably he and his friends are cheered at the prospect. That would go far to explain his and their ambition to destroy the independence of the press by terrorizing it.

The effort isn't going to succeed but it is perhaps just as well that Mr. MacLeish appeared before the society when he did to make plain to the members the kind of vermin they have to contend with.

PROSPECTS FOR TIRES.

The Ford Motor company has announced a new method of making tires which require only a sixteenth as much rubber as tires now in use. A specially treated fabric is the main ingredient.

The Goodrich company almost two years ago introduced commercially the first tire made of synthetic rubber, but with most of the synthetic rubber we are capable of producing in the next few years apparently destined for the war machine, the solution of our civilian tire needs may lie less in synthetic rubber than in some entirely new product such as that originated by Ford.

Reclaimed rubber also offers possibilities. Col. Maurice E. Barker, quoted in the Army Ordnance journal, states, "We have a great stock of used rubber. It is essentially the chemist's job to make greater use of reclaimed rubber by treating it to 'unvulcanize' it and to restore the molecules of the used rubber to their original state. For years we have played at this job—today we need dreamers and a flock of technicians to make new rubber from huge piles of used tires." Elliot E. Simpson, a New York rubber manufacturer, who estimated that there was at least 60 million tons of used rubber in the country, has produced tires made of reclaimed rubber for tests by the bureau of standards. He contends that tire manufacture can be continued without hindering the war effort, but admits that reclaimed rubber tires have a life of not more than 6,000 miles.

Meanwhile, the manufacture of synthetic rubber will eventually give rise to a great new industry. At present American production of synthetic rubber is about 25,000 tons a year, about equal to German production at the outbreak of the war. About 600 million dollars is being spent by the government on plant expansion, with the hope that by the end of this year production will be 90,000 tons, rising to 700,000 tons by the end of 1943.

John L. Collyer, president of Goodrich, terms these estimates unduly optimistic, asserting that it will be almost a miracle if production of synthetics in 1943 amounts to 300,000 tons. He does not see the goal of 700,000 tons achieved before 1945, two years later than Jesse Jones predicts that figure will be attained.

The return of peace will pose problems as to whether we are to continue the synthetic rubber industry being built up thru the necessities of war, or whether the government is to write off its investment. Commercial manufacturers of synthetic rubber maintain that while synthetics are better than rubber for some purposes, production is uneconomic. The average price of 20 or 25 cents a pound compares with prices for crude rubber which have on occasion gone as low as 3 cents, altho it will be recalled that the British-Dutch cartel once drove the price up to a dollar a pound.

Industry feels that because costs are excessive to private enterprise, the government will have to do the financing if we are to retain our new industry. Preservation of the synthetic rubber plants after the war would have the advantage of freeing us from dependence on the Malayan and East Indian supply sources, and also would protect us from being squeezed by any new price rigging. Perhaps we shall have so improved the synthetic product and cut its cost by the time peace returns that we can retain the industry without feeling that we are indulging in a luxury.

It seems that those Jap internees are to have about all the comforts of home except shortwave radios.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Counting a bomber's "near-miss" as a win for our side sounds like the Ladies' day crowd hailing a long foul.—Detroit News.

A NEW YORKER LOOKS AT BROOKS' VICTORY

BY GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY.

The article which follows appeared on Friday in the New York Sun, from which it is reprinted with permission:

The campaign against Sen. C. Wayland Brooks in Illinois was based on a single issue, namely, that prior to Dec. 7, 1941, he had been vociferously opposed to our entry into the war. There could be no other issue. There could be no question of Sen. Brooks' patriotism, for while many a current cake eater was a swivel chair general or something of that sort, Curly Brooks was getting himself wounded seven times in the last war as an enlisted soldier. He was promoted on the field from corporal to lieutenant. He holds the D. S. C. twice, once from the army and once from the navy. Such people do not make fifth or sixth or any kind of columnists. Love of country is in their bones and their blood. Nobody could call him a mouthpiece of Goebbels and get away with it.

Opposition to Brooks in the Illinois primaries arose not only from New Dealers who had no business trying to influence the vote in the opposition party, but from those Republicans who follow the general position of Wendell Willkie. The Chicago Daily News, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox's paper, opposed him; so did the Chicago Sun, which Marshall Field publishes in Chicago for just such purposes as the defeat of Brooks. Well, he was not defeated.

* * *

Certain facts stand out in this vote:

1. The middle west is not going to stand for any nonsense about holding it against a man that he was an isolationist or a noninterventionist, an America Firster, or anything like that prior to Dec. 7, and anybody who raises that issue is going to get his political fingers burnt. The American people are decent folks, without malice or vengeance in their souls, and they respect the right of an American to express his opinions and views on any question without let or hindrance.

2. Frank Knox's Republican leadership is repudiated.

3. Wendell Willkie's test, which he seeks to apply to the governorship in the state of New York in his effort to prevent Tom Dewey from being nominated to that office, is repudiated in the middle west. Nobody is going to hold anybody up for clearance from Willkie.

4. Brooks was never a weasel worder. What he wanted to say he said in clear, sidewalk English which even an intellectual could understand without any hair splitting. Therefore, had Brooks been repudiated at the primaries it would have indicated that a definite swing against the discussion of the conduct of the war had taken place even in the Republican party. Actually, the phenomenal vote that Brooks got shows beyond doubt that the conduct of the war is exactly what the voters want discussed. No one who knows him can doubt what kind of campaign Brooks will conduct or what he will say. No one who voted for Brooks had any doubts about that.

* * *

5. Let no one talk about how Col. Robert McCormick's support is the kiss of death. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is not like any other newspaper. Some newspapers are liked and others are disliked, but those who dislike THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE hate it, and they hate its publisher. In the Brooks campaign the haters had a chance to show what they amount to numerically, because THE TRIBUNE was rooting for Brooks on all fours. Apparently the combined opposition of Frank Knox and Marshall Field hardly amounted to anything.

So there we have had a test of how things are going—not one of those scientifically polled arrangements where the questions are asked so that it is impossible to answer them as you desire—but a good, old-fashioned American primary where the voter can, if he wants to, show exactly where he stands on current issues. And it shows that the Republican party is still the conservative party of America. It shows that Republicans are willing to take their chances on being conservative. It repudiates completely the New Yorkish Park avenue kind of politics which says that, if you want to save the country from revolution, you get inside of the revolution and buy it out. Out in the grass roots they can't—they just can't think about anything in so sneaky, so sleek a way.

NOTES FROM BRITAIN

BY LARRY RUE.

LONDON [By air mail].—American officers over here can buy uniforms without clothing coupons in the same way as do British officers, that is to say merely by signing a chit stating that their purchases are essential. West end tailors are preparing for big orders from American officers in Ulster and in Iceland. Some orders have been booked already by mail.

One London tailor who specializes in military uniforms has already made a number of uniforms for American officers, and charts showing the insignia of rank of all United States naval, military, and air forces are to be seen in tailoring establishments side by side with those of British officers, to say nothing of other national forces with headquarters in the British Isles.

Forty women, who will be guide, philosopher, and friend to other women industrial workers, who will be "hirers and firers" and see that people have the job they can do best, have just been selected by the ministry of labor for special training as personnel managers in war plants. They are undergoing three months' training at Cambridge, Liverpool, Edinburgh, and Birmingham.

These women will introduce women into industry, advise them and smooth over their difficulties. They must have a working knowledge of factory laws and the organization of the plant to which they are appointed. They also ease shopping, transport, and billeting difficulties, get part time working schemes going, and help to get nurseries for their workers' children. Heating, lighting, ventilation, first-aid, and medical care in factories, as well as recreational and keep-fit facilities, are also their concern.

The labor ministry is paying the university and traveling expenses of these trainees, and they receive 2 pounds 10 shillings [$10.00] a week during training. When they pass out they have to find their own job, and usually start at 5 pounds [$20.00] a week.

* * *

No less than 50,000 pounds [$200,000] has been realized at one of the latest London wine sales, at which ever increasing prices are being paid for choice vintages and rare liqueurs. The sale was that of wines and brandies from the cellars of John Christie, founder of the Glyndebourne [Surrey] music festival; also wines from the anonymous "cellars of a gentleman."

Dealers competed briskly for splendid hocks and Moselles which had been assembled by Christie as "the perfect wines to accompany the perfect music of Mozart" at the Opera house on the Surrey Downs near Lewes. Of the 1,200 dozens offered, the cheapest, a Forster Fleckinger Riesling 1936, sold at 260 shillings [$52] a dozen—$4.33 a bottle. Average prices were around 350-400 shillings [$70 to $80].

Four bottles of Cognac du Roi, Louis XVIII., 1820, were sold at 5 pounds [$20] a bottle. What is believed to be a record price, for England at least, was paid for 22 large bottles of Yellow Chartreuse at 1,360 shillings [$272] a dozen—£5 13s 4d [$22.65] a bottle.

* * *

Keen competition between government departments and private concerns for security agents to protect property and see that laws and regulations are obeyed in war plants is leading to big money being offered to retired Scotland Yard detectives. Wages up to 1,000 pounds [$4,000] a year—twice as much as most of them got at the Yard—are being offered to some crime experts, so that with their pensions they are quite well off.

SWELLING FROM TOO LITTLE PROTEIN.

STARVATION will cause the tissues of the body to swell. This means that water will accumulate under the skin whenever the blood stream is deprived of certain nutritional elements, particularly protein.

The condition is not new. Years ago it was called "starvation dropsy," "famine edema," and "hunger swelling." Many deaths followed this specific type of food deficiency. Ready victims included those who, from motives of piety, attempted to live on roots and herbs alone.

It was not until 1865, however, that the cause—the absence of protein from the diet—was clearly proved. In World War I., tens of thousands of inhabitants of the invaded areas, who were forced to exist on bread and thick soups—with large quantities of salt—were afflicted routinely.

While we are interested in this disorder with all classes of individuals, it comes to our attention more especially during pregnancy. Many women have the mistaken notion that if they restrict their meals, a small baby will insure an easy labor. This theory is wholly fallacious. The growing fetus will take from the mother's reserve whatever it desires.

Those who develop puffiness are quite likely to be confronted with anemia as a complication. Because of too little nourishment, including iron, the red coloring matter of the blood may drop quite too low for safety. In consequence, the circulation may not retain sufficient oxygen-carrying power to maintain good health.

A report from Charity hospital, New Orleans, includes 500 expectant mothers who presented symptoms of greater or lesser degree. The investigators, Arnell and Guerriero, point out that with some the menus were inadequate, while in other instances foods were destroyed by the system in some fashion or other. The complete upset of metabolism which followed resulted in the retention of water.

The mere taking of meat once a day will not suffice if vomiting is excessive. After each bout, the patient should be obliged to eat again unless hormones will stop the disturbance. Marked diarrhea may be responsible for a substantial loss, and discharges of this character must be controled. More often than not, adding hydrochloric acid—with an extra helping of beef or lamb—will bring relief.

We need not be disturbed by slight pitting of the skin over the ankles in late pregnancy. Most women, prior to delivery, will show this phenomenon. But this is not the tremendous "dropsy" which may be observed in the lower legs extending upward—even involving the abdomen.

In the series reported, the patients were quite well except for the manifestation under discussion. When weakness or labored breathing appeared, it was accounted for by the fact that the sufferer carried around gallons of useless fluid. Our authorities insist that the diet must contain sufficient meat and iron. Under this program, aided by vitamins, all of the cases proceeded to normal confinement.

Yes! Adequate protein can be obtained from peas, beans, etc., but the digestive tract will be confronted with a job somewhat more difficult.

RICE IN THE DIET.

M. C. writes: I am using a great deal of rice in order to keep down my food budget. Is this safe?

REPLY.

Yes, if you can handle the rather large amount of starch provided. But your meals must be balanced, with added protein, fat, minerals, and vitamins.

TOOTH HEALTH.

W. P. writes: What foods will help to make soft teeth hard?

REPLY.

More vitamin D, calcium, and phosphorus in the diet.

Suppose I asked you to go from "dog" to "cat" in three steps, by steps involving words wherein only one letter was changed from the preceding word. You could do it by this sequence: "Dog, cog, cot, cat." You are entitled to one point for each correct trip across the stepping stones described below:
   [a] Go from pot to pan in two steps.
   [b] Go from boy to man in three steps.
   [c] Go from hate to love in three steps.

THE COMING SHORTAGE OF TEACHERS.

Wilmette, Ill., April 13.—Never in the history of the American public school has there been a graver need for full use of all the best devices for teacher training than in the approaching war summer of 1942. Time schedules of high schools, colleges, and universities have been streamlined to meet the pressing needs for leadership in war industry and the armed forces, and on the lower levels for stiff training for the hard tasks of the dozen workers to back up every fighting man. But the public hardly considers what will happen as teaching forces are depleted.

Men teachers are being lost thru the draft and even by release from teachers' colleges thru a slump in new enrollments and because of need to balance budgets on lower income bases. Experts associated with national planning estimate the decline in the number of teachers during a long war may reach 200,000 to 300,000, mainly due to underpaid rural teachers forsaking schools to get more money in war plants.

Next to the necessity to develop competent teachers continuously and to bring back women lost to the schools thru marriage are the great changes taking place in educational programs. Some high schools are operating 24 hours a day. Emphasis has shifted from "liberal education and higher research" to "stiff, narrow training for specific jobs and applied science." The department of education of the University of Chicago has cataloged eight classifications of curricular changes in high schools.

Many current conventions of educators disclose great need for teachers to understand better the direction government is taking, especially in taxation, problems of social relationships, causes for economic inefficiency, and the part the schools should play in them. Thru mobility of population, hordes of youth, scantily schooled, move from the rural and mountain areas, where teachers are paid less than $500 a year, into the congested industrial cities. The problems of future unemployment and juvenile delinquency directly resulting from inadequate education concern the cities just as much as the neighborhoods which will lose the most teachers. One measure of our preparedness will be the degree to which teachers attend summer sessions at colleges and universities and the character of studies they elect for the emergency.

EYE TESTS FOR DRIVER'S LICENSE.

Chicago, April 13.—Recently I applied for my driver's license. As I approached the window to have my application notarized the lady asked me if I always wore glasses. I said yes. She then told me I would have to pass an eye test.

What a ridiculous system. Why not require the people who do not wear glasses to take an eye test? I know of many cases where people are too vain to wear glasses, but continue to drive cars. MRS. BILLIE WAYNE.

BLOOD DONOR'S EXPERIENCE.

Elmwood Park, Ill., April 6.—If you can spare an hour and a pint of blood and don't you're a sissy. It isn't painful at all and it does make you feel so good—so noble! You'll realize a feeling of exultancy you've never known before.

The moment you enter the premises you are met by a lovely, solicitous nurse with a smile so infectious you can't help responding to it. You are made to feel that they think you are a generous person making a grand gesture in volunteering your blood which, incidentally, you are never going to miss. Thence, you dust off about five chairs in the process of submitting to a blood test, temperature reading, pulse and blood pressure count, and brief questionnaire. If the beaming, appreciative smiles and courtesy of each of these nice nurses, performing their duties voluntarily and without remuneration, do not do something for you, your blood just wouldn't save anything.

Now you are assisted by another lovely nurse in ascending steps to a table; next, a tourniquet is applied, then a swabbing of the arm followed by a slight pricking of the flesh—not as bad as a broken finger nail. Seven minutes of waiting, wondering why something doesn't happen, yet not too impatient, because you are so interested in looking around at the other donors, watching their reactions. And that is all there is to it.

Now you are escorted to a lounging room where you are served coffee, or tea, cookies, and a cigaret—if you use them. Even the shawls furnished for the chilly are selected with meticulous care as to color harmony of dress. Then you have pinned to your lapel an insignia for having done something very worthwhile for your country. I'm going back for more in May and get my silver pin.

WAITING FOR THE SERVICE ALLOTMENT CHECK.

Chicago, April 13.—As long as the government takes our husbands away from their families and their good jobs, why doesn't the government at least see to it that the wives and children are taken care of? At least send the allotment checks thru. We have been waiting since December, and there is rent, food and clothes to buy for the children. Just how long can we last like this?

A WAITING FAMILY.

SHE KILLED A DOG.

River Grove, Ill., April 5.—Today I killed some one's pet, a black and white dog. I had to make a choice of saving its life or causing a terrible accident. Had I stopped I surely would have piled up two fast moving cars behind me. Later I noticed that both of these cars were filled with families, and I was thankful the deed was done.

I am so sorry that I was forced to do this.

Please, dog owners, this summer do not force this awful decision upon the motoring public.

Dogs and cats cannot see as far ahead as we. All motorists are not cold blooded killers. It leaves our hearts as sore as it leaves yours. I do hope never again to know the sensation of being a killer.

Because few things are as precious to me as the well being of my two dogs, I never would permit them to be free near an open highway. Just a little thought and real regard for your pet would save a great loss.

FAIRER TREATMENT OF THE HANDICAPPED.

Chicago, April 10.—My hope is that some one will have the time, money, perseverance, and the ambition to see that all handicapped people are given a new deal. It seems to me that the government should have one or more branches solely for the employment of people with physical defects. Thoroly capable people are turned down when seeking employment with large corporations. Business considers employés as an investment. The government is the people, and it is up to them to see that every one is given an equal chance to earn a livelihood.

A self addressed envelope will expedite handling.

TERMS OF WILL.

Cicero, Ill., April 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother passed away last year leaving a building to my brother and me as sole heirs. We both live in it and each in our own flat. My brother hires his own lawyer and I retain my mother's attorney to handle my affairs. This attorney wrote or drew up my mother's will.

1. Is it correct to take her attorney and can he charge the estate for testifying about the will?

2. I know I must pay him for the legal work he does in my behalf.

3. He also requested the deed of the property [4] so the ownership can be changed.

5. Should I give him the deed and should I obtain a receipt for same?

My brother estimated the personal property at approximately $500 so my attorney requested an inventory but it is impossible to find this much value in personal property as most of the articles are quite worn and old-fashioned.

I gave my attorney an inventory as to what I valued most of the articles and those that were worthless marked them "no value." It is impossible to inventory everything as my mother lived with my brother and gave away a great number of articles to relatives and friends.

6. What should I do? Have my brother inventory what is in his flat that belonged to my mother and submit it to my attorney? F. P.

1. Presumably the will names an executor and if so, the executor can select his attorney.

2. In general, the attorney employed by the executor is paid by the estate for handling the entire probate proceedings.

3. It seems probable that what he was principally interested in was the correct legal description to be used in the inventory.

4. The probate proceedings become a matter of record and, as such, have the automatic effect of proving who are the new owners. No other change of ownership is necessary in the ordinary case.

5. Possession of a recorded deed naming your mother as grantee is not important.

6. Depends largely on the wording of the will. Your attorney is in a better position to advise you than we are.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NEW CAR PURCHASE.

Beloit, Wis., April 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Can you give me the date on which the order was issued prohibiting individual transfers of 1942 model automobiles? I am aware that dealers and distributors' stocks were frozen as of Jan. 1. My impression has been that individuals who acquired 1942 models before Jan. 1 could transfer them to other individuals for some time after Jan. 1. Was order affecting individuals a separate order or was it an interpretation of the original order? H. A.

Under supplemental general limitation orders L1C, L2F, L3E Jan. 1, 1942, it was provided that until Jan. 15, 1942, no person in possession of a 1942 model automobile or one which had been used less than 1,000 miles could sell, lease, trade, lend, deliver, ship or transfer the automobile. This did not apply to sales or transfers by producers to regular dealers.

By amendment of Jan. 14, 1942, this was extended to Feb. 2.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

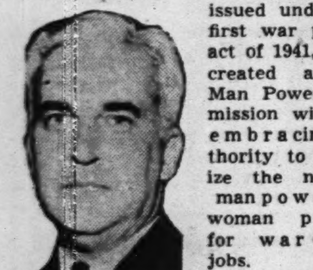
U. S. MAN POWER POOLED, PLACED IN M'NUTT'S HAND

Can Shift Workers to Any Job in War Program.

BY WILLIAM STRAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—President Roosevelt, in an executive order issued under the first war powers act of 1941, today created a War Man Power commission with all-embracing authority to mobilize the nation's man power and woman power for war labor jobs.



Paul V. McNutt.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt was named chairman of the new commission. Eight other members will be named later and it was revealed that Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production board, will be one of them. The others will represent the war department, the navy department, the department of agriculture, the secretary of labor, the selective service system, the civil service commission, and a new labor section of the War Production board.

No "Draft" Involved.

The sweeping executive order gives McNutt power to issue directives to all federal agencies now dealing with the recruiting and training of man power. It also authorizes him to see "that adequate supplies" of agricultural and industrial workers are provided.

Officials said the order involves no compulsion or "labor draft," but foreshadows a concentrated effort to classify all ablebodied persons to determine how they may help most in the war effort.

Questionnaires have been mailed out to draft registrants seeking information concerning their skills and trades. It is estimated that 40 million ultimately will be classified after the registration on April 27 of men between 45 and 64 years of age, inclusive.

Some experts estimate that industry will need 1,900,000 additional workers this year, while at the same time the armed services are taking millions of men. The job of the commission will be to see that needs of both are met.

Women Included in Plan.

McNutt, who will retain his present post as FSA administrator, is given the power to direct the allocation of man power to various government agencies which train and supply workers.

The White House announcement emphasized that while the word "man power" was used thruout the order, it is to be construed as meaning woman power as well. A special announcement will be made soon with respect to the voluntary registration of women for induction into the war program.

The executive order provides that McNutt will exercise his powers only after consulting with the rest of the commission. However, he is given broad authority to appoint the necessary personnel and purchase whatever supplies and facilities are required to carry out the terms of the order. He also is given discretionary power to utilize other government officials or agencies in performing his duties.

Hillman Gets New Post.

The White House announcement disclosed that the War Production board's labor division, headed by Sidney Hillman, will be organized into a labor production division; that most of the old division's functions will be transferred to McNutt's commission and his Federal Security agency, and that Hillman had been appointed a "special assistant to the President on labor matters."

Reliable administration sources termed Hillman's shift a "kick upstairs" preparatory to easing him out of the war program. He is known to have been at loggerheads for months with organized labor factions and reportedly was in frequent disagreement with Nelson over matters of labor policy. His prestige never recovered from the strikes and labor disorders which plagued the early stages of the preparedness program.

Altho the White House said Hillman will assume his new duties shortly, associates of the long-time president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America [CIO] indicated he will take an extended vacation first.

Duties and Powers Defined.

Today's executive order lists McNutt's new duties as follows:

1. Formulate plans and programs and establish basic national policies to assure the most effective mobilization and maximum utilization of the nation's man power in the prosecution of the war; and issue such policy and operating directives as may be necessary thereto.

2. Estimate the requirements of man power for industry; review all estimates of needs for military, agricultural, and civilian man power, and direct the several departments and agencies of the government as to the proper allocation of available man power.

3. Determine basic policies for, and take such other steps as are necessary to coördinate, the collection and compilation of labor market data by federal departments and agencies.

4. Establish policies and prescribe regulations governing all federal programs relating to the recruitment, vocational training, and placement of workers to meet the needs of industry and agriculture.

5. Prescribe basic policies governing the filling of government requirements for man power, excluding those of the military and naval forces, and issue such operating directives as may be necessary thereto.

6. Formulate legislative programs designed to facilitate the most effective mobilization and utilization of the man power of the country, and, with the approval of the President, recommend such legislation as may be necessary for this purpose.

Loses Jewels

GERALDINE SPRECKELS.

Hollywood, Cal., April 18 [Special].—Losing jewelry seems to be a habit with Geraldine Spreckels, 26 years old, sugar fortune heiress, police said today after she had reported her latest loss. A $2,500 gold bracelet studded with 150 rubies, 20 diamonds, and containing a concealed watch is missing.

Mrs. Spreckels, divorced wife of her second cousin, Adolphus B. Spreckels, and granddaughter of John D. Spreckels, early today reported to Hollywood police that while shopping on Hollywood boulevard, not far from her home, she lost the bracelet.

Last November the heiress lost diamond earrings valued at $2,000, while a fur coat valued at $3,000 was stolen from her, she reported to police. She has been living in Hollywood for the last five years.

WHEELMEN FIND MOST BICYCLISTS ARE—WOMEN!

Old Timers Fear League Must Change Name.

Once upon a time there was a composer who wrote a song in which an ardent young suitor informed his girl, Daisy, that she'd "look sweet upon the seat of a bicycle built for two." Well, he started something—the composer, not the suitor.

At least, that was the complaint of a group of veteran cyclists who gathered in Garfield park yesterday for their first national convention since 1900. J. R. Wilson, national secretary of the League of American Wheelmen, put his finger on the sore spot when he said:

"From the looks of things today, we should change our name to the League of American Wheelwomen. Back in the '90s when we had a membership of 150,000, 99 per cent were men. Today we have approximately 1,000 members and 60 per cent of them are women. I don't say it isn't a good thing to have women in the organization but they're sure rolling away with it as far as I can see."

It Once Took Lots of Daring.

There was an undertone of assent around the table. Men who remembered when it required steel nerves and hardened muscles to climb aboard the old high wheelers for a jaunt over the old rough roads, looked sadly reminiscent.

Phil Lyman, a handsome young man who wheeled his bicycle right into the caucas room after a brisk 180 mile ride from his home in Oshkosh, Wis., blushed.

"Wisconsin is so filled with girl bicyclists you have to be pretty spry to dodge them," he announced. "Girls are smart. They know that joining a bicycle club is a good way to get a boy friend and insure a safe and sane courtship. There have been several marriages in our club." His tone was far from happy.

300 Cyclists Parade Today.

Speculation grew as to how many women would be present in the giant bicycle parade this morning. The event will begin at 10 a. m. from the parking lot east of Soldiers' field. It will wend its way north to Jackson boulevard, west to Michigan avenue, north to Wacker drive, and thence to Washington boulevard and Garfield park, where convention sessions will wind up. More than 300 cyclists, many in old-fashioned costumes and on tandems and high wheelers, are expected to be in rolling.

"At least we have a few old-timers like Louis Pierron, who is still an enthusiastic cyclist at 72 years old, to lead the parade," Verne Miners, president of the Chicago council of the league, put in. "That reminds me—Pierron left Milwaukee, Wis., on his bicycle at noon today. He was supposed to be here by now."

When the reporter left the fieldhouse, the men were gathered on the steps anxiously peering down the road.

Pierron arrived in time for dinner.

SKARDA WINNER OF NOMINATION BY 199 MARGIN

State Rep. Edward Skarda, 15th district Democrat, whom A. J. [Half-a-Congressman] Sabath attempts to defeat every two years, has confounded his enemy once more, the official canvass conducted by the board of election commissioners disclosed yesterday.

Skarda won his eighth nomination by 199 votes, the canvass showed, defeating Sabath's candidate, Samuel Kostellney, for the second Democratic nomination. Rep. Matt Franz was far in the lead for high place on the house ballot, receiving 12,284 votes. Skarda polled 9,529 and Kostellney, 9,330.

The fight for the Republican nomination for state senator in the 1st district seemed to have been resolved by the nomination of Hobart E. Neff. While a recheck may show a slight change, it is not expected to overthrow Neff's lead of 215 votes over Harris B. Gaines, former representative, who had 1,343 votes to 1,558 for Neff. The incumbent and ailing senator, Daniel A. Serritella, ran a bad third, polling only 1,095 votes.

CELEBRATE 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF ALTRUSA CLUBS

The Chicago chapter of the International Association of Altrusa Clubs, professional women's club, celebrated the organization's 25th anniversary at a dinner last night at the Chicago Women's club. The international president, Dr. Nina Fay Calhoun of Dallas, Tex., and representatives from Wisconsin, Indiana, and Illinois, attended the dinner. John I. Yellott, chairman of the Illinois Institute of Technology's defense training committee, discussed "Training for War Production." Mrs. Gertrude Gillette, president of the Chicago chapter, presided at the meeting, attended by about 100 members and their guests.

CHICAGO SHOWS PATRIOTIC SPIRIT IN FLYING FLAGS

Display Nation's Colors Thruout City.

Chicago residents are taking new pride in flying their country's colors. Flags fly in the breeze above department stores, in front of fire departments, police stations. Paper flags appear in the window of homes and schools.

In the 16th street Weldon coach yards of the Illinois Central railroad, a new flag has taken its place high above the trains that shift to and fro. Employés of the yard decided last week they could best show their colors by installing the flag as a symbol of their aim to help the national war effort.

Sixth Flag Ceremony.

The flag, and the tall mast from which it floats were dedicated in the sixth ceremony of that type to be held by Illinois Central employés, in stations from Markham yards to South Water street.

Immediately after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, a woman employé of the Feldman Petroleum company was assigned to a telephone in the company's office at Roosevelt road and Clinton street to call each gas station affiliated with the company and order a flag posted in a conspicuous spot. Each of the organization's units flies a flag daily.

Fly Colors for Son.

When son Victor, 25 years old, left a year ago for the army, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Modestie, 1850 North Racine avenue, decided they must fly a flag. Undaunted by the fact their yard was too small to contain a tall flag staff gracefully, Mr. Modestie installed a mast holder on a 10 foot pigeon house that occupies most of the family's yard space.

Tho members of the family are sometimes too busy to raise the flag every morning, the 4 by 6 foot emblem can always be seen when Victor is home on furlough.

DIES IN HIS FILLING STATION.

FRANCES GLORE BECOMES BRIDE OF SERGT. BEACH

Two Families at Ceremony in Lake Forest.

Miss Frances Glore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Glore of Lake Forest, and Sergt. Kellogg Campbell Beach were married in the presence of their two families at 4 o'clock yesterday in the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest. A small reception followed in the Glore home.

The bride wore a 56-year-old ivory faille wedding gown in which her maternal grandmother had been married and her mother's net veil with rose point train. She carried lilies of the valley. The three attendants held arm bouquets of pink roses against the aquamarine net gowns. After a short motor trip, Sergt. Beach and his bride will be at home temporarily in Highland Park, for he is stationed at Fort Sheridan. The bridegroom is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Beach of Detroit, Mich.

Betty-Jean Wilson Weds.

In a 5:30 o'clock candlelight ceremony yesterday in Christ church, Winnetka, Miss Betty-jean Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy William Wilson of Oak Park, became the bride of Charles Edwin Galloway Jr., son of Maj. and Mrs. Galloway of Hubbard Woods. For the ceremony and reception in the Glen View club, the bride wore an ice blue satin gown appliqued in seed pearls and carried orchids.

The eight attendants who preceded the bride to the altar wore gowns shading from petal pink to blush rose. Their flowers were American Beauty roses. Miss Lois Wilson, cousin of the bride, and the bridegroom's two sisters, Mrs. Lincoln Bruce Donaldson and Miss Mary-Stewart Galloway, were among the attendants. Young Mr. Galloway and his bride will live in Columbus, O., while he is in training.

Young Sargent Weds in East.

A wedding of Chicago interest in Schenectady, N. Y., was that of Miss Virginia White and Frederick Sargent II., who were married at 8:30 o'clock yesterday in the First Reformed church, Schenectady. The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Comings White, gave a reception in the Van Culer hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sargent of Chicago were in the east for their son's wedding. Miss Jane Sargent, the bridegroom's sister, served as maid of honor, and Ralph Sargent Jr. as best man.

Young Mr. Sargent and his bride will live in Brookline, Mass., while he completes his course in the Harvard medical school.

Miss Lyons Is Flyer's Bride.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Libertyville Presbyterian church Miss Lucille Mae Lyons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Lyons of Libertyville, became the bride of Lieut. Dan Lee Smith, United States army air corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emory J. Smith of Riverside. A reception followed in the Lyons home.

The bride wore a charming "country" wedding dress of white marquisette with a fingertip veil and a slight train. She and her attendants all carried red, white, and blue bouquets, the bride's of red and white carnations with blue iris, and her attendants' of spring flowers. The bride's sister, Mrs. Robert Denton, who was matron of honor, wore yellow marquisette with a matching little headdress of velvet ribbon, and the bridesmaid, Miss Lucille Mitchell, was in aqua. The flower girl, 8 year old Pat Snyder of Oak Park, niece of the bridegroom, wore white taffeta and carried a miniature of the bride's bouquet. Lieut. Smith and his bride will be at home in Dayton, O.

WIFE OF WILLIAM SIMPSON OBTAINS NEVADA DIVORCE

William Simpson, youngest son of Mrs. James Simpson of Chicago, was divorced at Carson City, Nev., Thursday by Mrs. Beatrice de Menocal Simpson. News of the suit, filed and tried secretly, became known yesterday.

Mrs. Simpson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. de Menocal of Boston. She and Simpson were married in Boston on June 8, 1935, and lived at Locust Valley, Long Island. Simpson was in the banking business at New York.

The charges and testimony were kept secret. It is understood that there was an out of court property settlement. Simpson is understood to be abroad. His father, who died Nov. 25, 1939, was chairman of the Commonwealth Edison company and the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois.

LIBERTY GIVEN A 49 TON BOOST IN LIBERTYVILLE

Farmers Dig Up Scrap Metal for U. S.

Libertyville township in Lake county, a representative middlewestern farm community, demonstrated its support of the war effort yesterday by donating 49 tons of scrap metal. Salvage experts said this was several times as much as the territory covered had been expected to produce.

One farmer, John Thatcher, gave the scrap collectors six tons of steel and iron. He said he piled up all his old wagons, cultivators, and other tools and made a bonfire of them, so there would be no labor expended in separating wood from metal.

He Has a Real Incentive.

The township salvage chairman, Chancellor Dougall, asked Thatcher, whose home is on St. Mary's road east of Libertyville, if there was a particular reason for his generosity. The farmer replied:

"I have a son who is in Australia."

Another donor was Paul Jenkins, who resides on Milwaukee avenue, north of Libertyville. He gave the collectors an old windmill, no longer needed because he has a more modern system of pumping water.

Jenkins said he wanted to do all he could to win the war.

"I was a lieutenant of field artillery in the World war," he said, "and I'm trying to get the army to take me in again."

Boys' Club Works Hard.

Dougall complimented the whole community and particularly the members of the Libertyville Boys' club, who gathered the metal.

"That windmill was a big job," he asserted, "but the boys cut it down with hacksaws and torches. They were supposed to work five hours; they worked nine. All the pay they got was the milk shakes I bought them. At that we didn't get thru and we're expecting several tons more on Monday."

PER CAPITA WAR BOND HONORS GO TO COOK COUNTY

Cook county has a comfortable lead over the rest of the counties in the state on per capita purchases of war savings bonds, Norman B. Collins, state administrator of the war savings staff, announced yesterday.

The per capita purchases in February, the latest figures available, in the 10 leading counties were: Cook, $4.53; Grurdy, $4 14; McHenry, $3.67; Macon, $3.42; Lake, $3.28; Jo Daviess, $3.22; Peoria, $3.19; De Kalb, $3.15; Boone, $3.06, and Douglas, $3.01.

Collins said the figures show, however, that the farmer and small town resident are doing a splendid job toward the constant purchase of war savings bonds and stamps. On May 11 a three day statewide pledge campaign to contact every one in the state will be started, Collins said. More than 200,000 "minute men" field workers are expected to participate in the drive.

SAVE BACON FAT! IT GREASES SKIDS FOR FALL OF AXIS

If all the families that have bacon for breakfast saved the bacon grease for a week, the munitions makers could turn out 35 million more pounds of explosives, Mrs. Walter Kelly, chairman of conservation of fats and greases for the Chicago metropolitan area, said yesterday.

The procedure followed in the bacon-to-explosives process is, according to Mrs. Kelly: "The housewife collects the fat, sells it to her butcher; the butcher sells it to salvage industries which take out the 12 per cent glycerol; this is used to manufacture explosives."

WPB Curbs Upset Building Industry

WAR FACTORIES SEEN AS EASING EFFECTS IN CITY

Sullivan Urges Planning to Protect Future.

Gael Sullivan.

The possible effects on Chicago area building of restrictions recently imposed on construction by the War Production board continued to disturb the building industry and allied branches last week. Because of the important rôle of the area in the war program, the restrictions are expected to fall less heavily here than elsewhere.

Several large producers and sellers of building materials were pessimistic as to the effects of the new government curbs. They believe that the Chicago area building industry will receive a serious blow. On the other hand, such trade publications as the Practical Builder were more hopeful, seeing the curbs as less drastic than had been expected.

Sullivan Predicts Moderate Effect.

Gael Sullivan, head of the Chicago office of the Federal Housing administration, however, indicated that the effects on the area probably would be "in between." He admitted that considerable building would be halted, but said that the city's rapidly growing position as a war production center gives it an opportunity to build for the future if proper planning is undertaken now.

The FHA has been designated to determine what construction projects qualify under the WPB order. After the FHA has passed upon a request for authority to undertake a job, the application is given to the WPB which will grant priorities if finally approved. Sullivan, as administrator of the FHA for the Chicago area, thus will have an important rôle in new construction.

Sees Peacetime Conversion.

"The enormous amount of arms work being carried on, with more to come, insures Chicago's position as one of the greatest arms centers in the country," Sullivan said. "I am of the opinion that many of the new arms plants built here will be easily converted to peacetime use. This means that Chicago probably will have much new industry when the war ends.

"We should plan now to see that our development is along orderly lines. We want no more slum areas. I believe that one of the best ways to improve the real estate picture would be to find some relief for the tax delinquency situation. If the state legislature passed legislation granting Cook county the power to reduce or wipe out some of the delinquent taxes, it would be possible to release land tied up for 10 years or longer by tax delinquency for use again. Some of this land might be used for defense housing. Legislation making tax sales easier would be helpful."

New Building Rules Expected.

Sullivan said he is holding classes for members of his staff to acquaint them with WPB construction regulations so they will be able to pass on applications. The WPB is expected to issue new rulings and interpretations on construction from time to time.

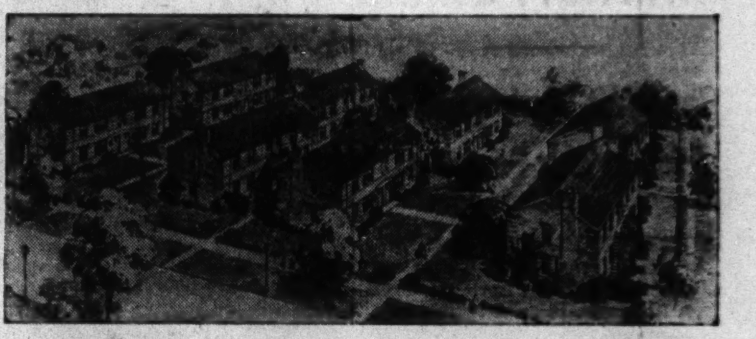
Under the tests required for determining the eligibility of war housing, it must be shown that such homes are to be within walking distance [not exceeding two miles] of the war activities the housing is intended to serve, or adequate public transportation must be available. The cost of the transportation may not exceed 40 cents for a round trip, and the time for the round trip may not exceed two hours.

Cost Maximum of $6,000.

War homes may not cost more than $6,000 a unit and, on the basis of federal funds available for such development, about 75 per cent of those that might be built in Chicago would be in the $4,400 to $4,800 bracket, including land. It was said that these figures probably would be adequate in other cities, but that the high cost of land in Chicago reduces the amount that may be invested in the building itself.

WPB regulations governing eligibility of war housing provide that no rental shall exceed $50 a month. They also require that in large housing projects at least 50 per cent of the homes are to be available for renting.

Defense Homes for West Rogers Park



Construction is in progress on eight buildings divided into 16 two-flat units on Wolcott avenue, between Fargo and Jarvis avenues, West Rogers Park. The lot is 286 by 150 and will be landscaped. The owner is Frank P. Nepper, president of Nepper Homes, Inc., and associates. Carl J. Kastrup is the architect and financing was arranged by H. F. Philipsborn & Co. The buildings are being built under the section of the federal housing act providing moderate cost homes for war workers.

Sees Chicago Far Short of Housing Needs

The 3,250 homes allocated to the Chicago area under the government's housing program for the six months beginning March 1 will be only about a third the number actually required to house war workers, Arthur G. Erdmann, president of the Bell Savings and Loan association, said yesterday. He based his estimate on the survey of new building in the area made monthly by the loan association.

In the period March 1 to Aug. 31, 1941, the survey showed that 9,440 homes were constructed in the area. On this basis, Erdmann said, only about one-third of last year's total will be built.

Predicts Heavier Demand.

"Obviously the homes built from March 1 to Aug. 31, 1941, represent the housing requirements of the region plus the acceleration of home building due to the defense program," he said. "The normal requirements remain the same this year, but the defense program has changed to an all-out war program, making a heavier demand for homes or rentable quarters."

Erdmann said a recent estimate indicated that arms plants will require a total of more than 110,000 workers. Included in this plant group were those of the Aluminum Company of America, Amertorp corporation, Buick Aviation, Chrysler corporation, Crane company, Pressed Steel Car company, Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company, Stewart-Warner corporation, Studebaker Aviation, and hundreds of miscellaneous companies.

Thousands More Units Needed.

A government official recently estimated that Chicago will need between 28,000 and 30,000 new dwelling units to house arms workers and the government employés who are being moved here from Washington to relieve congestion in the capital.

Winchester-Granville Ave. Flats Sold for $86,500

William De Rocher announces the moving of his office from 4603 Lincoln avenue to 4655 North Western avenue.

W. H. Wright & Co., Realtors, Inc., will move Friday from 5613 Lake street, where they have been for 30 years, to 104 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park. Earl H. Carrothers, president, said the new office will be closer to building activity in Oak Park, River Forest, and Maywood.

RENTAL CONTROL TO BE DISCUSSED BY REALTY GROUP

Control of rents in defense areas will be the subject of a nation-wide conference of real estate men to be held in the Drake hotel April 29 and 30. The meeting, called at the request of Leon Henderson, price administrator, will be held under the sponsorship of the Institute of Real Estate Management and the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Robert C. Nordblom of Boston, president of the institute, said the government is including in its efforts to combat inflationary trends measures to control rents in defense areas. He said the institute has offered its aid in insuring that rent control provisions, where placed in effect, are administered fairly.

Among the speakers will be Paul A. Porter, assistant administrator of the Office of Price Administration in charge of the rent division, Karl Borders, director of the OPA's rent division, and Robert W. Wales, assistant OPA general counsel. Cyril R. DeMara of Toronto will discuss Canada's experience with rent control.

CREEL RAPS U. S. TREND TOWARD A CENSORED PRESS

Warns Plan Would Only Cover Up Blunders.

George Creel.

Princeton, N. J., April 18 (AP).—George Creel, director of the committee on public information in the World war, warned today that any attempt to enact press censorship legislation would be "absolutely disastrous to national unity."

Writing in the Public Opinion Quarterly, published by the Princeton University School of Public and International Affairs, Creel asserted that even if a censorship bill were passed by congress and even if the press could then be won to acquiesence, "no preconceived plan of operation and no amount of trained personnel could make it work."

Legislated censorship, Creel added, "works inevitably to protect blunderers, incompetents, and grafters" by forestalling criticism.

Needed as Morale Builder.

The morale of a free people, he continued, "depends in the last analysis upon the feeling of the citizen that he is being given the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Anything short of that is bound to result in disaster, for no matter how much the truth may be suppressed, sooner or later it is going to come out.

"And when it does come out, the reaction blinds the people to the accomplishment and shatters morale by inducing the conviction that everything told them has been a lie."

Internal censorship, Creel contended, would "continue the ghastly inefficiency that marked the whole preparedness effort from May 28, 1940, right up to Dec. 7, 1941. Had there been real criticism of the welter of alphabet agencies that squandered billions in building the great 'arsenal of democracy,' we should not have had a Pearl Harbor, a Wake Island, a Guam, or the tragedy of the Philippines."

Rips Director Price's Ruling.

Creel took issue with a rule laid down by Byron Price, director of the United States Office of Censorship, which forbids specific information about war contracts, such as the exact type of production, production schedules, dates of delivery or progress of production, estimated supplies of strategic and critical materials available.

"Hardly a day passes," Creel declared, "that some row between officials does not reveal every fact about our stock piles of rubber, aluminum, steel, copper, and other strategic materials.

"And what about our congress? When was there ever anything more explicit with respect to production than the Truman report? Or the savage attacks of Sen. Harry Byrd, particularly the one in which he charged that out of an expenditure of 10 billions we had received less than $425,000,000 worth of vital equipment? . . .

"Unless criticism is permitted, unless incompetents are scourged from office by the lash of public opinion, the situation is apt to grow little better."

DRAFTEES TO GET FURLOUGHS TO SETTLE AFFAIRS

A furlough of between 5 and 15 days will be granted conscripts after their processing at recruit reception centers, the war department announced yesterday. The liberalized policy is designed to permit men accepted for army service to clear up financial and personal affairs before they begin actual military training.

The furloughs will be granted from reception centers after the men have been classified as to occupation, expressed their preference for assignment, had their military records opened, and received their uniforms.

Length of furlough will be determined by the distance from the reception center to the conscript's home. Only in case of great distances will the 15 day furlough be granted. The war department urged draftees to wait until their final examination at the reception center before settling personal and business affairs if they have any doubt of their ability to pass the army physical examination.

TOP ARMY 'MUST' FOR ITS LEADERS IS—LEADERSHIP

Quality Makes Up for Multitude of Lacks.

Camp Grant, Ill., April 18 [Special].—Men with the quality of leadership and the ability to guide other men are being sought by the United States army for commissions, even tho they may lack all other military and educational specifications.

The Voluntary Officers Training Corps has been established with this in view. As a result, there are in service today as lieutenants, captains, or majors men who previously had no military experience and whose education embraced nothing more than a high school diploma—and in some cases not even that.

The army feels that experience is a great teacher and that the man who can start from scratch and succeed in his field can be converted into an excellent officer to help fill the growing list required to lead the fighting services.

Acts Thru Draft Board.

A candidate for the VOTC first must go to his draft board and fill in the necessary forms. If he is classified 3-A, he must sign a classification waiver which places him in 1-A.

Later the applicant must appear for a preliminary physical examination, consisting of a blood test and little else.

If the applicant passes, he then visits some army reception center, such as Camp Grant.

The applicant is required to pay his own way to the center and must be prepared to remain from two to four days. He must pay for his board and lodging. Lodging is 10 cents a night, and meals—big, wholesome ones—are 20 cents each.

A candidate found physically sound, even tho flabby and out of condition, may be retained. The I. Q. test is given the second day.

No specialized knowledge is required. The examination is not highly technical, but it embraces a wide range of information from current events to trick questions.

Classified by Skills.

Then come the classification interviews, which reveal which branch of the service the candidate prefers, whether he would be suited for it and whether his background qualifies him.

That's all there is to it. The candidate then is sent home.

His next word from the army may be expected in two or three weeks, following scrutiny of his examinations by a board of officers.

Candidates failing to meet the necessary standards are so informed, and their draft boards reclassify them to their former status.

A candidate found to be officer material is inducted as a buck private and given 13 weeks of basic training to acquaint him with "things army." He then is sent to an officers' training school. From then on all he has to do is keep his wits about him, study and pass examinations.

A commission as an officer in the reserve follows immediately after graduation.

JURY DISAGREES IN SUIT AGAINST BANK RECEIVER

The Circuit court jury hearing the suit of the United States controler of the currency to collect the $350,000 bond of Clarence F. Buck, 71 years old, former receiver of the defunct Calumet National bank, was unable to reach a verdict and was discharged last night. The hearing required 33 days.

Buck was charged with negligence in his operation of the receivership. This resulted in a loss of $65,000 to depositors, the controler charged. Other defendants were the Royal Indemnity company and the Eagle Indemnity company, which supplied Buck's bond.

Earn Their Way

Beneath their coat of arms, the crossed mops and the duster, the janitresses and janitors of the Art institute opened their own art exhibit at the institute yesterday. And those who saw the display in Blackstone hall said the pride of the young women and men who keep the institute clean was justified.

The janitors' exhibit is an annual one, for the janitors are all students, as deft with the brush as with the mop, who earn their way by hard work. But this is the first year the janitresses have been included. The war has taken so many of the young men that there are now jobs for the girls. Rosemary Simpson, Cecilia Andrew, Marian Norwood, Helen Fenton, Ruth Miles, and Mary Nell McGinnis are helping to pay for their training in art by sweeping and mopping.

NEGRO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO INSTALL LEADERS

S. B. Fuller will be installed as president of the Chicago Negro Chamber of Commerce Thursday night at the organization's sixth annual banquet in the Parkway ballroom at 45th street and South Park way.

The principal speaker will be Dr. J. E. Walker of Memphis, Tenn., president of the Universal Life Insurance company. Among the honor guests will be Albon Holsey of Tuskegee, Ala., executive secretary of the Negro Business League. Plans will be completed for the league's 42d annual convention, which will open at Du Sable High school Aug. 26, with the chamber of commerce as host.

The Criterion Concert orchestra, founded and directed by Owen M. Lawson, will furnish the music for the banquet. J. Wesley Jones will lead community singing.

Hotel Guest Is Injured in Elevator Accident

John Spicer, 35 years old, 716 Rush street, a guest in the Brevoort hotel, 120 West Madison street, was pinned for 45 minutes yesterday when he slipped between an elevator and the shaft wall in the hotel. Firemen rescued him. His left leg was fractured and his side was injured. The elevator operator said Spicer attempted to board the car after it had begun to descend.

Getting Up Nights Makes Many Feel Old Too Soon
If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Worry, Colds, working too hard, or over-eating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.
Help Kidneys Remove Acids
Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded. Fourteen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.
Money Back Guarantee
Usually, in non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder disorders the very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess Acids, poisons and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee with each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of all your money unless you are completely satisfied. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose, under this positive money back guarantee. Don't take chances on any Kidney medicine that isn't guaranteed. GREEKS SHOULD HAVE SOFT WORD FOR SPONGE DEAL

Florida Colony Appears 'Set' for Duration.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—A colony of Greek sponge fishermen at Tarpon Springs, Fla., familiar to winter tourists, is comfortably set for the duration of the war with exemptions from rigid price control of its sea floor crop, priorities on its rubber diving equipment, and exemptions from restrictions on enemy aliens. Their congressman, J. Hardin Paterson, with a little encouragement, boasted a bit this afternoon.

"They are a distinctive, unique and romantic group in my district and I have to take care of them," Paterson said, calling his secretary for additional reference files.

Tells How He Handled It.

The fleet of 50 or 60 gaily painted sponge boats, with high prows and sterns in Mediterranean design, have no duplicate in America.

"Last December," Peterson related, "representatives of the old Office of Production Management [now the War Production Board] thought the price of sponges was too high and went down there to investigate. They had to confer with the sponge industry thru an interpreter and the conference ended in a squabble.

"Before the price control bill was enacted in January, I saw that this sponge industry was protected. An amendment won't let Price Administrator Leon Henderson fix any maximum below the average for 1941, which was a good year for the divers.

Gets Priority Rating.

"The divers were in hot water for awhile because they needed rubber suits and hoses. I got them priorities on these because what they recover from the sea is more valuable than what they have to wear to recover it. Their annual crop sells for between 1 and 1½ million dollars.

"Then they were in trouble because they come from the 12 Dodecanese islands in the Aegean sea that Italy took from Turkey in 1912. Some never were naturalized after entering the United States under the Italian quota.

"However, they never were Italian in language, religion, or customs. They're Greeks. The Turks never tried to assimilate them and the Italians were unsuccessful in attempting to do so. The United States department of justice recognized this in granting them exemptions from restrictions of the enemy alien registration act."

HANGS SELF IN VACANT BUILDING.

Patrick Rowley, 59 years old, 2337 Monroe street, was found hanged yesterday in an abandoned building in the rear of 413 South Maplewood avenue. Rowley, a bartender, left $230 in a trunk in his room to pay for the funeral.

About the appliances we advertise nowadays
The appliances we are now advertising are limited to those we have on hand, or those that are made available without interference with war production.
They have all been selected because their normal operation in the home comes at a time of day when our electrical facilities are more than adequate to meet present power requirements for both war production and civilian use.
Furthermore, we believe that their use in most cases will conserve energy and tend to release home labor for helpful wartime activities.

COLCHIS WHIPS ALSAB BY ¾ LENGTH IN CHESAPEAKE

SABATH DERBY HOPE COMES UP FROM 10TH SPOT

But Winner Passes Him at Finish.

Baltimore, Md., April 18 (AP).—Alsab came part way back today, but good as he was he still remained the biggest question mark for the Kentucky Derby.

The little bay standard bearer of Al Sabath, Chicago lawyer, carrying top weight of 122 pounds, closed from 10th place, but hung at the finish as R. Sterling Clark's Colchis fairly flew around him to hit the wire three-quarters of a length to the good and capture the 23d running of the $15,000 added Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace.

It was Alsab's most impressive run since last year, but even Jockey Basil James admitted he had all the luck in the world doing it in the mile and a sixteenth traditional Derby prep put on before a crowd of 22,000 fans, which oldtimers said was the biggest turnout ever in this Maryland racing plant.

Colchis Earns $13,350.

Colchis, a Maryland bred gelding ineligible for the Derby but a supplementary entry for the Preakness, not only whipped Alsab and Requested, the Derby hope of Ben Whitaker of Texas and winner of the Flamingo stakes at Hialeah last winter, but gave six other Derby horses in the field of 11 a good going over.

He clicked off the distance in 1:46 3-5 and his triumph earned him $13,350.

Another important development was the effort of Requested, finishing third, a length and a half back of Alsab. After challenging for the lead the first seven furlongs, he weakened and appears not ready for the long Derby mile and a quarter to be run at Churchill Downs on May 2.

Colchis Pays $18.50 to Win.

The crowd backed Alsab down to odds-on, but only nibbled at Colchis, which had beaten the Sabath entry only five days ago. As a result, the winning son of Happy Argo, neatly handled by Jockey Georgie Woolf, returned $18.50 for $2.

Besides Alsab and Requested, best of the other Derby eligibles, was T. D. Buhl's Sweep Swinger, who came from last place to finish a fast closing fourth, a neck behind Requested. The others—William du Pont's Baby Dumpling and Fairy Manah, Mrs. E. du Pont Weir's Hyacinthus, Mrs. R. McIlvain's Bright Willie, and C. H. Jones' California star, Phar Rong—were all strung out behind the pace setters.

Colchis Rears at Start.

Despite Alsab's closing rush, Colchis ran the more remarkable race. Woolf, part of 116 pounds on the husky gelding's back, explained that his mount reared up in the starting gate and hit his jockey so severely he was "dazed when we broke."

Bright Willie, the imported Hyacinthus, and Requested cut out all the pace for three-quarters of a mile and Colchis dropped back to seventh. Turning into the stretch, Woolf started to move from the outside, and from the eighth pole home went like the wind. Finally he whizzed by Alsab, who had been steered thru a lucky hole on the inside.

Another Maryland son came home to the races for the first time in more than a year. This was Challedon, W. L. Brann's great campaigner and turf champion of 1939 and 1940, who got off slowly, then put on one of his closing streaks to finish second in a photo finish, a nose behind Alaking in the $3,000 prospect handicap, secondary feature.

Navy Varsity Crew Beats Princeton in Rough Water

Princeton, N. J., April 18 [Special]. Bucking a strong headwind that piled up whitecaps on Lake Carnegie, Navy's varsity crew whipped Princeton by a length in a mile and three-quarters race today. Navy's time was 10:43.6, Princeton's 10:47.4.

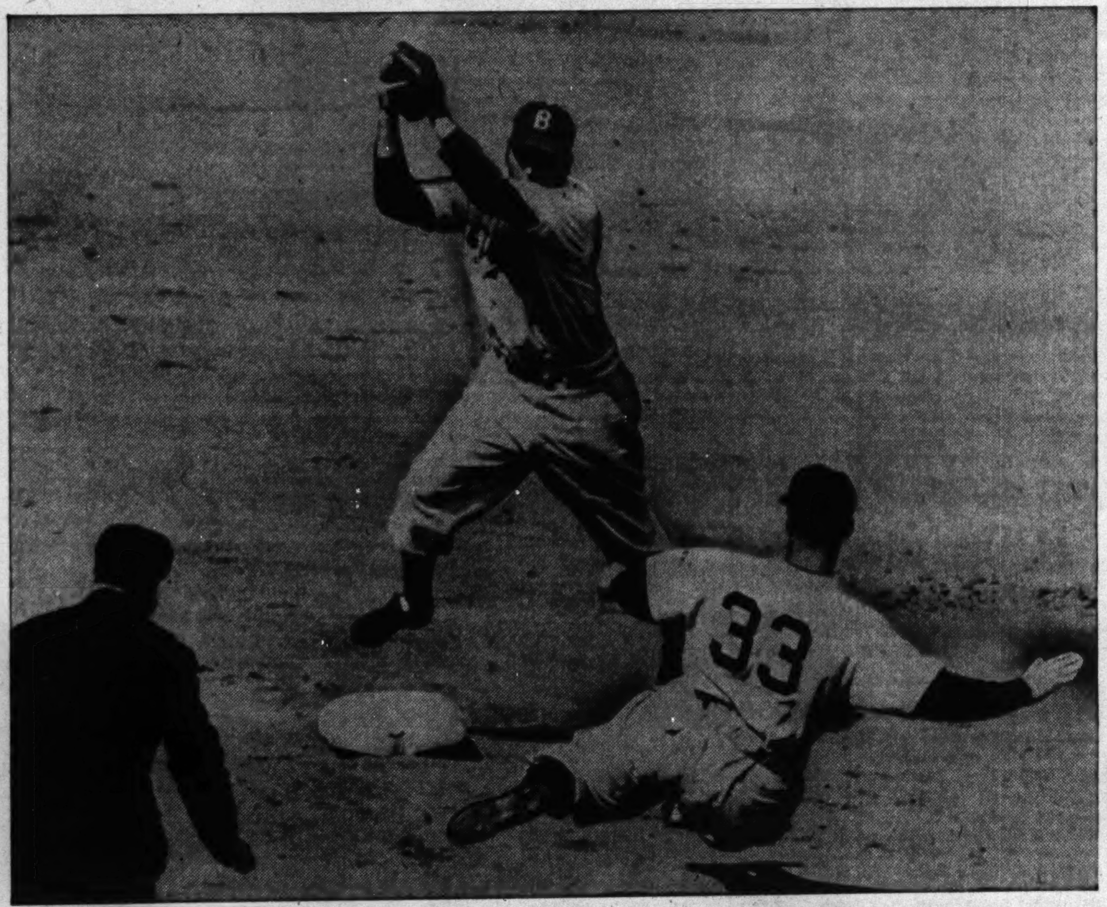
HERE AND THERE ON MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL FRONT



Ron Northey (No. 33) Philadelphia outfielder, slides for second base in second inning of yesterday's game with the Dodgers in Brooklyn, but arrives too late. Shortstop Pee Wee Reese (center) takes the throw from Catcher Billy Sullivan. The umpire is Beans Reardon. The Phils won, 2 to 1.

Chet Laabs, Browns' outfielder, scrambles safely back to first base after taking a long lead-off as Catcher Birdie Tebbetts tries to pick him off with throw to Rudy York, on base, in game between St. Louis and the Detroit Tigers in St. Louis. The Tigers won, 4 to 0.

Bob Feller, who used to strike 'em out for the Cleveland Indians, but now is a Chief Boatswain's mate in the navy, yesterday visited the Indians' dressing room in Cleveland and let his old trainer, Max (Lefty) Weisman, admire the stripes on his arm. Feller saw the Indians beat the White Sox in the ninth, 1 to 0, as Fabian Gaffke, pinch batter, singled, scoring Buster Mills. [Associated Press Wirephotos.]

TWO OUT IN NINTH, INDIANS DEFEAT SOX, SMITH WITH PINCH HIT, 1-0

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., April 18.—The Cleveland Indians scored a run with two out in the ninth, their first in 18 innings of competition with the White Sox, and Jim Bagby thus beat Edgar Smith, 1 to 0, this afternoon. The Sox having won yesterday, 1 to 0, the spectacle of a grand total of two runs has decided two consecutive ball games, a fine commentary on the pitching, if you are too kind to figure that neither the White Sox nor the Indians know much about hitting.

The fatal ninth developed thuswise: With one down Buster Mills, subbing for Roy Weatherly in center field, came thru with his third straight single, the Indians' sixth off Smitty. Les Fleming dribbled one to Joe Kuhel, Mills reaching second on the out. Ray Mack was given an intentional pass, then Fabian Gaffke was sent up to hit for Gene Desautels. Smith whizzed two strikes past Gaffke. He barely tipped another and Mike Tresh almost caught it to end the inning, but the ball twisted out of Mike's glove and Gaffke got another chance. He responded by lining a single to left, Mills scoring the day's run.

It's Welcome Victory for Bagby.

Bagby was defeated six times by the Sox last year and he didn't beat them once. But it was apparent that the only chance for Smith today was to have a 0 to 0 game halted by an air raid or something. The Sox batsmen made a single in each of the first three innings. After the third of these, Bagby retired 20 Chicagoans in order, the string halting when Wally Moses scratched a single off Fleming's glove with two out in the ninth.

Here's the record of the Sox' devastating slugging:

Joe Kuhel singled with two out in the first inning. Then Luke Appling popped to Ken Keltner.

Leadoff Hit Is Wasted.

Harry Sketchley beat out a bunt at the start of the second inning. Then Myril Hoag tapped into a double play and Dario Lodigiani rolled to Mack.

Tresh opened the third with a single to center, whereupon Smith, Don Kolloway, and Moses supplied easy outs, starting that string of 20 straight failures.

Bagby walked none and rarely had a high count on the feeble Sox. Smith was in several jams but fought bravely out of them with good fielding support, Moses' defensive work being specatcular on several occasions.

After Moses had averted trouble with a great catch on Mills [Buster's only failure of the day] in the second, the Indians came back in the third for a real treat. With one down Desautels walked and went to third on Bagby's single, the first Cleveland hit. Then Manager Lou Boudreau grounded into a double play started by Appling.

A Cleveland Threat Fails.

With two out in the fourth, Jeff Heath walked and went to third on Mills' first single. Mills stole second as Fleming was running up a three and two count. Then Smith threw out Fleming. In the fifth Desautels doubled for the only extra base hit of the game. Bagby bounced to Smith and Boudreau lined to Appling.

With two out in the sixth, Heath singled and went to third on Mills' second single. Then Moses came in fast to grab Fleming's fly in right center. Smith retired the Indians in order in the seventh and eighth.

Where's That Punch?

It was the second shutout in five games for the slugging Sox. They have pounded out a grand total of 31 hits in the five games, the aggregate being helped considerably by 10 they made in losing, 13 to 3, to the Browns in Chicago last Thursday.

It is said the waiver lists are being scanned carefully in the hope of picking up a hitter or two.

PRINCETON TRACK TEAM TOPS PENN, NAVY, COLUMBIA

Philadelphia, Pa., April 18 (AP).—Princeton won the second annual quadrangular track meet here today. The Tigers tallied 56 4-15 points; Pennsylvania, 51 2-15; Navy, 43⅗; Columbia, 13 14-15.

Ed Beetem of Penn was the only double winner. He captured the discus and shot put events and placed second to his teammate, Jack Cohen, in the hammer. Princeton clinched the victory when Ellis Phillips took the 880 yard run and Austin Kellam triumphed in the 220 yard low hurdles.

Jack Tingle of Navy, after bowing to Stan Kauffman of Penn in the 100 yard dash, came back to win the 220 in :21.9.

Cubs, Reds Get Day Off; Try Again Today

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Cubs and Cincinnati Reds yesterday became "firsts" in big league circles, and it's an honor that can't be taken from them no matter what happens between now and next fall. They grabbed the distinction by NOT playing the second game of their series in Wrigly field, thus becoming principals in the first postponement of the majors' season. The reason was the "weather."

However, the day wasn't a loss for the Cubs, so far as exercise was concerned. Not unmindful of the fact that his lads haven't been especially robust as hitters, Manager James Wilson had the ground crew assemble a quantity of bats, as well as the batting cage, and then expressed a desire to see some fancy swinging. After about an hour of it, Wilson announced he had seen enough, and the athletes went home.

Passeau Faces Derringer.

The Cubs and Reds will complete the series this afternoon with Claude Passeau in charge for the former, and Paul Derringer, who is a bad man so far as the Cubs are able to figure after battling him for years, pacing the Rhinelanders. With this meeting disposed of, the Cubs will head for Pittsburgh, where for the next three days they'll endeavor to remove some of the joy from the life of Frankie Frisch's Pirates.

Because of the 3 to 2 success of Friday over the Reds in the local National league opener, Boss Wilson thinks he'll hand out jobs to the same fellows, pitcher excepted of course, this afternoon. This means, among other things, that the hapless Lou Novikoff who a year ago fell so far behind his press agent's pace that he settled in Milwaukee for the summer, will be present.

Lou Gets a Hit.

Bulky Lou came up with a single Friday to feature his first 1942 outfielding assignment and he even stepped around sufficiently well to collect fly balls, an art in which he is known to be lagging. So between his one hit and his fielding, not to mention Wilson's opinion that the guy really can bat despite his flop of last season, the Mad Russian is to have another chance. But the opportunity will be limited if he doesn't produce quickly. Dom Dallessandro, injured on opening day, is ready to return.

Nothing has been done about shedding excess rookies and, according to Wilson, nothing will be done for a while. He aims to keep 'em around to make sure he doesn't make any mistakes in his appraisals. He had about made up his mind to turn Hiram Bithorn, the Porto Rican right hander, back to Hollywood, but the young man turned in a few slick pitching tricks in the waning days of the exhibition grind and followed with an equally impressive job while finishing against the Cardinals last Tuesday so his status has been altered. It may not be long before Bithorn is given a start.

North Central Defeats Wheaton in Track Meet

North Central won its first outdoor track meet of the season yesterday at Naperville, defeating Wheaton college, 72 to 59. Wheaton has not beaten North Central in a track meet in 52 years. Capt. Schendel of North Central took two firsts and one second.

U. S. Pulls Out of Games in Buenos Aires

The war yesterday canceled United States participation in the first Pan-American games at Buenos Aires, Argentina's big 1942 sports show arranged to take the place of the suspended Olympics.

The decision to withdraw the United States team, reached after consultation with federal authorities, was announced by Avery Brundage, president of the United States of America Sports federation, formerly the American Olympic association, and chairman of the United States Pan-American games committee.

Brundage, active for many months in the organization of committees to handle eliminations in all branches of proposed competition, said in a statement on behalf of the general committee:

"Our air and seaborne transportation is now subject to tremendous pressure and obviously it is necessary to devote our undivided attention to the paramount national objective of winning the war.

"At the same time that we abandon our preparations for the Pan-American games, we call on the 104 sport governing organizations comprising the membership of the United States of America Sports federation to carry on and to augment their domestic sport programs insofar as there is no interference with our war effort. This war may go on for many years, and we must have replacements of men fit to fight."

This country joined Canada in withdrawing its team, leaving tentatively as North American representatives Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Panama, and possibly Cuba.

BOOT AND SPUR, DERBY HORSE, RUNS 4TH IN KEENELAND TRIAL

BY HOWARD BARRY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lexington, Ky., April 18.—Boot and Spur, a son of Blue Larkspur heretofore considered a probable starter in the Kentucky Derby, was virtually eliminated from consideration by delivering a dull race today at Keeneland. He finished fourth behind First Prize in the six furlong Elmendorf purse. Four of the five starters are eligible for the Derby, which will be run on May 2, but Boot and Spur was generally rated the only one with much chance of getting to the post.

The Dixiana farm's First of All, the only noneligible in the field, was established as the favorite at 7 to 5 while Boot and Spur, which had attained some attention by beating the Belmont futurity winner, Some Chance, during the winter season at Agua Caliente, was the second choice at 7 to 2.

Boot and Spur Shut Off.

After a brief effort in the run down the back stretch, Boot and Spur dropped out of it. He was shut off going into the far turn, allowed his rivals to get well ahead of him during the sweep around the bend, and failed to rally under a drive in the stretch.

First Prize did some creditable sprinting to beat First of All by a length, while Florizan Beau was finishing third, but the winner is not taken seriously at this time as a Derby candidate. He was a long shot in the betting, paying off at $40.40, $7.40, and $3 across the board.

Fourteen thousand spectators, the largest crowd in the history of this pleasant little track watched this afternoon's program run off.

The mutuel handle was the largest which ever went thru the Keeneland mutuel machines, $221,805. The biggest previous was $184,914 in 1939.

Whirlaway, The Rhymer Scratched.

Many had been hoping to see Whirlaway, last year's champion, run against The Rhymer, winner of the $50,000 Widener handicap, in the Ben Ali handicap this afternoon. Both were scratched, however, leaving the race a four horse affair involving Get Off, Royal Crusader, Steel Heels, and Aonbarr.

The Rhymer, which is owned by Mrs. Payne Whitney, was withdrawn when word was received from the east of the death of Mrs. Whitney's sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Whirlaway was scratched because of a holding track.

Despite the small field the race was closely contested with the four well bunched thru much of the running. Eventually Steel Heels took the lead away from Aonbarr in the stretch and went on to win by two lengths while Get Off finished third.

Arcaro Lets Devil Diver Loaf.

A number of Derby eligibles were on the track this morning for workouts. Trainer John Gaver aimed to have Devil Diver work a mile and an eighth in 1:56, but Eddie Arcaro, who handled the Greentree colt in the move, let him loaf too much and he ended up with a mile in 1:51. He finished out the mile and an eighth in 2:03.

Alsab and Requested, which ran second and third to Colchis in the Chesapeake Stakes today will be shipped to Louisville Monday for the Derby, it was learned here today.

TORONTO, Ont., April 18 (AP).—Toronto scored three times in the final period to defeat Detroit, 3 to 1, tonight and gain the Stanley cup, emblematic of world hockey supremacy. Sweeney Schriner scored two of the goals that enabled the Maple Leafs to become the first team in national league history to win the cup after losing the first three games of the best of seven playoffs.

A capacity crowd of 16,218 watched the Leafs regain possession of the trophy they last won in 1932.

Langelle Fires Winning Shot.

Schriner, clever left winger, was the Toronto hero, altho Pete Langelle, center fired what proved to be the winning goal. Schriner scored the first and third Toronto markers on plays with his line mates, Billy Taylor, and Lorne Carr.

After the Wings had held the Leafs safe while two men short, Syd Howe shot them in front early in the second period on a play with Syd Abel and Jimmy Orlando. There were five passes before How let go his backhand from the right side of the Toronto net.

Orlando had just stepped on the ice after serving a penalty when Schriner scored his first a power play. Two minutes later Johnny, Toronto's McCreedy, was checked and the disc flew 15 feet in the air. It came down on Langelle's stick and the little center had only to shove it across the goal line.

Wings Tire Near Finish.

The Wings tried desperately in the closing minutes but they were obviously tired. Carr made way for the final counter when he checked Howe to the ice and Schriner picked up the loose puck to beat Mowers.

After the game the Stanley cup was presented by Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey league, to Captain Apps, who was flanked by Coach Happy Day and Major Connie Smythe, former Leafs' manager now on active service in the Canadian army.

WASHINGTON'S CREWS TRIUMPH OVER CALIFORNIA

Seattle, Wash., April 18 (AP).—The University of Washington set three new course records today in making a clean sweep of the 39th annual crew regatta with the University of California. The freshmen and varsity crews won handily, but the Jayvees were hard pressed.

The Husky varsity won by four lengths in 15:54 to California's 16:05. The former record for the three mile Leschi-Madison park course, last raced over in 1930, was 15:58, set by Washington's varsity in 1922.

The junior varsity won in 15:55, half a second and about four feet ahead of the Bears. The old Jayvee course record was 16:26.6, set by Washington in 1926.

The Huskies freshmen won their two mile event in 10:20.5. California, in 10:43.4, also surpassed the old freshman mark of 10:54 established by the Huskies in 1920.

Peoria Central Scores 72d Straight Tennis Victory

Bloomington, Ill., April 18.—The Peoria Central High school record was increased to 72 consecutive dual meet victories in tennis when the 1942 team defeated Bloomington, 4 to 2, here today. The string started back in 1937.

ROOKIE LIMITS YANKS TO 3 HITS, RED SOX WIN, 5-1

Terry Misses Shutout in Eighth Inning.

New York, April 18 (AP).—The New York Yankees met their match today in Rookie Yank Terry, who limited them to three hits in pitching the Boston Red Sox to a 5 to 1 decision.

The champions' defeat was their first in five starts, while the Red Sox elevated themselves into a triple tie for the American league lead, along with the Yanks and the St. Louis Browns, who lost to Detroit for their first setback.

Shutout Spoiled.

Terry, a 29 year old right hander who was voted the most valuable player in the Pacific Coast league last year when he won 26 and lost 8 for San Diego, missed a shutout by walking Pinch Hitter George Selkirk in the eighth. Phil Rizzuto doubled Selkirk home.

Atley Donald started for the Yankees and was shelled for five hits and four runs in the third.

Pitcher Doubles.

With one out after a two bagger by Terry, Johnny Pesky hit a liner that went thru Charlie Keller for a double and one run. Ted Williams scratched a single and Jimmy Foxx walked to fill the bases. Jim Tabor also walked, forcing Pesky across the plate. Pete Fox's single scored Williams, but Tommy Henrich threw Jimmy Foxx out at the plate. Tabor scored on Lamar Newsome's single. Bill Conroy walked to fill the bases again, but Donald fanned Terry.

The Yankee starter was chased in the following inning when singles by Dom DiMaggio and William and a pass netted the last run. Hank Borowy and Mel Queen checked them the rest of the way.

THERE'S ALWAYS A CARD GAME WHEN BALL PLAYERS LOAF

Weather kept the Cincinnati Reds and Cubs apart yesterday, but the visitors had a game anyway—of rhummy. The players, caught by the cameraman in a Belmont hotel room, are (left to right—facing camera) Pitcher Elmer Riddle, Outfielder Mike McCormick, Infielder Joe Abreu, and First Baseman Frank McCormick. The gent with his back to the lens is Outfielder Ival Goodman, who is out of action just now with an injured arm. The two clubs will wind up their abbreviated series today.

Some players just naturally like to loaf and chat when there is nothing to do at the ball park. Here we have Gabriel Paul (left), the Red's traveling secretary, exchanging banter with (left to right) Shortstop Eddie Joost, Pitcher Bucky Walters (you've heard of him), and Left Hander Johnny Vander Meer, who was beaten by the Cubs, 3 to 2, Friday in the north siders' first home game of the season.

Experts Name Cards After Recalling '41

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

There was quite a spread of opinion among the so-called experts this spring as to which entrant was going to get there first in the present National league race. Some liked the Brooklyn Dodgers, principally because they are the champs and it always is wise to string along with a titleholder. Others figured the Reds, winners in 1939 and '40, would put on a revival. And some came right out boldly with a declaration that the St. Louis Cardinals were about to climb back on the pennant wagon.

The surprising feature, of course, of the entire forecast from the wise men of the press box was the number of votes offered in behalf of the Cardinals' chances. Maybe they got their information direct from the mythical Little Bird of childhood but it might be more correct to say they were playing a hunch. They remembered that the Cards gave the Dodgers the toughest competition down the stretch last season, hence figured the pursuers would develop into the status of the pursued during the 1942 campaign.

Dodgers Not Great Team.

Actually there are ample reasons for thinking the Cards might make it. The Dodgers, despite their pennant feat, do not constitute a great ball team. Proof of this was the ease with which the Yankees polished them off in the world series. The Dodgers' greatest strength was in their pitching and this could easily melt down to a modest level. And then there is that matter of new Cardinals, fellows practically unknown until they boom forth in St. Louis uniforms. The Cards, with their extensive farm club manipulations, turn up such talent almost every season.

Maybe part of the pennant picture painted by the scribes in the Cards' behalf was inspired by one Stan Musial, an outfielder. He came up from the Cards' farm at Rochester, N. Y., last fall and in 12 games hit .426. That's a neat average and all that, but that's hardly enough time for an enemy to ferret out a weakness, if any, and then peddle it quickly around the league. The Polish lad might have what it takes but only time will prove it. Still the Cards have other outfielders of worth so possibly their entire chance hinges on their pitching.

Pitching Looks Good.

The Cards' pitching, if it picks up where it left off last fall, is liable to be fair to middlin' to say the least. Howard Pollett came up late last season and his southpaw wares stood the league on the back of its neck. Ernie White, another lefty, did the same all season. They are practically children so far as experience goes, and then there is the old belief that a left hander is a gamble until he has furnished two or three years of proof. If these two kids should step out and do as they did in '41 they are going to make it tough, especially on the Dodgers who have a marked dislike for the left handed variety of throwing.

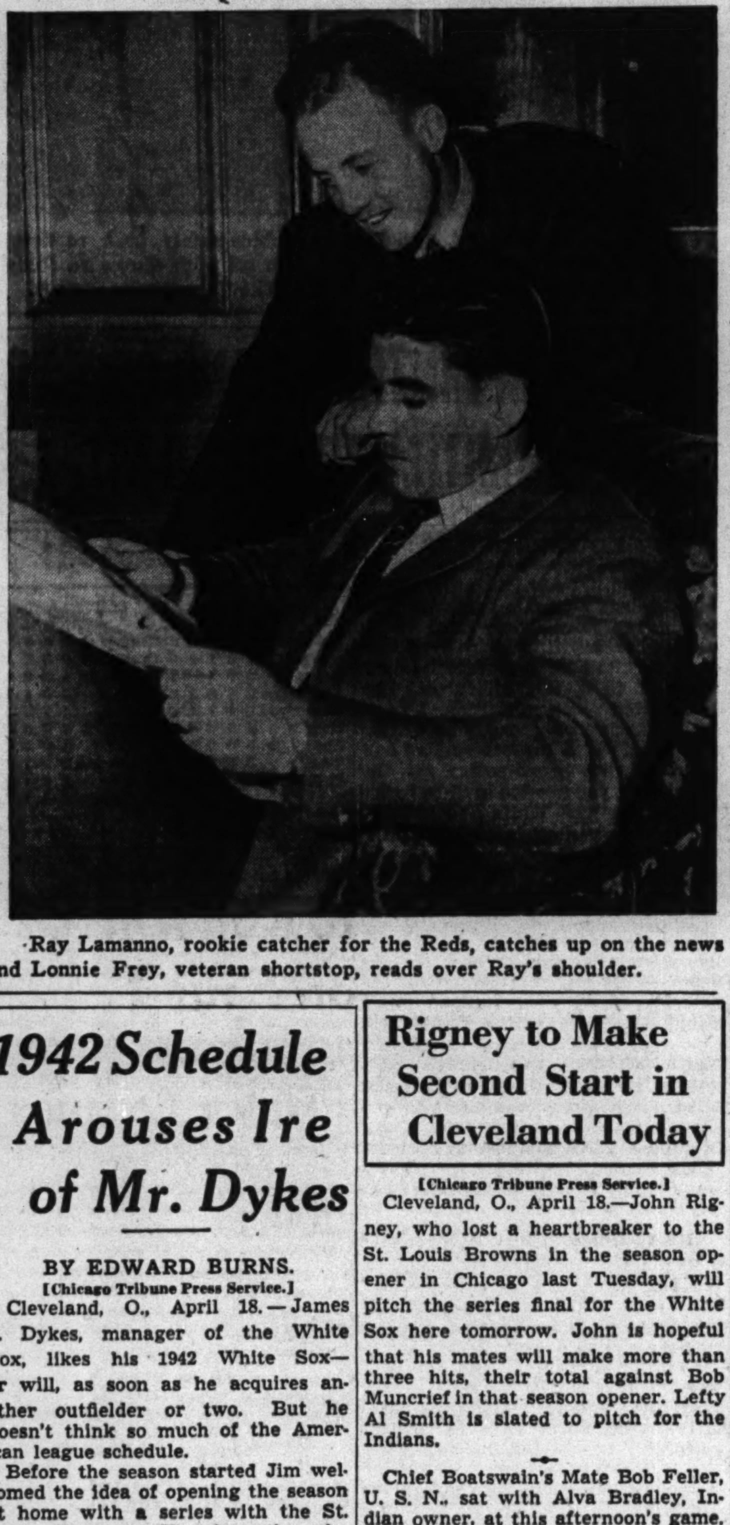
The Cards, of course, have other pitchers. They weren't hurt when they took Harry Gumbert from the Giants last summer. It's possible Bill Terry did them another favor last winter when he turned over Bill Lohrman. Mort Cooper, who took time out last midseason for arm repairs, returned after the operation and proved the surgeons hadn't removed any skill along with the bone chips. There are some others, including Lon Warneke, but Long Lon is getting along in years.

The few who picked the Reds did so without realizing what a job they were placing on Manager Bill McKechnie's shoulders. Deacon Bill will have some pitching but it still takes base hits to produce runs. Give that same Cincinnati pitching to Frankie Frisch's Pirates, who hit pretty well, and you'd see something.

There also is a hitting angle in connection with the Dodgers. They were quite handy with their bats last season, especially in their own park with its short right field wall. It was this wall that induced the Dodgers to take Arky Vaughan from the Pirates. He's a dead right field hitter, so his power is bound to help the present champs.

ARRANGE MIDGET RACES.

A program of six midget auto races has been scheduled for Sunday, May 3, at the Hammond speedway, Hammond, Ind.



Ray Lamanno, rookie catcher for the Reds, catches up on the news and Lonnie Frey, veteran shortstop, reads over Ray's shoulder.

1942 Schedule Arouses Ire of Mr. Dykes

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., April 18.—James J. Dykes, manager of the White Sox, likes his 1942 White Sox—or will, as soon as he acquires another outfielder or two. But he doesn't think so much of the American league schedule.

Before the season started Jim welcomed the idea of opening the season at home with a series with the St. Louis Browns. The last time he opened the season in Comiskey park, in 1940, he saw his lads held to no hits and no runs by Bob Feller as they lost to the Cleveland Indians. So it wasn't the prospect of opening with the Browns that caused him to declare the schedule unfavorable to the Sox.

Has Travel Problems.

Jim is thinking mostly about transportation problems. He, like all other baseball folk, has no complaint to make about traffic difficulties caused by war conditions. But the war is not to blame for the fact that at the end of their first road trip they must make the longest jump in baseball—from Boston to St. Louis, which is farther than from Memphis to Mobile or Natchez to St. Joe, regardless of what your mamma done told you.

In the barnstorming trip back from the coast Mr. Dykes learned that the railroads are not always prepared to furnish dining car service. If the ravenous White Sox have to go from Boston to St. Louis without eating they will go very hungry and perhaps will go crazy as well.

John Anderson, with the White Sox many, many years ago, once subsisted exclusively on bananas on a Boston-St. Louis ride, to pinch down meal money. But he reached St. Louis in a weakened condition and later gained undying fame as the first major leaguer to "steal" an occupied base.

Jim May Go Hungry.

Dykes himself has a more or less famously temperamental stomach and cannot eat cold lunches. If there is no diner on the Boston-St. Louis ride Dykes simply will have to go unfed for a night and a day.

And speaking of food. The biggest squawk players have against night games is that they upset their nourishment routine. And what do the White Sox confront in Washington on next July 9 and July 10 in blistering and overcrowded Washington? Well, in the resumption of the schedule after the two all-star games the Sox will play the Senators in a night game on July 9 and they'll again be under the lights against Clark Griffith's boys the following night. And the next day they play an afternoon game in Washington. They then will move to Philadelphia, where they will play a double header on July 12 and a lamplit game the following night.

And It's Hot Then.

If the weather is like it usually is in Washington and Philadelphia in mid-July the matter of an eating schedule will be absolutely unsolvable July 9 to 13, inclusive. And just think of Mr. Dykes' poor sick stomach, not to mention the perplexity of his hungry athletes.

There are other tough spots in the schedule, including the fact the Sox are the only team booked solid the last week of the season, when a pennant race may be on. But why start worrying about all those other worries? Anticipation of those three night games and a double header in the middle of July are enough to ruin Mr. Dykes before the season goes much farther, regardless of how the umpires behave.

Mr. Dykes faced no such hardships as an enlisted man in World War I. Our heart goes out to him now.

Rigney to Make Second Start in Cleveland Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., April 18.—John Rigney, who lost a heartbreaker to the St. Louis Browns in the season opener in Chicago last Tuesday, will pitch the series final for the White Sox here tomorrow. John is hopeful that his mates will make more than three hits, their total against Bob Muncrief in that season opener. Lefty Al Smith is slated to pitch for the Indians.

Chief Boatswain's Mate Bob Feller, U. S. N., sat with Alva Bradley, Indian owner, at this afternoon's game. The sailorman will be the principal speaker at a rally of a manufacturers' association tomorrow night.

The Sox will return to Chicago tomorrow night for a three game series with the Detroit Tigers beginning Monday. Next Wednesday the teams will go to Detroit. Each team will have one Pullman and will divide a third.

The Indians, tho sympathetic enough when they learned of Thornton Lee's arm trouble, had some difficulty in concealing their satisfaction that they won't have to look at the big lefty's stuff in this series. Lee probably will have a shot at the Indians in Chicago April 25 or 26, however.

Columbus, O., April 18 (AP).—For the first time in history, the American Bowling congress will limit, at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1943, the length of its national tournament and the number of competing teams.

E. H. Baumgarten of Milwaukee, ABC secretary, said today the Buffalo event would be restricted to 50 days and 4,500 five man teams—as compared with the 5,742 teams competing here over a 73 day stretch.

2,400 Already Entered.

Buffalo tourney reservations reached 2,400 today with no Buffalo teams listed. Last year at this time, 2,100 teams had signed up for the current meet.

A possible shortage of tournament pins, draining of team personnel thru the draft and war industry, and inability to obtain the Buffalo site for more than 80 days prompted the curtailments.

Bowling, America's fastest growing sport, also faces a wartime menace, occasioned by a lack of equipment, said Charles [Chuck] Collier, bowling engineer for the Brunswick-Balke-Collender firm which has installed every ABC alley ever laid.

Face Pin Shortage.

"With the government having requisitioned 2,000,000 of our maple pin blocks for the manufacture of shoe lasts, we face a definite shortage," he added.

A survey of Columbus alley owners showed the usual per alley per year pin consumption has been approximately 15 sets.

"It means," Collier said, "that alley operators must do a better job of reconditioning their pins.

Bowling Interest Grows.

"The national emergency hasn't cut into bowling at all to date. Since many defense plants having new leagues which roll at all hours, bowling establishments all over the country have been throwing away their keys to take care of the odd hour businesss."

He also reported these bowling trends: During the last six years the number of alleys certified by the ABC increased from 11,655 to 40,222, and from the 1939-'40 season the number of sanctioned five man teams jumped from 132,000 to 163,000 in 1940-'41.

Wendorf Leads Chicagoans.

Tournament leaders held thier positions during today's rolling as a large contingent of Chicagoans monopolied the tournament lanes.

Paul Wendorf of the Illinois Bell Telephone team shot 649 with an opening game of 256 to lead the Chicago bowlers. Charley Ross had 612 and Herb Collins 605.

In the doubles, Wally Goldammer and Charley Kellner hit 1,242 on games of 407, 412, and 423. Goldammer scored 612 and Kellner 630.

Freitag, Sinke Fall.

Herb Freitag and Joe Sinke, members of the Chicago Pabst team, who won the ABC doubles title two years ago in Detroit, hit only 1,195 today, while Les Fuller and Jules Sowa had 1,170. Sinke and Sowa scored 628 and 627 respectively in the singles. High score in the doubles today was 1,310, by Fred Hoefner and Marck Chafel of Rochester, N. Y.

GIANTS CHECK BRAVES, 8-5, ON LEIBER'S HOMER

Phils Edge Out Dodgers on Home Runs, 2 to 1.

Boston, Mass., April 18 (AP).—With the score tied in the ninth inning, Hank Leiber blasted a home run with two out and two mates on the bases to give the New York Giants an 8 to 5 victory over the Boston Braves. It was the first loss of the National league season for the Braves, who had won four games.

Ace Adams, who took over the New York pitching when the braves chased Starter Bob Carpenter with a four run outburst which tied the score in the seventh, earned credit for the victory. The victim of Leiber's blow was Frank Lamanna, the last of three Boston hurlers.

The Giants got four runs in the first three innings off Al Javery, two of them on a home run by Willard Marshall, who drove in three of the New York tallies for the day. Score:

PHILS TRIP DODGERS, 2 TO 1.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 18 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phils, losers of their first four games, found the victory road today as they squeezed out a 2 to 1 decision over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

With Rube Melton holding the Dodgers to four hits, the Phils cashed in on home runs by Nick Etten and Rookie Ron Northey to produce the triumph.

The Dodgers scored their run in the third, Peewee Reese walked and beat Melton's throw to second on Hugh Casey's bunt. Augie Galan then singled to score Reese.

Casey, who worked the first seven innings for the Dodgers, was the victim of both Philadelphia homers, Etten's in the fourth and Northey's in the seventh.

PIRATES BLANK CARDS, 3-0.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 18 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates moved into a tie for the league lead today as Lefty Ken Heintzelman blanked the St. Louis Cardinals, 3 to 0, yielding only five hits.

The Pirates put together three hits and the first of five St. Louis errors to score all their runs in the third inning. Catcher Al Lopez singled, Heintzelman fanned, and Pete Coscarart was safe on Jimmy Brown's bobble. Maurice Van Robays doubled, scoring Lopez; Bob Elliott popped out, and Vince DiMaggio was given an intentional pass. Elbie Fletcher then singled, scoring Coscarart and Van Robays.

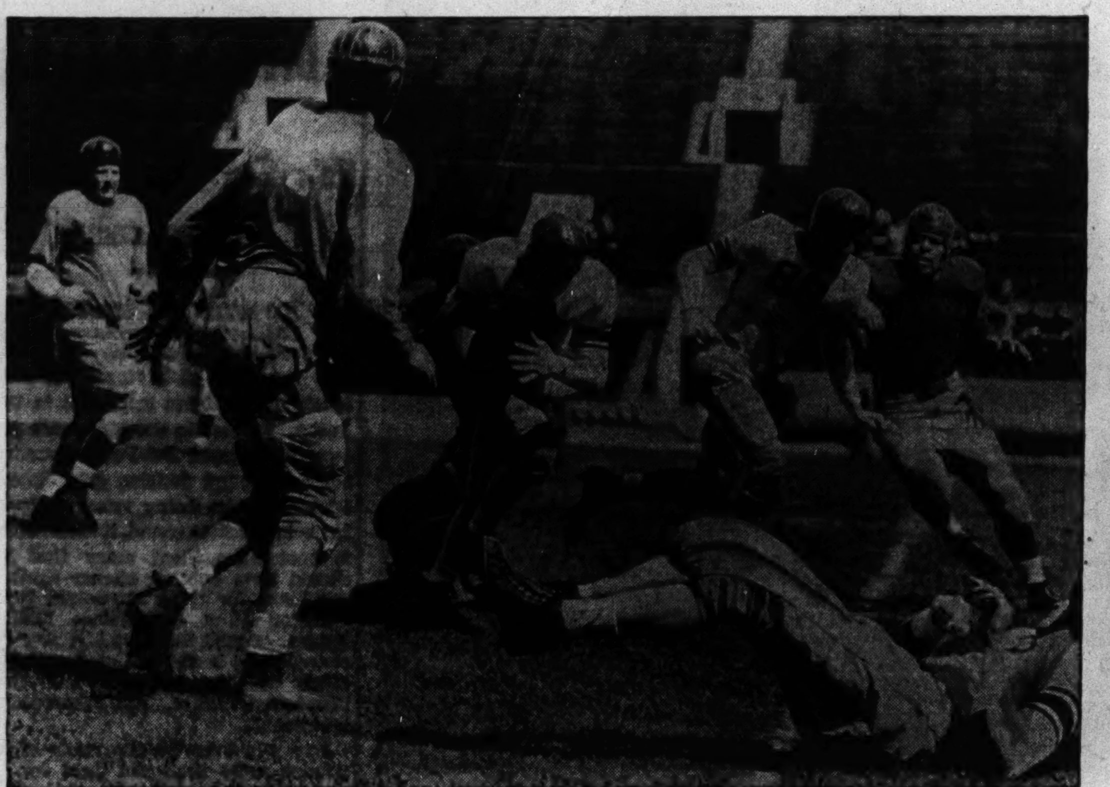
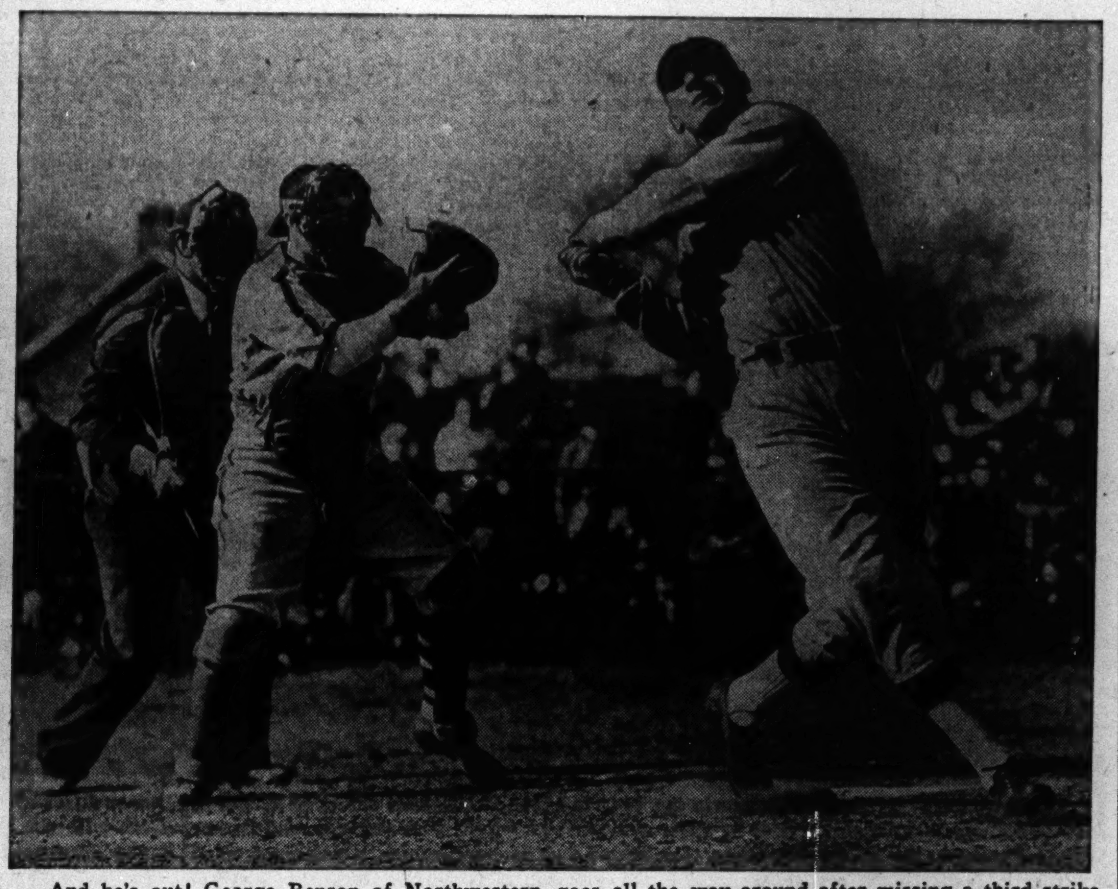
THIS WILDCAT WENT DOWN—AND THIS WILD CAT WENT OUT!



Joe Scriba, shifty Wildcat freshman back, gets away for a short gain yesterday afternoon in an intra-squad football game in Dyche stadium. Scriba's running was outstanding. He scored one touchdown and made several long runs.



And he's out! George Benson of Northwestern goes all the way around after missing a third strike in the fifth inning of the baseball game with Chicago. The catcher is Bob Miller. The Wildcats beat the Maroons, 10 to 6, to sweep the two game series.

Frosh Backs Star in First N. U. Practice

A quartet of freshman backs who will be candidates for Northwestern's varsity next fall sparkled in an intra-squad game in Dyche stadium yesterday. The game, which was the first of three to be played during spring practice, marked the public unveiling of the Wildcats' experiment with the T formation.

Joe Scriba, a shifty, hard running half back from Owosso, Mich., and Larry Adelman, full back, brother of Ollie Adelman, Wildcat star of five years ago, led the White team to a 14 to 13 victory over the Purple. The Purple attack was featured by the running and passing of Harry Franck, brother of George Franck, former Minnesota star, and Jim Fairchild, freshman half back from Denver, Colo.

Scriba Scores First.

Scriba put the Whites in the lead in the first quarter on a number of long runs, finally going over from the 6 yard line on an off tackle smash. Bob Wallis, veteran end, converted. Shortly before the end of the half, Adelman smashed over center for fifteen yards and a touchdown and Wallis again converted.

The Purple scores came in the second half as Fairchild went over from the 5 yard line and Franck swept right end for fifteen yards and a touchdown.

Other freshmen backs who turned in favorable performances were Nick Vodick, half back from South Bend, and John Winter, full back from Evanston.

Both Use T Formation.

Both teams lined up in the T formation after coming out of the huddle. On some plays the back field would shift into the familiar single wing formation. At other times the play would start on a direct pass to a half back or full back while in the T alignment. Starting lineups:

SPENCER COALS TO HOLD FIRST TRYOUTS TODAY

First practice of the season has been called by the Spencer Coals, last of Chicago's major semi-pro baseball teams, for this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Spencer field, 4200 North Central avenue. Nate Shyer, who is starting his 18th season as business manager of the club, says that tryouts will be given all new applicants who report.

The Coals, winners of numerous championships, including the Illinois state semi-pro tournament, Tri-State league, Central States league, and Chicago semi-pro title, will open their home season on Sunday, May 17. An attractive schedule has been lined up, which includes games with the Great Lakes Naval Training station, Chanute field, Fort Custer, Mich., House of David, and outstanding Negro league clubs.

Pitcher Bill Stevens and Outfielder Stan Klores of last year's Spencer team are now serving in the United States navy. Two others awaiting call into the service are Pitcher Bill Williams and Outfielder Mike Posiak.

Big Six Teams Take Kansas Relays Honors

Lawrence, Kas., April 18 (AP).—The Kansas relays felt the shakeup created by the war in college athletics at its 20th running today.

Only 3,000 spectators sat in on the meet, which for the first time in the memory of track followers failed to produce a record bettering performance.

The cinder track was fairly heavy. The field was considerably limited by curtailment of expenses, and even the decathlon, a traditional attraction, was suspended this year.

Three Tie For Pole Vault Title.

The pole vault, heralded for a new ceiling, was a disappointment. Bill Williams of Wisconsin, Jack De Field of Minnesota, and Harold Hunt of Nebraska wound up in a tie for first with leaps of 13 feet, 5¾ inches. The record is 14 feet, 2 inches.

Big Six conference schools dominated the university relays classes as well as the special events, collecting firsts in 7 out of a possible 13 events together with a string of seconds.

In the college events Cornell college of Mount Vernon, Ia., whose director of athletics is Glen Cunningham, Kansas' famous miler and honorary referee of today's affair, won the distance medley.

Indiana Wins Relays.

Two of the university relays—the two mile and four mile—went to Indiana of the Western conference. Minnesota collected a second in the two mile—the only school running against the Hoosiers—and saw it's discus man, Bob Fitch, win that event with a toss of 158 feet 9½ inches. It was a dozen feet shy of the record.

Oklahoma Aggies carted off a share of honors. Don Boydston won the high jump by clearing a comparatively short 6 feet 3½ inches; Ralph Tate broad jumped 23 feet 11½ inches, and Tate, Harold Burke, Jackie Taylor, and Foster Johnson brought in a first in the mile university relay. The time was 3:21.2.

Big Day for Big Six Schools.

Big Six schools made a big day of it. Bill Smutz of Nebraska won the 120 yard high hurdles in :14.8 after a poor start. He beat his teammate, Bill King by less than a foot.

Orv Mathews of Oklahoma scooted to victory in the 100 yard dash, beating off a challenge midway by Missouri's Don Walters. His time was :09.8, four-tenths of a second off the accepted relay mark.

With Walters anchoring the team after a short rest, Missouri cruised to a first in the half mile relay.

Lyda Leads Oklahoma to Victories.

Bill Lyda paced Oklahoma to victory in the sprint medley and distance medley. He anchored the 880 distance in the sprint, taking the baton five yards behind Nebraska's Bobby Ginn and finishing ahead by 10 yards. He ran a leg in the distance medley, making up a 40 yard deficit before handing the stick to Anchor Man Dick Smethers who finished 25 yards in front.

Missouri won the quarter mile relay with Joggerst, Crawford, Shy, and Walters doing the honors, and also saw Big Elmer Aussieker push the shot 49 feet, 1 inch for first place.

Best relay of the day was between Indiana and Minnesota in the four mile. Paul Kendall, Hoosiers' anchor, beat out the Gophers' Forrest Jamieson by seven yards after a burst of speed in the last 220 yards. Summaries:

FINE, SUSPEND HAL SCHUMACHER FOR PART IN ROW

New York, April 18 (AP).—President Ford Frick of the National league today fined Pitcher Hal Schumacher of the Giants $50 and suspended him for five days for his part in the rumpus with Umpire Zizzy Sears in Boston yesterday.

Frick explained that the fine and suspension were automatic in view of the league's rule against a player placing hands on an umpire. No action was taken against Manager Mel Ott and Shortstop Bill Jurges, who were thrown out of the game along with Schumacher, but Frick said he was making a more detailed investigation.

MacMitchell to Run Anchor on Four Teams

Philadelphia, Pa., April 18 [Special]. —Leslie MacMitchell, one of the world's most brilliant mile runners, will carry the anchor leg baton for New York university in four championship races in the 48th annual University of Pennsylvania Relay carnival on April 24 and 25 on Franklin field, his New York university coach, Emil Von Elling, announced today.

The former New York City schoolboy champion, whose versatility on the track has earned him the distinction of being the best all-around runner in the world, ran five races in the relays last year and breasted the tape first in three of them.

Maps Tough Schedule.

Holder of the IC4A cross-country championship, as well as many other titles, MacMitchell will run on Friday, the first day of the carnival, in the distance medley and sprint medley races and on Saturday, the final day of the meet, in the two and four mile races.

Enough time will elapse between races on each day to give MacMitchell sufficient rest. Last year, he ran a 4:13.6 mile to bring his team home first in the distance medley and a 1:54.1 half mile to garner the sprint medley title. He ran a 4:09.4 mile to win the four mile championship race and did a 48.3 quarter mile to finish a bare three-tenths of a second behind Campbell Kane of Indiana in the one mile race.

MacMitchell also competed in the two mile race, but dropped out after the first 100 yards because his team was so far behind that he regarded it as hopeless to attempt to make up the lost distance.

Stopped by Dodds.

This winter MacMitchell has run brilliantly, losing only once, to Gil Dodds. His best times for the distance were 4:07.8 and 4:08. He won 18 consecutive mile races until defeated by Dodds in the AAU meet and later twice defeated his chief rival in near record breaking time.

Von Elling has a strong group of runners in addition to MacMitchell who will run with the star in the relays. New York university will compete in eight championship races, including both sprints, the freshman mile, and the championship mile, in addition to the four races in which MacMitchell is scheduled to start.

Eight individuals will represent New York university in the special events on the program.

Bobby Jones to Play in Hale America Regional Golf

Atlanta, Ga., April 18 (AP).—Altho exempt from qualifying tests, Bobby Jones will enter regional elimination matches for the Hale America golf tournament just for the fun of it. Supplanting the war-canceled national open, the tournament will let in Jones and 19 others, former winners of major encounters. The regional and sectional tests here will be over East Lake course, where Jones consistently shoots under par.

RECORD FIELD ENTERS ANNUAL DRAKE RELAYS

2 Day Meet Opens Friday in Des Moines.

A record field of university and college athletes will compete in the 33d relay carnival which will be held Friday and Saturday by Drake university in Des Moines, Ia. Rationing problems that have canceled many sports events and curtailed others have increased competition in the Drake relays, according to Bill Easton, Bulldog track coach who is directing the great midwestern games for the second year.

"Our entries are at least 10 per cent ahead of last year," Easton said in commenting on the prospect for another spectacular program. "Colleges and universities that have been forced to eliminate some meets have nearly all concentrated on the major competitions. Drake is fortunate that the annual relays have been so thoroly developed that it is a must for the spring."

Entries Are Widespread.

Entries include practically all of the midwestern track stars. The south and southwest will have more athletes in the games than ever and the far west also may be represented. All of the Western conference teams, with the exception of Indiana, have entered. The Big Six and the Missouri Valley conferences are enrolled 100 per cent. The outstanding independents in the central states, Michigan State, Marquette, and Notre Dame, have entered teams.

From Texas come the University of Texas, Texas A. & M., Rice Institute, and East Texas State Teachers. Tentatively listed are San José State and Sacramento Junior college from the Pacific coast.

The field in the 120 yard high hurdles is a good example of the balance in this year's Drake meet. This group includes Bob Wright, Ohio State's hurdle champion; Charley Hlad of Michigan Normal who whipped the national champion, Fred Wolcott, in an indoor race in New York this winter; Roy Bucek, Texas Aggies; Bob Saunders, Miami [O.] university; Bill Dillon, Notre Dame, and Rex Cummins of Rice.

Wolcott Holds Record.

Wolcott holds the Drake hurdle record of 14.2 seconds and he won this event three consecutive years at the relays. Given good weather and a fast track Wright, Hlad, or perhaps one of the southern stars may tie or break the record established four years ago.

It is doubtful if there will be such a wholesale rearrangement of records as a year ago, however, since many of the marks already have been advanced beyond reach of the average performer. Last year four university relay records were established, three college relay marks were bettered, two college relay records were tied, and Al Blozis, giant weight man from Georgetown university, set a meet record of 161 feet 5 inches in the discus throw. Blozis failed to beat the shot put mark of 55 feet 1½ inches which Jack Torrance of Louisiana State set in 1934.

High Jump Record Oldest.

With the exception of the high jump record, Torrance's shot put mark is the oldest in the Drake book. An exception should be made, perhaps, in the 100 yard dash since the record of 9:5 seconds first was made by Roland Locke of Nebraska in 1926. It was tied by Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette in 1932, and by Jesse Owens of Ohio State in 1935. That same year Owens set the broad jump record of 26 feet 1¾ inches and a month later established the world record of 26 feet 8¼ inches in the Big Ten meet in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Harold Osborn high jumped 6 feet 6 inches in 1922 and since then no competitor has equaled the effort, altho several have failed by a fraction of an inch. Jim Milne, Michigan State's Central collegiate champion; Keith O'Rourke of Notre Dame, Don Boydston of Oklahoma A. & M., and Bob Christopher of Rice top the field in the high jump this week.

Other Stars Listed.

Some of the other stars in the individual events are:

100 YARD DASH—Lee Farmer, Iowa, Big Ten indoor champion; Orville Matthews, Oklahoma; Howard Millen, Marquette.

BROAD JUMP—Farmer, Iowa; Ralph Tate, Oklahoma A. & M.; Dallas Dupre, Ohio State.

POLE VAULT—Harold Hunt, Nebraska; Bill Williams, Wisconsin; Jack DeField, Minnesota.

DISCUS THROW — Bob Fitch, Minnesota; Don Welcher, Drake; Howard Debus and Edsel Wibbels, Nebraska.

SHOT PUT — Debus, Nebraska; Welcher, Drake; Jim Delaney, Notre Dame; Bob Beierly, Wisconsin; Elmer Aussieker, Missouri.

JAVELIN THROW—Travis Cook, East Texas State Teachers; Debus, Nebraska; Don Cheatham, Texas.

TWO MILES—Oliver Hunter, Notre Dame; Bob Ginn, Nebraska; Dale Smithers, Oklahoma; Davey Griffith, Drake.

GETS CALL TO NAVY.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 18 [Special].—Jack Olson, Della, Wis., track and football star, competed for Western Michigan college, against Chicago in track today, for the last time. He received orders to report at Norfolk, Va., Monday to enroll in a navy physical education course. He is a senior.

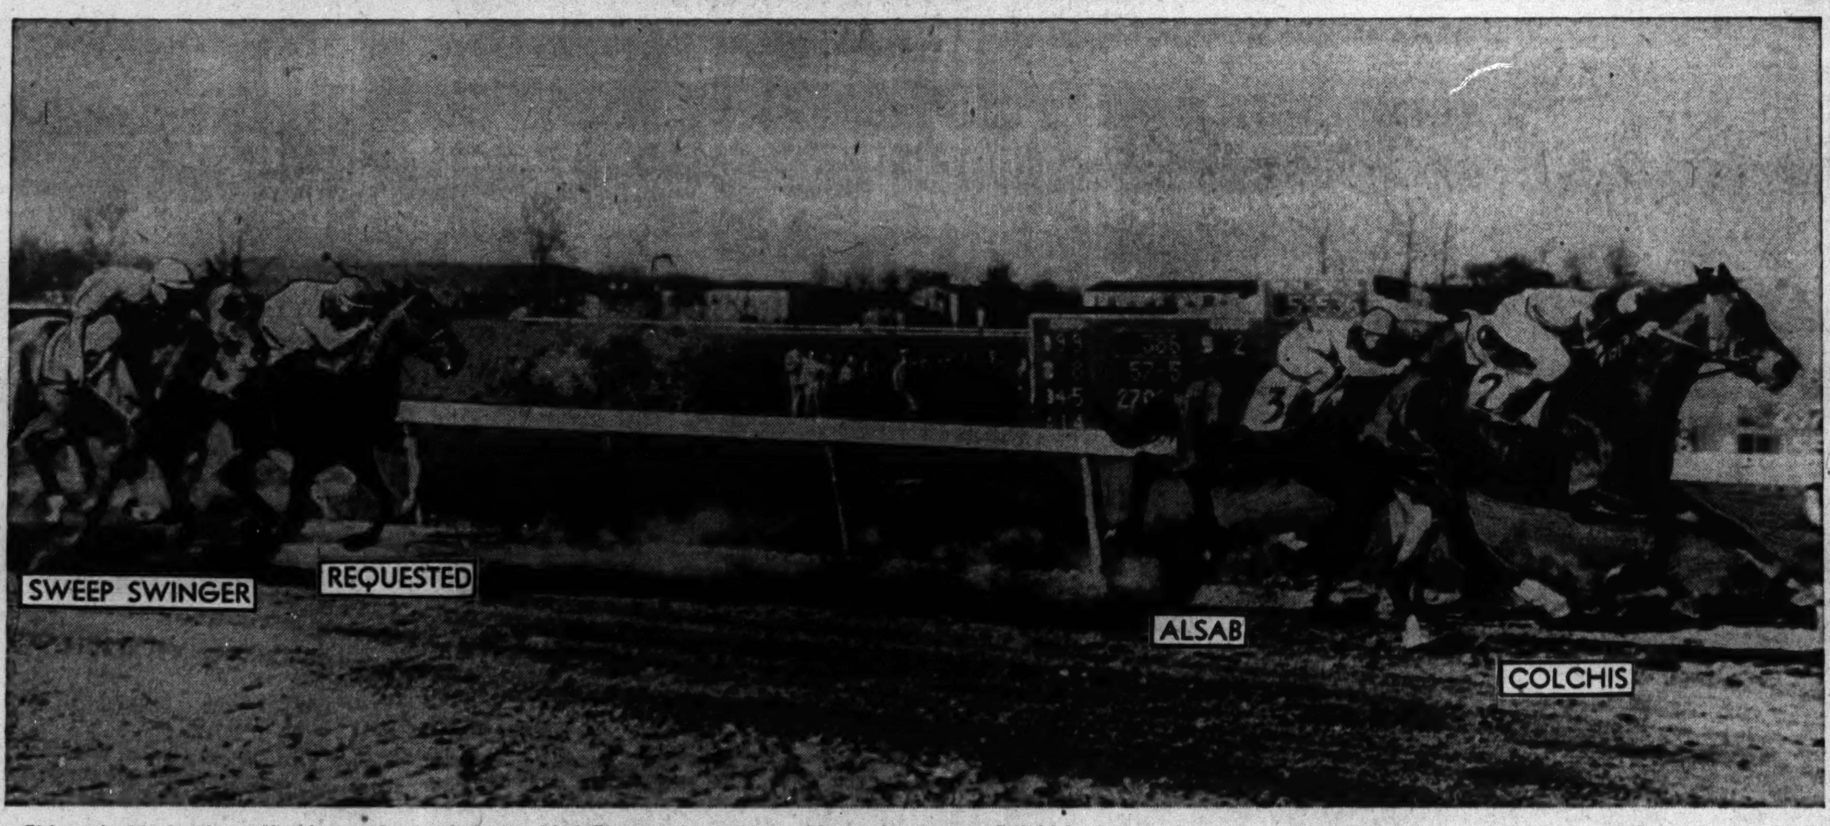
ALSAB IS BEATEN AGAIN, BUT THIS ISN'T THE DERBY



Chicago's Alsab tries valiantly to win the $15,000 added Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace yesterday, but Colchis scores by three-quarters of a length after going around Owner Al Sabath's Kentucky Derby candidate. Requested and Sweep Swinger, which were third and fourth, respectively, are so far behind they almost miss getting into the picture. It was Colchis' second victory over the Chicago-owned Derby candidate in a week, but Alsab will not have to contend with Colchis at Churchill Downs. The latter is entered in the Preakness instead.

CHICAGO RACE SEASON OPENS NEXT SATURDAY

Sportsman's Park to Hold 19 Day Meeting.

Drop Train Service

RACE fans who plan to visit visit Sportsman's Park during the meeting opening next Saturday will have to rely on the elevated lines, buses, street cars, or their automobiles for transportation. Officials of the Illinois Central railroad which has operated special trains to Sportsman's and nearby Hawthorne in the past, announced yesterday that it had been forced to abandon the service because of the government's demand for coaches. Railroads serving the other Chicago tracks have made no curtailment plans.

Thorobred horse racing pays its first visit to the Chicagoland district next Saturday, when Sportsman's Park opens a 19 day spring meeting to be followed by meetings at four other race tracks in the vicinity and winding up at the Cicero plant on Nov. 1.

Many outstanding racing establishments from California, New Orleans, Florida and local stables have asked for stalls at Sportsman's which indicates that the caliber of horses that will run is above those who competed at previous meetings.

One of the leading California outfits is in charge of Trainer Bill Molter who has 20 horses quartered at Hawthorne, which is caring for the overflow. Among Molter's charges is E. A. C. Berger's Boots and Spur, a Kentucky Derby candidate, which Molter has already shipped to Churchill Downs for the classic on May 2. The Derby eligible will be returned to Sportsman's Park.

Joe W. Brown Returns.

Another newcomer to Sportsman's this season is A. E. Silver, who has 12 horses belonging to Eddie [Rochester] Anderson, the radio comedian. They arrived from Riverside, Cal., the other day.

Joe W. Brown, the New Orleans sportsman who has a good array of horses in his stable, is returning to the west side track for the first time in eight years. Butsey Hernandez, another successful owner-trainer, has 19 horses here.

Ivan Parke, who trains J. A. Kinard's string of 14, including Bold Chance, another Kentucky Derby candidate, is also on hand for the local meeting.

Many Newcomers Noted.

Other stables here for the first time are: Frank Brophy of Phoenix, Ariz.; C. W. Pardee of Arizona, Walter Parman of California, C. A. Strouss' Attandena stable of California, Neil Rasmussen of San Clemente, Cal., and Frank Trotsek of Florida.

The Illinois contingent is headed by Mrs. Emil Denemark of the west side, who has 30 horses stabled at Sportsman's. The Hill Top stock farm, Mrs. Bob McGarvey, Bennett Creech, C. E. Davison, Clyde Troutt, Ruth Sidell, Mrs. E. Oros, Jacobson and Hough, Eldorado Farm, James Emery, Wesley Sears, Ben Rosenheim and C. H. Dursch are among the other Illinois owners.

MADISON WEST WINS OWN RELAY CARNIVAL TITLE

Madison, Wis., April 18 [Special].—Four individual records were smashed this afternoon as Madison West scored in every event to pile up 53 7-10 points and retain the championship of its own relay carnival.

Green Bay West was second, with 41 points; Whitefish Bay third, with 38 1-10; La Crosse Central fourth with 33, and Beloit fifth, with 30. Eleven schools competed.

Waller Takes $10,000 Event at Jamaica

New York, April 18 (AP).—Waller, lightly weighted and lightly regarded 4 year old, came thru with an unexpected victory in the $10,000 Excelsior handicap at Jamaica today as the crowd of 36,496 established a track betting mark of $1,698,099.

Waller, carrying only 105 pounds and owned by John C. Clark who is the president of Florida's Hialeah park, shot between horses in a thrilling stretch drive to win in 1:46 4-5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

His owner took the purse of $8,775, while the scattered backers of the winner received $52.70 for each $2 invested in a mutuel ticket.

Former Betting Mark, $1,361,704.

The former track record for betting, $1,361,704, was set a year ago at the running of the Wood Memorial. It was surpassed today after the first six races.

Another lightweight, Olympus from the Barrington stable, defeated T. H. Heard Jr.'s Boysy by a nose. Boysy was made the favorite after Market Wise was scratched. For second money, Pictor, the Maryland star, never was a serious contender while Sir Marlboro, Tropical handicap winner, stopped badly after forcing the early pace.

Waller Gets Away Last.

With Billy Thompson in the saddle, Waller got away last and had only one horse beaten around the final bend. But then he came like a streak to win in a drive.

Three Kentucky Derby candidates were beaten by the Wheatley stable's Eire in the mile and sixteenth $2,000 Class C handicap. Setting all the pace, Eire beat Domingo, L. B. Mayer's imported Derby hope, by a nose and returned $13.50 for $2. W. W. Crenshaw's Opening Bid showed the way to Saku and Wait A Bit, other Derby candidates.

FITNESS HIKERS WILL MEET TODAY IN SKOKIE WOODS

A mass hike this afternoon in the Skokie and Somme preserves, sponsored by the Division of Physical Fitness, will open Youth Week in Chicago. The main body of hikers will meet at Winnetka Village hall at 4 o'clock, then proceed to the hike's starting point, the parking space on the north side of Willow road 1½ miles west of Winnetka.

The North Western railway and the North Shore electric line provide transportation to Winnetka. The North Western train leaves the North Western station, 500 West Madison street, 3:15 p. m. and arrives in Winnetka at 3:50.

The South Shore train leaves Adams and Wabash at 3 p. m. and arrives in Winnetka at 3:46. Round trip fares on both lines are 75 cents plus a five cent tax.

Fifty students from the Navy Aviation Training school at Navy pier will take part in the hike. Sailors and hikers who bring their lunch will eat a picnic supper in the Winnetka Community house. Supper will be served to the sailors by the Winnetka USO committee.

ILLINOIS STATE LEAGUE TO OPEN SEASON MAY 17

Pekin, Ill., April 18 [Special].—The Illinois State Baseball league will inaugurate its season on May 17, according to announcement by President C. F. Boyer. Representatives of eight teams have posted forfeits for the coming campaign with Boyer.

Clubs entered are the Canton Fans, Pekin, East Peoria, Delavan, Tremont, Peoria, Canton Newmans, and Glasford. The opening day schedule: Canton Fans at Pekin, East Peoria at Delavan, Tremont at Peoria, and Glasford at Canton Newmans. The closing date is Sept. 13.

Allen, Colan Battle Heads Chicago Card

A 10 round bout between Johnny Colan, New York light heavyweight, and Altus Allen of Chicago will head this week's schedule. The match is set for Friday in the Coliseum.

There also will be a show in Marigold Gardens tomorrow, featured by three contests of eight rounds. These will bring together Joe Maxin, Cleveland, 178 pound boxer, and Frank Greene, Chicago; Ernie Pelaia, Beaver Falls, Pa., welterweight, and Johnny Rozina, Milwaukee, and Billy Pierce, West Allis, Wis., middleweight, and Luther Brent, Chicago. In addition Johnny Abbott, Cleveland 147 pounder, is paired with Tito Taylor in five rounds, and Dickie Miller, Peoria featherweight, is matched with Vito Rizzo in four.

Colan Will Rest Today.

Colan, who won six previous starts in this city, all by knockouts, sparred three rounds with Nate Bolden in Trafton's gymnasium yesterday for the second straight time, but he will be given a vacation today. Johnny expects to make Allen his seventh straight Chicago victim. Veteran observers, however believe the Manhattan fighter may encounter a surprise package in Allen.

Allen, 1939 International Golden Gloves heavyweight champion, appeared to be a promising prospect until he was stopped in two rounds by Booker Beckwith in the Stadium a year ago. After knocking out Johnny Kapovich in six rounds, also in the Stadium, last Aug. 27, Allen was given a rest by his manager, Dr. William Allen.

Seven months later Allen returned to action under a new trainer in Larry Amadee, former conditioner for John Henry Lewis, former world light heavyweight title holder. His performance while beating Selman Martin on that occasion was impressive. Recently he gave another good account of himself by knocking out Al Reiss, Detroit punch absorber, in the first round.

Allen Outweighs Colan.

Because of his improved form and due to a weight advantage of approximately 15 pounds [Allen weighed 190 against Reiss and Colan carried 175 while stopping Jimmy Webb in Madison Square Garden last month] Colan is expected to have his hands full come Friday.

Supporting matches will include two at eight rounds, one at six, and one at four rounds. The eight round events involve Charley Burley, Pittsburgh welterweight, and Joe Sutka, Wyandotte, Mich., middleweight, and Joey Pirrone, Cleveland lightweight, and Julie Kogan, New York.

Altho the Maxin-Greene match in the Marigold arena tomorrow is listed as the windup, the Rozina-Pelaia fight may well steal the show. In six earlier fights in the north side club Pelaia scored three victories, fougt to two draw decisions, and lost one. Among his victims are Carman Notch, Don Wallenfang, and Jimmy Pierce. In his last Chicago appearance Rozina knocked out Tito Taylor in the third round, March 23.

Wrestling shows will be offered in White City tomorrow and Marigold Gardens Tuesday. Jack Bloomfield, New York heavyweight, will clash with Ken Fenlon in White City, while George Macricostas will encounter Rudy Strongberg in the Marigold club.

WINTON TAKES GRAND NATIONAL STEEPLECHASE

Hereford, Md., April 18 (AP).—The white and cherry hoops and sleeves of Stuart S. Janney Jr., today presented a definite threat to the Maryland Hunt cup next Saturday as his 8 year old brown gelding, Winton, romped away with the 43d running of the Grand National point-to-point, two and a half lengths to the good.

Winton, winner of My Lady's Manor steeplechase by 25 lengths last week, took the lead at the 10th fence in today's 3-mile, 17-barrier affair, and held on to finish with little difficulty, in 6 minutes and 35 seconds.

A. I. Meigs' Coq Noir was second, with John E. Hughes' Virginia veteran, Field Glass, third.

Blockade, the great Maryland hunt champion, returning to timber competition after a two year layoff, ran fourth. His rider, J. Fred Colwill, said the famous son of Man o' War would go in the Maryland Hunt cup next week.

Janney said there was "a lot of pace" in the early part of today's Grand National, run over a fast course before about 5,000 persons. Winton won the Grand National a year ago.

PASTOR PROVES HIS COURAGE IN BIVINS BATTLE

He's Too Light, Tho, to Menace Louis.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., April 18.—Cleveland saw the kind of a riproaring ring battle that satisfies last night in the Arena. But while the customers got complete value as Bob Pastor pounded out a 10 round decision over Jimmy Bivins, despite being knocked down twice in the first round, it is doubtful if Pastor convinced many that he should have another chance against Joe Louis for the heavyweight title.

Pastor is a courageous, skilled fighter. Pound for pound, it may be conceded he is as good as Joe Louis, albeit he does not pack the same brand of dynamite. But Pastor lacks the pounds.

Last night he weighed only eight pounds more than the light heavyweight limit of 175, and, while Bob cannot make the lower weight class, he certainly is too light for any 200 pounder as agile as the champion. Even if Louis were shorn of his crushing weapons, it may be debated whether Pastor could outpoint him. Billy Conn is the only man who has in five years. And Conn finally was knocked out.

Billy Has First Choice.

Conn is next on Louis' list and it is problematical if Louis will fight again this summer. If he whips Conn, and the army permits, Pastor is in line for a match, but only because there are no new challengers.

Mike Jacobs was due in Cleveland today, according to Johnny Ray, Conn's manager, who saw last night's bout. Whether Jacobs and Ray make any announcement or not, they will discuss the date of the Conn-Louis fight. It will be held in New York, of course, and it may be held June 12, June 18, or possibly early in July.

Larry Atkins, Cleveland matchmaker, definitely is interested in holding a Pastor-Louis bout here. There are many difficulties, not the least of which is Jacobs' control of the champion and this will mean control of Conn if Billy should defeat Louis.

Bob May Go West.

Pastor may fight next month on the Pacific coast in a charity show, so Manager Jimmy Johnston said yesterday. Bob will continue to fight steadily, but his immediate program does not include a match with Melio Bettina, who last week defeated Booker Beckwith in Chicago. If Pastor were offered $25,000, a well nigh prohibitive guarantee, he would change his mind, but Johnston admitted the fighter has asked $25,000 because he doesn't want the match.

"A victory would not help Pastor. Bob would win," Johnston said, "but it would not be an interesting bout."

Atkins doesn't want a Pastor-Bettina fight in Cleveland, for now he is concentrating on producing a Bivins-Gus Lesnevich bout for the 175 pound title. Bivins was beaten soundly by Pastor, but he held firmly to his reputation as a dangerous fighter by his first round attack. Cleveland still is certain Bivins is the best light heavyweight in the world. Moreover, Jimmy entered the ring last night at 1 to 2 and it was no surprise to his followers when he failed in 10 rounds. They applauded the opening round, when a terrific left and right dropped Pastor for three seconds and another left hook to the jaw sent Bob to the floor again for a count of two.

Body Blows Decide It.

Bivins won the second round easily and was even in the fifth. But Pastor's body attack, for which Bivins had no sound defense, and Bob's short punches to the head in the closing periods piled up the winning points. Even so, the decision was not unanimous. The referee and one judge followed the above division of rounds. The other judge voted Bivins had won five rounds, lost four, and tied one.

Paid attendance was 12,742. Gross receipts were $47,026.40, a sum only exceeded in the series of 10 fights promoted in the Arena in 18 months by the $52,448.60 collected less than two months ago when Pastor knocked out Lem Franklin. Pastor received 37½ per cent of the net receipts, which will approximate $37,000. Bivins received 21¼ per cent.

Howells of the South Shore [Milwaukee] Yacht club, runner-up, will be back. The Great Lakes regatta of the National one-design class was awarded to the Michigan City [Ind.] Yacht club for Aug. 15-16.

SERVING CHICAGO FOR 94 YEARS

NEW LOCATION IS SOUGHT FOR ANNUAL REGATTA

Stewards Consider Shift to Syracuse.

New York, April 18 (AP).—The Intercollegiate Rowing association's regatta, rowed on the Hudson river, except for two years, since its inauguration in 1895, may be shifted this year. Onondaga lake at Syracuse is the most likely site if the crews do not return to Poughkeepsie.

Several members of the board of stewards met last night but made no definite decision pending reports from other members.

"We will have no announcement until the first part of next week," Secretary Asa Bushnell said. "The stewards went over the situation with the idea of holding the race where there will be the greatest saving to the colleges."

It was learned, however, the stewards considered, in addition to Poughkeepsie, Onondaga lake, the Severn river at Annapolis, and Lake Cayuga, where the race was held in 1920. The only other time it has been away from the Hudson was in 1898, when it was rowed at Saratoga lake.

Altho it probably would be necessary to reduce the distance of the varsity race from four to three miles if held on Onondaga, it was believed the stewards favored that site over the Severn and Cayuga if they do not elect to return to Poughkeepsie. The waters of Cayuga are famous for kicking up at the most unexpected times, while the Severn does not offer as fine a course for a large field as either the Hudson or Onondaga.

Costs More on Hudson.

Bushnell pointed out it naturally cost more for the colleges to train on the Hudson since they have their boathouses to maintain and the training period usually lasts several weeks. If held at any other site, the training period probably would be reduced and the facilities of the host college used to house equipment.

The observation train, annually used at Poughkeepsie, has been dismantled, but Bushnell said he believed other provisions could be made for spectators. Backers of the Syracuse site would erect bleachers and permit automobiles to park in the state park bordering the course. There also is the question whether the navy department would approve holding the race on the Hudson and whether the coöperation of the coast guard could be had for policing the course.

Three Crews Interested.

Washington and California, one of them the winner of eight of the last nine varsity races, and Wisconsin indicated that they plan again to challenge the eastern crews and are waiting only a definite site and date before announcing their plans. Either June 13, 15 or 16 is the proposed date if it is held at Poughkeepsie.

Sloop Racing Hit 3 Ways by Spread of War

With fleets of racing sloops organized on every continent, including Australia, the International Star Class Yacht Racing association has been hit three ways by the spread of war. In many ports where the 22 foot Star boats were sailed entire fleets have been wrecked by bombs, as in Manila, Batavia, England, Pearl Harbor, Germany, England, Italy, and France.

In the United States and Canada, war needs have closed several coastal harbors and taken many of its best skippers . . . for the navy and coast guard.

The 2,116 Star class yachts are found in 22 nations, almost every one at war. As a result, 51 of the 137 Star fleets are on leave of absence, suspended because of the impossibility of racing.

Relaxation for Navies.

The world's navies a few years ago found the Star class a relaxation for their officers and crews as well as training in small boat handling. The German navy had four Star fleets and the Luftwaffe even had its "Flotte" at Aldershof, near Berlin. The Dutch, Italian, Roumanian, French, Estonian, and Danish navies also had active fleets. But so does the English navy, whose Royal Naval Sailing association fleets are based at Gosport, the Solent, and Malta [the latter has probably been destroyed].

The United States navy's Star fleet has scheduled races this summer at Annapolis, and the Coast Guard has a fleet of eight Stars at New London.

Titles Decided at Kiel.

The 1939 world championship of the Star class was sailed at Kiel, Germany, a few weeks before Germany's army began its war march. Stars representing the German navy's Star fleets competed in the regatta. Walter von Hutschler, a civilian yachtsman of the Hamburg fleet, won the title.

Ordinarily the subsequent annual world Star series is sailed on the home waters of the winner's fleet, but war cancelled Germany's right to the 1940 regatta. It was held on the Pacific coast, in California, and again last year.

Harry Nye Jr. of the Chicago Yacht club, who has consistently placed either second or third almost every year in the series recently, last summer invited the Star association to conduct the 1942 regatta in Chicago. The series is scheduled to be sailed here August 23-29.

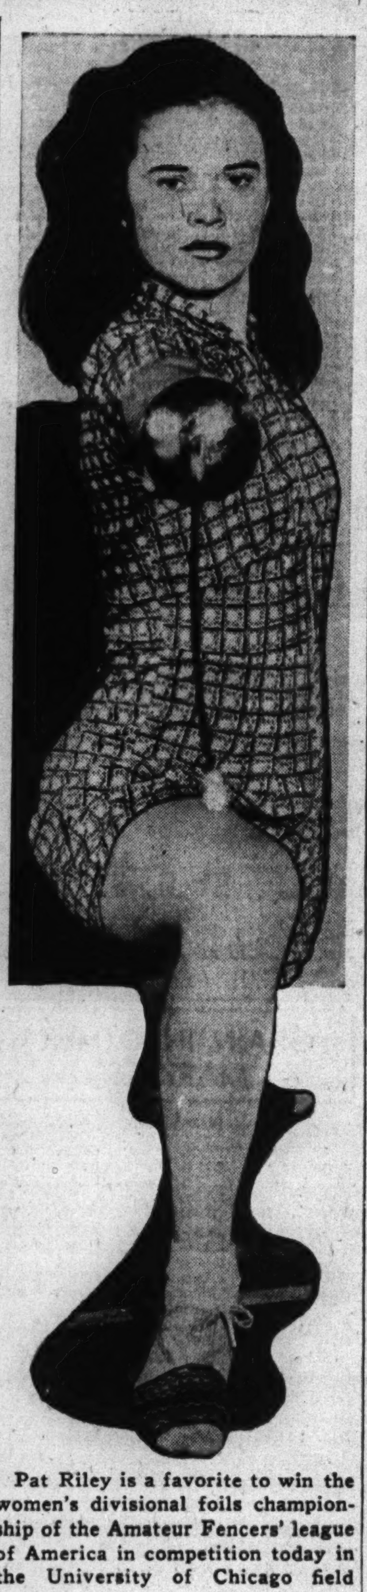
'42 Regatta Uncertain.

Safety is not the only factor being faced by the Star boat skippers and crews. The regatta may still have to be cancelled, if transportation facilities would be restricted to war needs by next August.

The sloops usually are carried on freight cars when the owner enters an out of town regatta. So unless trucks or trailers can be employed for transporting the boats, it may be necessary to call off the regatta despite the fact that Chicago's lake front has never before enjoyed a world sailing meet.

AUGUSTANA NET TEAM LOSES.

North Central's tennis team defeated Augustana, 6 to 0, yesterday at Naperville. It was Augustana's first conference dual match defeat in six years.



Pat Riley is a favorite to win the women's divisional foils championship of the Amateur Fencers' league of America in competition today in the University of Chicago field house.

Sabin Meets Skeen Today for Pinehurst Pro Title

Pinehurst, N. C., April 18 (AP).—Wayne Sabin defeated Welby Van Horn 6-0, 6-3, 6-0 in the singles semifinals of the Pinehurst professional tennis tournament today. Tomorrow he will meet Dick Skeen in the final round. Bobby Riggs and Van Horn trounced Sabin and Martin Buxby, 6-3, 11-9, 6-3, in the final match of the doubles.

Gage Park	119

Senn High school fencers won the team title in the Chicago Public High School league yesterday as well as first and second places in the individual events at George Williams college.

Senn's 156 points were 6 short of a perfect score. Stanley Jacobsen became individual champion by winning six bouts and losing one. Roy Herter was tied with Vincent France for second in bouts won, each winning four and losing three, but the place went to the former on the basis of points scored against. He lost 23 and Franco lost 26.

TWO FENCING EVENTS TODAY

Senior saber and the women's foil titles, first two of four divisional title events sponsored by the Illinois division of the Amateur Fencers' league of America will be held at 1 o'clock today in the University of Chicago fieldhouse. The divisional events will be qualifying rounds for the midwest and national tournaments.

Two pairs of brothers are entered in the senior saber field. The brothers are Ray and Paul Siever, and Art and Harry Cohen. Ray Siever, Big Ten saber champion, is the new captain of the University of Chicago fencing team, as was his brother several years ago. Others expected to compete are Oscar Barab, former midwest champion, Joe Molkup, defending title holder from Chicago, and Dr. Walter Eisin and Charles Daldrier from Lake Shore club.

The women's foil favorites are Sylvia Mikklesen, Lake Shore club; Dorothy Ingram and Mary Elizabeth Grenander from Chicago; Marge Bohnhoff from La Grange, Doris Knockert of Mundelein college, Betty Ann Richards from Urbana, and Pat Riley, Chicago.

Bouts will be fenced on clay surface, rather than the traditional rubber or cork mats.

THREE PREVIOUS WINNERS ENTER 46TH MARATHON

De Mar Will Run Today for Exercise.

Boston, Mass., April 18 (AP).—Three former winners will be in the probable field of 144 at the start of the 46th annual Boston Athletic association marathon tomorrow. The course, official Greek marathon length of 26 miles 385 yards, runs over the hills from Hopkinton to the Back bay.

Only two of those who have raced to glory in this endurance test, Johnny Kelley of Arlington, who won in 1935, and Gerard Cote of Montreal, who set the course record on 2:28.28 3-5 in 1940, will have much to say about the pending result.

De Mar Has No Hopes.

The seven time winner, aged Clarence DeMar, who has been running this race for more than 30 years, will make his customary start, but he will be content to finish inside of three hours, a performance that normally would make him about 20th across the finish line.

Most of the experts agree that Boston's Fred McGlone, who placed sixth and eighth in his last two starts, is the outstanding favorite. Altho Les Pawson of Pawtucket, R. I., who gained his third triumph last year, is out with a leg injury, McGlone faces stern competition from Kelley, Don Heinicke of Baltimore, Cote and Joe Smith of Medford, Mass., all of whom finished ahead of him in 1941.

Canadian Stars Absent.

War conditions have choked off the annual influx of Canadian stars, notably the great Toronto runners, but the entry list includes such newcomers as Henry Mueda of Riverside, Cal., and three from New Orleans, Robert F., Vernon L., and Robert E. Day. Another veteran campaigner who will be missed is gray haired Bill Kennedy of East Portchester, Conn., who has competed annually since he won it in 1917.

Arthur Claeys of Mishawaka, Frank Gruze of Central, and Bob Boger of Mishawaka shared individual scoring honors, each winning two firsts for 10 points. Claeys won the dashes, Gruze the hurdle events, and Boger the half mile and high jump. Summaries:

NEWS FROM ARMY AND NAVY POSTS

BY JOSEPH MORANG.

Chanute Field.

The Planesmen meet the University of Illinois in Champaign on Tuesday, Bradley Tech in Peoria on Wednesday and Camp Grant's strong team in Rockford on Saturday. . . . Chanute is getting some excellent pitching from Burt Stover, George Mathews and Paul Fleming, a trio which turned back Charleston on two hits last week, one of the hits coming in the seventh and the other in the ninth. . . . Bowling teams representing the 4th, 18th, and 32d School squadrons and the 872d Quartermasters are engaged in a tournament to determine a post champion. . . . Tex Penny, a Chicagoan who coached Chanute boxers to three titles in the Danville Golden Gloves sectional tourney, has been transferred.

Fort Sheridan.

THE fort's summer athletic program was outlined at a meeting in the athletic office last Monday, when Civilian Athletic Director Monty Rudolph announced plans for a schedule including baseball, softball, volleyball, tennis, track, wrestling, boxing, and badminton on a huge intramural plane which will affect every soldier at the post. . . . Softball received its initial impetus after the meeting when the 81st Quartermasters whipped the Bakers and Cooks in a practice game, 15 to 1. . . . Then, on Tuesday evening, the 103d Coast Artillery defeated Medics 1607, 15 to 5, but the real highlight of the week occurred on Wednesday, when military police squads of Sergt. Robert Douglas and Sergt. D. F. Bunch became involved in a game which resulted in open proselyting of all talent which happened to come along and which went to 32 innings before Sergt. Bunch's team won by the fantastic score of 44 to 43. . . . The post softball tourney will open on May 1 and will consist of 30 teams playing in three leagues. . . . Lieutenants Donald A. Outstanding member of the track team is William [Mickey] Anderson, one of Dean Cromwell's star sprinters at the University of Southern California two years ago, where he was clocked in :9.6 for the 100 yard dash and :21.3 in the 220. . . . Other track stars are James Orwig, Lawrence college captain last year, who specializes in field events, and Jesse Ralph, middle distance runner at North Park college in 1940. . . . Camp Grant has entered teams in the special service event at the Drake relays next Saturday in Des Moines, Ia., and in the Beloit relays May 1. . . . The camp baseball team is expected to play about 50 games, but the three it considers its most important are next Saturday's game with Chanute field and a home and home series with Great Lakes June 7 at Camp Grant and June 28 at the naval station. . . . Lieut. James P. Tyrrell, formerly of Lake Forest college, has been appointed assistant athletic officer in Maj. Frank A. Bush's department. . . . AMERICA GOES TO RACES; MARKS SET AT 2 TRACKS

New York, April 18 (AP).—An estimated 22,000 today jammed the Havre de Grace racing plant, near Baltimore, to establish an attendance record, while 36,496 persons packed the Jamaica [N. Y.], layout, where a day's betting record of $1,698,000 was established.

Another crowd of 30,000 marched thru the turnstiles at Narragansett Park, near Pawtucket, R. I. Approximately 14,000 saw the program at Keeneland Park, Lexington, Ky.

Not only was the former record of $1,361,704 for one day's betting at Jamaica wiped out, but the single race mark of $243,234 was surpassed twice. The top was the $269,836 wagered in the mutuels for the Excelsior handicap, the day's feature.

George S. May, president of Tam O'Shanter Country club, yesterday received the first entry for the All-American Amateur golf tournament at Tam O'Shanter July 20 to 26, to be held in conjunction with the $15,000 Tom O'Shanter National open. It came from Fred B. Snite, president of Elmhurst Country club, who last week made two successive holes in one, on the same hole and on successive days.

MILWAUKEE GETS FULL CREDIT FOR OPENING CROWD

Indianapolis, Ind., April 18 (AP).—George Trautman, president of the American association, said today St. Paul's protest of Milwaukee's opening day attendance figures had been overruled, but that Indianapolis still leads in the competition for the cup awarded the city having the greatest per capita attendance on the first day of the season.

Milwaukee drew 15,599 for its opener Thursday but the game went only an inning. St. Paul protested recognition of the total since the game was not official but Trautman said a poll of six clubs showed a majority in favor of approving the figure.

The cup, however, is awarded to the city having the greatest attendance in proportion to its population. On that basis Indianapolis' 12,242 represented 2.9 per cent of the population while Milwaukee's attendance represented 2.6 per cent of the population.

Openers still are to be played in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Columbus, and Toledo.

Adolph Kiefer Shatters Own World Record

Detroit, Mich., April 18 (AP).—Adolph Kiefer of Chicago tonight clipped two seconds off his own world record for the 100 meter backstroke by swimming the event in 1 minute, 2.8 seconds in a match race at the Detroit Athletic club.

Kiefer, eclipsing a mark established in the same pool six years ago, distanced Harry Holiday, University of Michigan freshman, by more than a second while winning the event. The Chicagoan cracked every existing standard on the way to the new mark.

Gloria Callen Wins.

Kiefer's performance overshadowed the return of 18 year old Gloria Callen of Nyack, N. Y., to the Women's National AAU indoor title in the 100 yard back stroke. Miss Callen defeated Defending Champion Helen Perry of Cleveland, by five feet and was timed in 1:08.5, a second off Eleanor Holm Rose's record.

Miss Callen led from the start and gradually increased her margin over the Cleveland co-ed. Two Indianapolis girls, Joan Fogle and Betty Bemis were third and fourth.

Miss Fogle came back, however, to win the 300 yard individaul medley in 4:01.5, one and seven-tenths of a second under the American record established by Katy Rawls in 1938.

Prew Misses Record.

Bill Prew of Detroit, National AAU champion who equaled Johny Weismuller's record of 51 seconds for the 100 yard free style two weeks ago, failed in his attempt to lower the mark in a special match race. Prew finished in a dead heat with Johnny Patten of Michigan, with Otto Jaretz of Chicago third. The time was 52 seconds.

Prew, aviation cadet at Selfridge Field, Mich., was making his last competitive start for the war's duration.

FISHING SEASON NEAR, ANGLERS GETTING READY

Adding New Gadgets for Summer's Trips.

BY BOB BECKER.

With the fishing seasons just starting anglers everywhere are dropping into the tackle shops, looking over the new lures, adding a few new ones to their kit, buying synthetic materials to make leaders, and talking about the first trip of the year. Already the boys down south are walloping the black bass for these fish have been hitting in Reelfoot lake, Tennessee, since March. Other fishermen have been trying their luck with the walleyes in the Wolf river country of Wisconsin where a special open season started April 15.

From the Canadian border comes word about the date when the ice may leave the lakes and automatically sound the go signal for the lake trout fishermen. A resident on Crow lake, Ontario, writes that his guess for open water is May 1. On Rainy lake they expect the ice to leave earlier than ever before.

Depends on Weather.

No one can make an accurate forecast when the lakes will be free of ice because everything naturally depends on whether they have a late spring or an early one up there in the north country. But right now it looks as if the lake trout could look at lures tossed by fishermen during the first week of May. Every year hundreds of fishermen go north for this lake trout fishing in order to connect with the species before it goes into deep water.

Michigan's trout season opens April 25. The first general fishing season in Wisconsin gets under May 15 when walleyed pike, crappies, rock bass, northern pike or pickerel, and brook trout may be taken. The only exception to this general ruling is that in a few counties in the northwestern part of the state [Ashland, Bayfield, Douglas, and Iron] it's legal to catch trout on May 1. If a walleye fisherman likes to cast artificial lures to get a mess of pike, the time to go is opening day. Then the pike are active, in shallow water—compared to midsummer depths—and will swat underwater plugs.

What the Fish Like.

For this early pike fishing several different kinds of lures get the fish. For example, a river runt will do the trick. It has action and the walleyes like it. The new crippled shad minnow making its debut this year is another underwater lure with a lot of action that can be used to get a mess of fish. [We're going to try one of these very soon.] Both of these lures are going to stir up many an early muskie, too.

We're going to rig up a Pop N' Wiggle fly rod lure with a gut leader and a small lead sinker and have some fun with the walleyes on our first pike trip this spring. It has the darting, zig-zag action to bring 'em on the run. Another lure that wiggles and looks as if it would make any fish slightly balmy is the flapjack. The flapjack as well as the flatfish, another dipsy-do lure, are good bets in most any water.

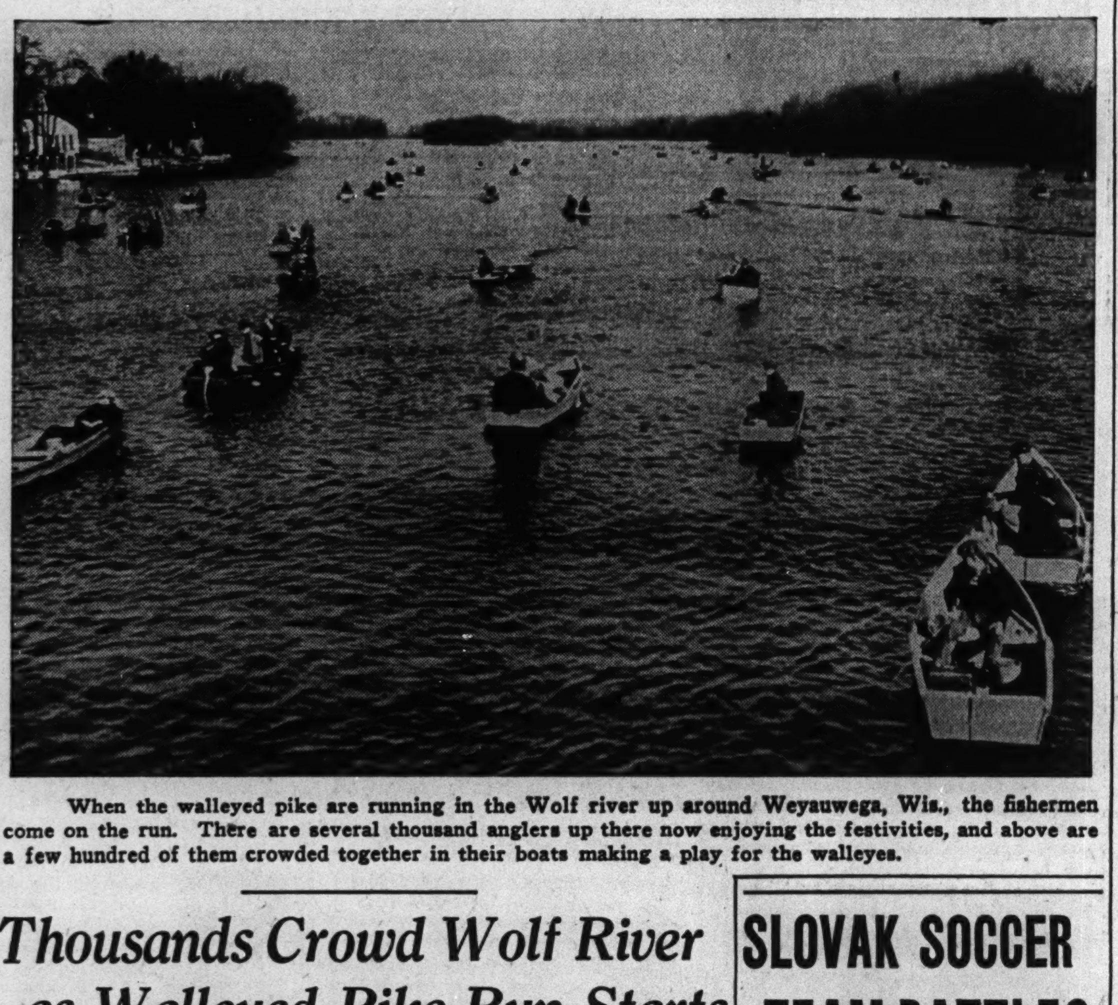
WALLEYED PIKE ARE RUNNING



When the walleyed pike are running in the Wolf river up around Weyauwega, Wis., the fishermen come on the run. There are several thousand anglers up there now enjoying the festivities, and above are a few hundred of them crowded together in their boats making a play for the walleyes.

Thousands Crowd Wolf River as Walleyed Pike Run Starts

BY BEN MARKLAND.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Weyauwega, Wis., April 17.—When the walleyed pike make their annual spawning run up the Wolf river in this section of Wisconsin they provide one of the major fishing spectacles of the middle west.

During early April, when most anglers still are in the fly typing and puttering stage preparatory to the official opening of the fishing season, the walleyed pike leave big Lake Winnebago and swim up to the reedy marshes surrounding the towns of Winneconne, Weyauwega, New London, Fremont, Shiocton, and even as far north as Shawano. The pike are protected on their way upstream and while on the spawning grounds, but Wisconsin game laws permit hook and line fishing in the Wolf river drainage area starting April 15.

They Like Live Minnows.

By mid-April the walleyes have completed spawning, and until the final days of the month they are on their way back to the big lake. During this return trip they are susceptible to the lure of live minnows on the ends of anglers' lines, and residents of the shore towns, augmented by hundreds of fishermen from Chicago, Milwaukee, Oshkosh, Green Bay, and other cities, gather here for a sort of anglers' Mardi gras.

Since the season opened at 12:01 a. m., Wednesday, at least 5,000 anglers have been on the river and practically all have had excellent sport. Hundreds of fishermen have taken their daily limit of seven walleyes which average from 1½ to 2 pounds each. Others are content with three or four fish after a few hours of angling.

Fisherman's Paradise.

The scene this morning just above the highway bridge at Fremont was typical of the angling activity here. There were more than 50 boats in the water for spawning runs up the Wolf. Last year the white bass fishing started here on April 28.

On a 200 yard stretch up the river there were many boats, each holding two or three fishermen and each fisherman able to exhibit well stocked stringers danging over the gunwhales. When we fished with Bud Pulls of Fremont yesterday our combined score was eight walleyes in less than two hours.

One resourceful renter of boats has been giving the fishermen near his place a double feature attraction. While the boys are pulling in the walleyes he tunes a blaring radio located in a window of his boathouse. Today the anglers heard the news of the world interspersed with swing music and baseball broadcasts.

Plenty of Walleyes.

But the whole story is not merely of fish taken from the river, despite the fact that thousands of fish are being caught. The walleyes' population of this area is not being depleted. Crews of men working for the Wisconsin department of conservation have been netting walleyes since April 3. The spawn has been stripped from these netted fish and now being scientifically hatched in the Weyauwega hatchery.

Howard Berquist, hatchery foreman, said this morning that approximately 90,000,000 walleyed pike eggs now are under culture in the hatchery. During May more than three-fourths of these eggs will hatch. When the young fry are two days old they will be released in the Wolf river and other Wisconsin waters, replacing many times over the comparatively small number caught by anglers.

You'll Have to Hurry.

Fishermen who still plan to come up here will have to hurry. Berquist believes that the run will be over by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week. But it may last longer if the weather turns cooler.

Anglers who miss the walleyes may be interested in the white bass run which will take place in these same waters in two weeks. The white bass, called striped bass by thousands of fishermen, stay in Lake Winnebago until the last week in April then leave the big waters. Last year the white bass fishing started here on April 28.

GRAINS ADVANCE MODERATELY ON TOKIO WAR NEWS

F. D. R. Inflation Curb Hint Saps Buying Ardor.

BY PHILIP WARDEN.

Grain men were jubilant over the bombing of Japanese cities yesterday, but announcement that President Roosevelt intends to outline his plans to curb inflation shortly scared most speculative buying out of the grain markets.

Wheat prices advanced as much as a cent a bushel at one time on the Chicago Board of Trade, but finished with a net gain of only ⅜ to ½ cent with May $1.19⅝. Prices were at the lowest level since late November and down 3⅞ to 4 cents for the last week. last week.

All Grains Lower for Week.

Corn, which is 1⅜ to 1⅞ cents lower than a week ago and about the lowest for two months, advanced ⅛ to ⅜ cent. Oats futures were unchanged to ¼ cent lower with about the same net change for the week as corn. Rye finished ¼ to ½ cent higher, but losses for the week ranged around 3 cents a bushel. Soy beans, up a cent at one time, closed ¼ to ⅞ cent higher, but down 2⅝ to 4⅝ cents for the last six days.

The department of agriculture reported that as of April 11 the Commodity Credit corporation still had loans outstanding on 305,541,000 bushels of wheat. These loans mature April 30.

Redemptions Held Unlikely.

With Chicago prices only about 4½ cents a bushel higher than the base loan rate of $1.15 in this market—an amount insufficient to cover interest and storage charges—grain men expect more than 200 million bushels will be turned over to the corporation.

The Board of Trade reported that in the last week 28 million pounds of lard has been shipped by rail out of Chicago, compared with only 7,308,000 pounds in the corresponding week last year.

NET INCOME.

Corporations preparing financial statements during wartime are finding it increasingly more difficult to arrive at an exact and final net income figure due to uncertainties over taxes and allowances for costs which cannot be determined until later.

Accountants have declared that the tentative character of financial statements has been accentuated under war conditions by continual changes in methods of doing business, and that accounting measurements are largely dependent on the course and duration of the war. As a result current financial statements also are less indicative of ability to pay taxes and capital value than normally.

Many items in financial statements still are determinable with substantial accuracy such as fixed charges covering funded debt, operating revenues, rents, and royalties. However, the problem arises over items involving estimate or approximation, and require the exercise of informed judgments within a wide range of reasonableness. These would include taxes and depreciation of equipment or expansion of facilities as the need arose. The significance of periodic statements is, therefore, limited.

Allocation of profits to designated periods of time has been recognized as largely artificial and conventional. Such allocations appear even less significant during wartime. There are many anticipated losses which cannot be measured now and are large in relation to gross income. As a result profits cannot be accurately determined as long as these anticipated losses are not provided for.

Consequently, reported "net income" should not be relied upon as telling the whole story. The usefulness of accounts as a guide to earning capacity and the value of securities has been greatly lessened.

The dangers of placing undue emphasis on a single figure such as "per share" earnings should be borne in mind by investors. It is more sound, under existing conditions, to examine financial statements in the light of altered or expanded operations of the particular corporation, and how rapidly and at what cost it can be adapted to war work.

IF YOU have seen the rest - now look at THE BEST!

If you want to make BIG CASH PROFITS in a portable grinding business of your own, you may have looked at every portable mill made. Have you checked carefully whether the owners are really making money, how the mill stands up under hard service, how long it has lasted, what is the cost of upkeep, and the rate of profit on every grinding job? This is very, very important.

Before you buy—investigate the WORLD'S GREATEST CAPACITY GRINDER "JAY BEE" PORTABLE

STILL running like new when some other grinders are completely worn out. The all-steel construction makes it practically unbreakable. BRITISH POUND 'GOES BEGGING' AT $2 IN EAST Lacks Free Market at Official Rate.

BY HERBERT VEDDER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 18.—For as little as $2 to $2.75 each you can buy British pound sterling notes—which are quoted officially at $4.02½, buying, and $4.03¾, selling—in such diverse places in New York as bustling waterfront saloons and war deadened international currency exchanges.

The catch to this little get rich quick scheme at the expense of holders of floating sterling comes when you try to cash in. There just isn't any "free" market in British paper currency.

If you want to speculate in the pound, that is your business. There is no law against it. Buying pound notes is not like buying a bootleg steak in London or filching a new tire in the United States.

British Sailors Complain.

Most frequent airing of the strange situation comes from British sailors complaining bitterly on not being able to realize more on their pound notes.

It all started after the German invasion of the Netherlands, Belgium, and France. London called in pounds held abroad in the summer of 1940 and prohibited further sterling imports except under license. In this divorcement of the pound abroad from the home money, the British, in a sense, demonetized their currency abroad.

Sterling became a strictly managed currency to prevent Germany from cashing in on her seizures in occupied territory, particularly in Holland, where hoards of English pounds were said to abound.

Holders of sterling outside Britain thus have the choice now of hanging on, and seeing what the pound is worth after the war, or trying to sell to buyers who have no real desire to buy.

Speculated in Last War.

A number of Americans, most of them relatively well-to-do, bought up sterling at similarly depreciated rates under similar circumstances during the first World war. Many realized some profit. Few instances of such speculation have been reported so far in this war, however.

A representative of one of the leading New York dealers in world currencies said a person would have difficulty either in buying or selling as much as 1,000 pounds. He said he would take such a supply only on consignment, subject to later sales. He would pay $2.50 a pound. He would sell at $2.75.

Insist Nationals Are Warned.

Representatives of the British consulate general in New York insist their nationals have been warned of the so-called black market and advised strongly against changing pounds into dollars. Except when a Briton on shore leave wants to have "a binge" or make large purchases for himself or friends back home, said British officials, there is little reason for his getting caught in the black mart.

British sailors usually are permitted to draw all the pay due them in American dollars when they make port here, according to officials. American law requires that they receive half the pay due them.

CANADIAN BEEF CATTLE EXPORTS TO U. S. DOUBLED

OTTAWA, April 18 (AP).—Canadian cattle shipments to the United States to April 16 were almost double those in the same period last year, the agriculture department reported today.

Because of limited marketings of beef cattle on some markets recently and the consequent danger of a beef shortage, it has been suggested that control of beef cattle exports may shortly be imposed by the dominion government.

Under quota arrangements with the United States, Canada is able to ship more than 190,000 head of beef cattle annually with duty preferences. A total of 67,756 has been sent to the United States since the start of the year, compared with 28,303 in the same period of 1941.

M'NEAR IS TOO BUSY AT HIS TRIAL TO AID IN RAIL DISPUTE CASE

Peoria, Ill., April 18 (AP).—President George P. McNear of the government operated Toledo, Peoria and Western railroad informed the War Labor board today that he was too busy in a federal court case to give proper attention to the board's request that he join in arbitration of a labor dispute on the line.

The board had advised McNear that, if he didn't participate in the move to end the controversy, steps would be taken to settle it without him.

McNear replied by letter that he was engaged in a trial, but added that when it was ended, "I will confer with my attorneys and communicate with you." He and two other officials of the road are being tried on charges of violating the national railway labor act by allegedly coercing unionized employés.

A readjustment of working and pay scales caused a strike of 104 employés of the line last Dec. 28. A federal manager assumed control of the road on March 22 pending a settlement agreeable to the War Labor board. Striking workers returned to work subsequently.

Review of Week's Industry: Setbacks Felt in Some Fields

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

Setbacks in several vital industries were reported last week. Steel mills reduced production to a national average of 97.2 per cent of capacity, from 98.6 in the preceding week, because they had difficulty getting scrap or had to repair furnaces. Engineering construction contract awards fell 40 per cent and, at a time when the usual trend would be upward, declines were shown in railroad freight movement and in the production of electricity.

The amount of electricity produced was the smallest for any week since late September. Studies of freight movements disclosed that the sharpest decline was in miscellaneous loadings, indicating that the War Production board's curbs on consumer goods production are slashing manufacturers' shipments.

Industrial Indices Dip.

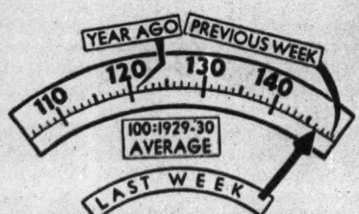
The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity reflected the slackenings in three key industries as follows [1929-'30 levels equal 100]:

	Latest week.	Previous week.	Year ago.
Steel mill activity....	140.5	142.5	136.9
Elect. power output..	156.4	158.0	139.0
Total carloadings ...	90.2	92.9	75.3
Composite index	146.1	148.5	120.5

Retail trade barely exceeded the year ago level on a dollar volume basis, indicating that unit volume, after allowance for higher prices now prevailing, was smaller. Wholesale trade slowed.

Additional WPB freezing orders and other restrictive measures intensified the public's realization that lower living standards are ahead.

Trend of Industry



Arrows indicate position of Associated Press industrial index.

War Output Speeding Up.

Meantime, however, Donald Nelson, WPB chairman, was reporting that production in war plants is speeding up. He said the hardest part of the job of converting factories to war work has been done. An official of the army supply service said America is producing more tanks than the Germans, more guns and more ammunition. But Rear Admiral Emory S. Land told a congressional committee that ship output is 13 per cent behind schedule and charged some deliberate loafing is being done in some yards.

A clash between the WPB and Joseph B. Eastman, director of defense transportation, was disclosed. Eastman was said to feel that the WPB is not permitting railroads to acquire enough equipment to handle the war load.

Battle on Meat Cost Inflation Lost Thus Far

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

The government's fight to prevent inflationary markets for meat and live stock has not met with much success to date. Despite ceilings on pork prices in wholesale markets, which have been revised by the Office of Price administration from time to time since they first went into effect about a month ago, there has been a persistent rise in the market for hogs at the Chicago stockyards.

Pressure of light supplies from farms and huge demands for volume made on packers by lend-lease buyers forced last week's hog average to $14.30 a hundred pounds, the highest weekly average since June, 1926, and the highest April weekly cost for 22 years. This was the 13th week that the average was steady or higher than the preceding week. Last week's cost was 85 cents above the week the OPA first started enforcing price ceilings on pork.

Up 155 Per Cent During War.

The advance since the war began in September, 1939, has been much larger than during the corresponding period of the World war.

There has been a rise of 155 per cent in the market for hogs in the first 32 months of the present conflict, whereas a 70 per cent advance occurred in the first 32 months of the last war. Hogs that averaged $5.60 in August, 1939, averaged $14.30 last week. In the same period from July, 1914, to March, 1917, costs rose from $8.70 to $14.80. This rise continued thru the remainder of the war and until July, 1919, when prices averaged $21.85 and top hogs sold at $23.60, the highest prices on record.

Top grades of steers were bid up to $17 last week, the highest April price since 1919, and within $4.50 of the all-time record high of $21.50 in December, 1919.

Steers Up 58 Per Cent.

The new advances carried best steers $6.25 above the market for top grades just prior to the start of the war, a rise of 58 per cent. During the same period of the World war top steers rose from $10 to $12.95, a gain of 29 per cent. Altho no price ceilings have been attempted in beef, plans for price limits on this meat also are being studied, OPA officials admit.

Outstanding weaknesses in the government's attempt to check the rise in hogs has been its failure to specify actual price ceilings for all cuts of pork, and the habit OPA officials have of changing temporary limits, live stock interests declared last week. The first base period, March 3 to 7, was marked by an extremely uneven market for pork and proved unsatisfactory. This was changed last week to a Feb. 16 to 20 base period, but the government reserves the right to add from ⅛ to 4 cents a pound to ceiling prices determined by the new base period.

This has resulted in confusion among meat traders and packers as to what price limits the government really wants. The highest price obtained for various pork cuts by each plant during the base period determines the "ceiling" for that plant, plus what the government decides to add to it.

Midmonth Payments Lift Chicago Bank Clearings

Influenced by midmonth payments, bank clearings in Chicago last week increased to 430 million dollars, compared with $398,300,000 in the preceding week and 408 millions in the corresponding 1941 period, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The report follows:

	Clearings.	Balances.

MANUFACTURERS DENY PROFIT MOTIVE CAUSED DELAY IN ARMS WORK

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—The National Association of Manufacturers maintained today that the government should be thinking of the effect of the war on the ability of manufacturers to meet postwar readjustments "instead of being unduly concerned about the possibility of war millionaires."

The association declared that "there is no foundation for claims that the manufacturing industries delayed defense work by wilful insistence on large profits from civilian production." Nor, it said, is there any basis "for the claim that manufacturers can afford to pay still higher wages and overtime rates because of excessive profits in the defense period."

The association argued that "any arbitrary limit on profits would be inequitable and impractical if applied at an equal rate to all industries. It would accelerate the trend, observable for 10 years, toward the destruction of profits and investment in manufacturing."

OUTPUT OF COAL, OIL SHIPMENTS AT RECORD HIGHS

Washington, D. C., April 18 [Special].—The office of Harold L. Ickes, petroleum and solid fuels coördinator, today announced new records in coal production and the rail movement of petroleum to the east.

During the week ended April 11, an estimated 11,250,000 tons of bituminous coal was produced, a record for early April and approaching the 11,569,000 tons for the seven days ended April 27, 1918—the largest ever recorded for April. Anthracite production was 1,112,000 tons, compared with 880,000 tons for the preceding week.

A new record of 586,350 barrels of petroleum was moved east by rail, supplying nearly half the seaboard's daily oil requirement. This was 11 per cent over the preceding week. Oil shipments by rail from California to the Pacific northwest increased by 12 per cent, the daily movement averaging 18,200 barrels.

PRICES OF BRASS FOR SMALL ARMS AMMUNITION CUT

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—Thirteen companies, manufacturing more than 95 per cent of the brass materials used for small arms ammunition, have agreed to reduce prices on their products one cent a pound, Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced today.

Declaring that the reduction was only "a preliminary and partial step in dealing with this whole question" of brass mill profits, the administrator said the voluntary agreement would result in substantial savings to the government which would increase steadily as production expanded.

All deliveries on and after Monday of cartridge case cups, bullet jacket cups, and sheet metal produced by these companies will be affected.

LEND-LEASE AID SO VAST BRITISH ARE ASTONISHED

Present Rate Above Prewar Imports.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 18.—Altho stock market interests this week showed scarcely a ripple of excitement over the new record budget, they did express astonishment at the enormity of lend-lease supplies distributed from the United States.

At the present rate of 1 billion 200 pounds [about 4 billion 800 million dollars] yearly America's lend-lease distribution exceeds in value the entire British import program of any pre-war year. Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, emphasized, however, that a substantial slice of lend-lease materials is going to India and the dominions, tho the bulk is coming to Britain.

Market Holds Firm.

Typical of the almost fatalistic mood of wartime, the stock market held well despite announcement of the budget exceeding 5 billion 250 million pounds [about 21 billion dollars] for the first time in history, and imposing 180 million pounds [about 720 million dollars] in extra taxation yearly.

Even in the sections hardest hit by the new imposts—tobaccos, breweries, and stores—prices remained firm. Holders of these stocks, experiencing a lack of investment opportunities, refused to let heavier taxes worry them into selling. The only really depressed section, in fact, was the Kaffir market in which South African operators sold heavily, presumably as the result of concern over the intentions of Pierre Laval.

The chancellor's determination not to modify the excess profits tax on industry, caused disappointment.

Doubt Inflation Statement.

In general discussions, however, many financial experts appear skeptical of the chancellor's claim that the inflationary gap has been completely closed. This claim, they maintain, is defeated by the fact that wage rates have risen another 6 per cent and prices in uncontrolled goods are soaring.

In addition the Bank of England currency report this week showed another "unseasonal" increase of 3,184,000 pounds [about $12,736,000], in money in circulation, carrying the total to a new record of 767,110,000 pounds [about $3,068,444,000]. This means the bank's reserve of unissued bills is down to a little more than 13 million pounds [about 52 million dollars] and another 50 million pounds [about 200 million dollars] increase in the paper money issue is regarded as certain before the end of the month.

Internal Debt Rises.

Britain's state debt to citizens has been inflated by the war, it was brought out by treasury figures in connection with the budget. Apart from indebtedness to other countries, the internal debt of this country has increased from 7 billion 250 million pounds [about 29 billion dollars] in March, 1939, to approximately 13 billion pounds [about 52 billion dollars] at the end of March this year.

The burden of interest payment on the debt, however, is less heavy than might appear, having expanded from 217 million pounds [about 868 million dollars] in 1939 to 257 million pounds [about 1 billion 28 million dollars] in the financial year just ended. The reason servicing charges have not risen proportionately with the size of the debt is that the average rate of interest, according to the Economist, has been reduced from 2.66 per cent to 1.83 per cent.

Air Line Gets Mexican Route for War Needs

Washington, D. C., April 18 [Special].—The Civil Aeronautics board authorized American Airlines, Inc., today to operate a passenger, mail, and express air service between Fort Worth, Dallas, and El Paso in Texas and Mexico City. The board acted on orders of President Roosevelt who said the service was urgently needed for war purposes. The airliners will fly via Monterrey, Mexico.

Board members said that a majority had originally decided to deny the airline's application for the route to Mexico City. When the President was informed of this, the members said, he told the board, "In the interest of our urgent war needs, favorable consideration should be given to the application."

Grant Is Temporary.

The authorization is temporary. In the words of the board, it is "to remain in effect until the board shall determine that the need for the service in the interest of national defense has terminated."

The board dismissed the airline's application for authority to acquire control of American Airlines De Mexico S. A. Action on the American Airlines' request for permission to include Laredo, Eagle Pass and San Antonio, Tex., in its new route was deferred.

American application for permission to operate the new route was opposed by the Pan-American, Eastern, and Braniff air lines. The Republic of Mexico has already approved the new service.

Plan to Act Promptly.

New York, April 18 [Special].—A. N. Kemp, president of American Airlines, Inc., said tonight after learning that his company had been granted permission to operate a new line to Mexico City:

"We stand ready to proceed immediately in the performance of our obligation to the two governments. We intend to start construction on the necessary airports and ground facilities immediately and hope to conduct an international air service to Mexico City within approximately six months."

NEW METHODS MAY AID USE OF U. S. CHROMIUM

Washington, D. C., April 18 [Special].—A new metallurgical treatment that may make available for war use about 900,000 tons of domestic chromium was announced today by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

The process, developed by the bureau of mines after years of research and experimentation, entails the treatment of low grade American chromite ores to bring them up to a grade suitable for making ferrochromium for the manufacture of alloy steel used in armor plate, projectiles, and other war needs.

Recommendations for the construction of commercial plants will be made when final data are received on additional tests now being made.

The United States consumed more than 600,000 tons of chromite in 1940, all but a small fraction of it having been imported.

Rail Express Shipments Dip, but Air Total Rises

Railway Express agency reported yesterday that it handled less rail express in March than a year earlier in Chicago, but more air express. The number of rail shipments was 1,913,475, compared with 2,092,313 in the 1941 month, a decline of 8½ per cent. Air express was up 2.6 per cent at 24,692 shipments, against 24,067.

PIONEER ZEPHYR, NOW 8 YEARS OLD, HAS ONE FAULT: IT'S TOO SMALL

The Burlington railroad's "Pioneer Zephyr," with a record of nearly 2 million miles of operation, yesterday observed its eighth anniversary. Now making a 456 mile daily round trip between Lincoln and McCook, Neb., the "Pioneer Zephyr" was the first of the modern streamlined high speed trains to go into regular service.

The train is of stainless steel construction and is powered by a Diesel-electric locomotive. Shortly after its christening in Philadelphia April 18, 1934, it was taken on tour during which it was exhibited in 222 cities to 2,016,606 visitors.

Officials of the road said the train's only shortcoming, after its many miles of operation, is its capacity. It originally consisted of three cars, but because of its popularity another was added. It served various parts of the road, but each time had to be replaced with a larger train and moved elsewhere because of the demand for accommodations on it.

Business Men to Hear Sayre, Rickenbacker

Francis B. Sayre, high commissioner to the Philippines, and Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, World war ace and president of Eastern Air Lines, Inc., will be among the government and business spokesmen who will address the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in Chicago, the chamber announced yesterday.

The meeting will be held April 27 to 30 at the Stevens hotel, marking the first time in 10 years that the chamber has convened outside of the nation's capital.

About 3,000 to Attend.

About 3,000 representatives of more than 1,700 chambers of commerce having a total membership of more than a million business men are scheduled to attend the sessions. The program, emphasizing the problem of speeding production of supplies for the armed forces, will include discussions of arms plant operations, material shortages, priorities, price controls, farm supply, wartime finances, and postwar readjustment.

Speakers on the first day of the meeting will include Prof. J. B. Condliffe of the department of economics of the University of California, formerly of the economic intelligence service of the League of Nations, and D. G. McKenzie, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Rickenbacker to Talk on War.

Rickenbacker will address the convention on the night of the 28th on "How to Win the War." Sayre will speak at the annual dinner on the night of the 29th.

Other speakers include Albert W. Hawkes, president of the national chamber and member of the War Labor board; Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation; Col. John J. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce; J. L. Beven, president of the Illinois Central railroad, and Henry W. Morgan, president of Henry Morgan & Co., Ltd., of Montreal, Que. Morgan will discuss the wartime experiences of a retailer in Canada.

Propose Ways to Cut Nonwar Uses of Lead

Columbus, O., April 18 (AP).—While the American lead industry works at forced speed today to meet wartime demands, some metal experts see many ways to curb uses of lead for nonwar purposes.

An advisory committee on metals and minerals suggested to the War Production board ways to save around 100,000 tons of lead annually, possibly more.

The report was drafted by H. W. Gillett of the Battelle Memorial institute here, an industrial research organization.

Most domestic lead mines were operating only five days a week when the United States went to war with the axis. Mines now work a 24 hour a day schedule to raise production far above the tonnage of before the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Pig Lead Imports Soar.

Imports of pig lead jumped in the last two years from 7,139 short tons in 1939 to 151,568 in 1940 and 336,000 last year, with Mexico, Canada, Australia, and Peru the main suppliers.

The advisory committee's recommendations for making more lead available for war work included:

Limiting use of lead foil.

Substitution of other pigments such as titanium oxide for white lead [zinc oxide and lithophone which could be used are as scarce as white lead].

Reduction in thickness of sheathing of cables which protect telephone and telegraph wires underground.

Reduction in the amount of lead used in storage batteries.

Substitution of asphalt paint for red lead in protecting structural steel from rust.

Paint Needs to Rise.

A shortage of galvanized sheet metal will increase the need for paint on farm granaries and small industrial buildings, the report said, thus raising the requirement for pigment.

Experts said a 10 per cent cut in cable sheathing thickness might be made without serious detriment to cable wires, but heavier demand for electric power transmission and telephone service is raising use of lead for this purpose.

The committee said other types of roofing could be used in place of sheet lead and also for gutter linings and flashings.

GROCERS SEEKING SUBSTITUTES FOR WAR LOST LINES

Such items as kitchenware, glassware, work shirts, cosmetics, and flower bulbs may eventually be added to merchandise lines of wholesale grocers to make up for business volume lost thru wartime shortages, Edward M. Steele, president of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Chicago, said yesterday.

Steele reported the industry generally has not expanded its lines, altho the National American Wholesale Grocers' association has been conducting a survey to obtain lists of related items which may logically be added. Shortages of a number of important items, such as salmon, tuna, tea, and spices, are bringing a significant loss of business volume, he asserted.

MATERIAL LACK SEEN AS MAJOR WAR PROBLEM

Needs Top Supplies Despite Use Curb.

New York, April 18 [Wide World].—An "over all bottleneck," a general squeeze in the absolutely basic materials of industry, may be one of the growing problems of coming months, many industrial observers here have concluded.

This sort of obstacle to production, these observers point out, is very different from the mere inability to produce a sufficient quantity of specific war materials, say, machine guns, plane motors, tanks, or shell cases.

Problems of the latter sort have been attacked one at a time and largely ironed out and production officials appear happier than for months in the belief that the individual bottlenecks are being broken.

Some Examples Are Cited.

They point to cases of complete cure for engines held up for lack of a few bronze bushings; shell cases unmade because it took time to substitute steel for brass; aluminum castings retarding plane schedules because the dies did not exist to produce them in sufficient quantity.

But from Washington and from the plants on the industrial firing line evidence appeared to be piling up that the supply of some kinds of basic materials was growing tight despite curtailment or complete cessation of their use for civilian needs.

To many industrial men the developing situation appeared to mark a new phase of the war effort, far removed from the "guns or butter" choice that seemed logical a few months ago.

Allocations Unavoidable.

Now, they said, cases were arising where, no matter what was done about civilian consumption, choices had to be made as to how to allocate many basic materials, and the skilled labor to convert them, to this or that war purpose.

Two most obvious tip-offs to the developing scarcities of fundamental materials were the recent Washington orders:

1. Tightening the control over building construction to the point where almost nothing can be erected except for a direct war purpose, and even war plants require specific approval by the War Production board.

2. Outlawing the use of metals shortly for 76 broad classifications of civilian consumption, equivalent to a virtual shutdown of the light metal fabricating industries.

Big Problems Posed.

The problems posed by a real shortage of basic materials will reach far into the country's economy, observers agreed.

For, they said, they imply either shortages of things actually needed in the struggle or what has been called "mine to finishing plant" expansion.

Cited in point were studies made some months ago of the possibility of an overall expansion of 10 million tons in the country's annual capacity to produce steel ingots. The mere construction, it was calculated, would use up about 2,250,000 tons of steel, or a quarter of the new plants' first year's production.

Chevrolet Will Build New Aluminum Forging Plant

Its location was not disclosed.

STOCKS CUT LOSS FOR WEEK WITH MILD WAR RALLY

Bombing of Japs Inspires Covering by Shorts.

New York, April 18 (AP).—News of the bombing of Japanese cities helped the stock market out of the depression which gripped it most of the week.

Recoveries in the stock exchange today ranged from fractions to a point or more, giving, incidentally, the first rise in the averages since April 6. Short covering was a factor in the buying.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite rose .3 of a point to 33.1. To market followers it seemed a rather thin advance considering the market's substantial losses Tuesday and Friday which carried the average to the lowest mark since April 28, 1933. Even allowing for the better feeling over the Tokio news, speculative sentiment remained colored by fears that Laval was committed to a degree of Nazi collaboration which would prove troublesome to the united nations.

Week's Volume Up Slightly.

On the week the Associated Press 60 stock composite was down a full point. Transfers today totaled 184,660 shares, against 142,560 last Saturday. Volume for the six days was around 2 million, or slightly above that of recent weeks.

Stocks showing moderate gains over Friday's closings included Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Anaconda, Westinghouse Electric, Johns-Manville, Santa Fe, and Southern Railway. Du Pont and Allied Chemical each climbed more than 2 points. United States Steel finished with a slight advance after setting a new low for the last year. American Telephone reached the lowest ground since 1938, ending off ¼.

CHICAGO LIST FIRMER.

Prices advanced unevenly yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange in light trading totaling only 7,000 shares. Of 53 issues traded, 28 advanced, 14 declined, and 11 closed unchanged. Commonwealth Edison, volume leader, advanced ¼ to 17⅞. Montgomery Ward advanced ¼ in the half hour following the close in New York.

TRADE IN BONDS SHRINKS; PRICES NEARLY STEADY

New York, April 18 (AP).—The bond market, with the smallest volume of Saturday trading since last Nov. 1, held nearly steady today. The carriers got most of the attention.

On the upside were St. Paul 5s, International Hydroelectric 6s, Southern Pacific 4½s of 1969, and Warren Brothers 6s, the last named pushing above par for the first time this year.

Sales aggregated $2,687,900, par value, against $6,012,600 Friday. The Associated Press average of 10 foreign issues went to a new 1942 high of 46.4 from 46.3 on Friday, the previous high for the year.

Republic of Cuba bonds reflected continued demand with the 4½s of 1977 reaching a new high of 79⅝. United States government loans were about steady.

Credit Union Forum Picks 5 Directors, 2 of Chicago

Five new directors were elected yesterday at the annual meeting of the Credit Union Forum, composed principally of Illinois employé credit unions, in the Hotel Sherman. They are R. C. Mueller, Maywood; J. E. Darby, Rockford; E. F. Graaff, Rock Island, and Thomas Taylor and L. A. Peck, Chicago. Most of the one day meeting, which closed with a dinner last night, was devoted to discussions of federal credit restrictions.

EASTMAN URGES FEDERAL RULE OF TRUCK WEIGHTS

Washington, D. C., April 18 (AP).—Congress was told today that laws of some states governing highway traffic were slowing the movement of military material and supplies, and was urged to break those transportation bottlenecks thru legislation.

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, said in a letter to House Majority Leader John W. McCormack [D., Mass.], that "the matter is of such seriousness that federal action should be taken at the earliest possible time," and suggested consideration of a measure already introduced by Sen. Charles D. Andrews [D., Fla.].

The Andrews bill would give the President power to prescribe size and weight limitations of carriers, and would prevent states from enforcing any statutes inconsistent with those limitations for a period ending six months after the war.

EGG FUTURES DIP BUT STAY WELL ABOVE WEEK AGO

Egg futures declined .05 to .15 cent a dozen on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, but remained .45 to .55 cents a dozen above the levels of a week ago. Announcement that the government paying price for powdered eggs will not be changed this week despite the recent gains in shell egg prices served to restrain demand, dealers said.

After declining .1 cent a pound to new seasonal lows, November butter futures steadied to close .05 cent lower at 38.45 cents a pound. Idaho potato futures were unchanged.

Failure to Observe Stop Sign Causes Fatal Homan Ave. Crash

George Brant, 42 years old, of 3939 North Sacramento avenue, died as the result of a collision between an automobile and a truck at 6:15 a. m. on April 1. According to the records of Ald. George D. Kells, chairman of the city council's committee on traffic and public safety, his truck was traveling south on Homan avenue when it collided with an automobile driven west on Division street.

Homan avenue is a thru street protected by signs and laws that require intersecting traffic to stop before proceeding across the thorofare. As a thru street, Homan avenue is a route open to trucks as distinguished from boulevards confined primarily to passenger vehicles.

Vision Obstructed.

Chicago Motor club engineers investigating the accident as a part of their campaign in an effort to teach others from the results of previous recent tragic accidents, point out that Division at this location is not a thru street. Regardless of the volume of traffic on Division street at any particular hour of the day, it is required to come to a full stop at Homan and proceed when traffic is clear.

Vision at two of the corners is obstructed by buildings, a danger sign for any safe driving motorist under any circumstances. Vision obstruction, according to the engineers, means that intersecting traffic, regardless of time of day, quantity of traffic or any other factor, must consider that the time for applying brakes after sighting a vehicle on the cross street has been considerably reduced.

In many cases those who are enjoying the privilege of a protected thorofare fail to realize that a car on a side street may actually be forced to come into the lane of moving traffic before it can sight a car on the thru street.

Must Obey Signs.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, says: "Traffic signs are erected for the protection of the motorist just as much as for pedestrians or other motorists who might be concerned. The failure to observe 'School—Slow' or a 'Thru Street' sign or traffic signal not only jeopardizes the life, limb, and property of the violator but exposes those who expect protection to the same hazard.

"It is the purpose of traffic engineers to concentrate traffic on certain streets because of their location, accessibility to important destinations or to provide a protected route for a large volume of vehicular traffic. Once on this thorofare the motorists should expect to travel with greater ease and safety, not only from intersecting traffic, but from pedestrians who should recognize that the route carries more and faster moving vehicles."

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

THREE SHORT ONE LONG TOOT.

Crystal Lake, Ill., April 16.—In driving the proscribed 40 miles an hour along the highways, I notice that by far the largest number of cars are loyally adhering to the speed limit set for rubber conservation. However, there are always a few who pass one at the former high speeds.

It occurred to me that these drivers could be reminded of their speed and at least made to feel self-conscious about it if they were signalled by the cars they pass with the Morse code for the victory—three short and one long toot. A newspaper could sponsor a drive like this because it would start people sounding the signal and let every one know what the signal means. Anyway, here is the idea. I thought it possibly worth writing in.

MRS. T. E. RYAN.

UNHEEDED PARKING SIGNS.

Chicago, April 16.—Will some city official explain why the taxpayers are put to the expense of "no parking 12 to 7 a. m." signs, the cost of the brackets and the cost of the installation in Addison avenue where I live? I come home from my work early morning and find as high as six and eight cars parked in one block, some parked under no-parking signs. No tickets are handed out.

TAXPAYER.

APRIL FOOL.

Chicago, April 1.—The April fools today are those who are paying gasoline taxes and city wheel taxes to the politicians and getting nothing in return. What we motorists need from these politicians now more than anything else is some pavements that will preserve our tires until this war is over. Holes and ruts in the streets are destroying the last tires we ordinary car owners are going to get until the war is won. Can't the politicians help us?

RAYMOND T. RENICK.

FROM A TRAILERITE.

Chicago, April 16.—Part of the auto crisis and the housing shortage could be solved if there were more extensive use of house trailers. If it were possible to have a trailer lot near arms factories, the workers wouldn't have to use tires and gasoline to commute. Chicago factories might use trailer lots similarly. As it is, with the lots remote from places of employment, the trailer owner is going to be in a fix when the tires on his car wear out.

TRAILERITE.

BRAKE TESTS ABUSE TIRES.

Chicago, April 14.—Much has been said and written about the shortage of rubber and repair parts for cars. However, in our Chicago safety lanes it seems to be a regular practice, when testing brakes, to all but stand one's car on its nose. I personally have never abused an automobile and I don't feel that I have to stand by and watch some one else abuse mine. It seems to me that a proper check on brakes could be made without this abuse of the tires.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The need for keeping automobiles in good condition for the duration of the war is resulting in the development of numerous services and devices to help keep the family automobile rolling. Tires must be given careful attention, engines must be given frequent checks and the car body itself needs care to keep it spick and span.

As an instance of the new development being announced frequently a Chicago manufacturer of chemicals has produced one that cleans tires and brightens up the chrome on car bodies.

The tire cleaner is said to rejuvenate rubber and make it easier to detect and remove foreign substances such as glass, tacks and nails. The tire service offered in conjunction with the cleaning fills in the holes in the casing caused by imbedded objects.

The chrome and body finish renewers also are said to give surprising results.

Of course, the old time companies are continuing to recommend frequent treatments to protect the body finish. Now that spring is here it is the part of wisdom to have your car thoroly cleaned and polished. Cleaning, including the underframe, removes dirt and chemicals used on roads which have accumulated during the winter. The chemicals, which are used to reduce the hazard of skidding on slippery roads, are apt to spot bright metal work.

The various finishes and polishes that are available on the market help the car to retain its original color. And if the need for selling a car should arise, a good looking car sells more easily than one that's shabby.

It's also a good precaution to have scratches on fenders touched up after the winter driving. If they are left unrepaired rust soon starts and before long a job which would have been moderate in cost becomes expensive. Most service stations have facilities for straightening fenders and restoring the natural color. However, it is advisable to have the work done at a service station or repair shop in which you have confidence.

WAR CONDITIONS NAILING DOORS OF ROADSIDE CABINS

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—Cabin camps on the tourist routes hereabouts are not receiving their annual spring coats of fresh paint. There are roadside eating places with boarded windows and nailed doors.

The majority of gasoline stations are closed at night. Some are closed in the daytime. A few never open any more.

There are billboards, damaged by winter's storms, that have not been repaired. Others are faded and rusted. Flamboyant blots on the landscape have become scarecrow relics of peacetime merchandising.

It's Distinctly American.

These are evidences of the passing of an industry—the moss and also the barnacles that fringed the main highways of America in an era when it was a poor man indeed who didn't take his family for an occasional pleasure drive. It's the passing of an industry peculiar in many respects, more often ugly than pretty, too scattered to audit, somewhat romantic, and distinctly American.

The moss is fading and the barnacles are dropping off. The juke box is quiet at the highway intersecting tavern. Folks from town don't drop in like they used to during leisurely motor jaunts.

The recreational motorist is disappearing. This may be more conspicuous on the Atlantic seaboard than in the midwest. Here we are closer to the enemy submarines sinking ships off our shores. Here the prospects of an enemy air raid are earnestly considered.

Gas Supply Cut.

Here, in the seaboard states, the filling stations are allowed a third less gasoline than they sold in 1941. But this isn't causing any embarrassment because the demand has dropped more than that. It's the rubber shortage that has halted most recreational travel, and if you haven't noticed it yet in Chicagoland, you will in another month.

Tourist cabins, hot dog counters, roadside taverns, and the like appear doomed. Billboard advertising, encroaching upon rural scenery, is likewise fated. This clutter that grew so fast in the last 15 years is headed for an even faster extinction unless a good substitute for rubber in tires is developed in the next two years.

The growth was mushroom along thousands of miles of roadway in America. It started with shabby shacks with no bathrooms for indigent motorists, dirty hamburger stands for the gastronomically reckless, beds for truckers in all night gas stations, and sandwiches and coffee sold by wives of station proprietors.

Better than Some Hotels.

In the last five or ten years, superior roadside facilities rose above the slums. In Florida and in the Rocky mountains, particularly, cabin camps offered beds, private baths, and food better than available in many hotels and at lower prices. Also they were more convenient than a hotel for a family on a vacation tour, with no need for the hotel's main advantage of being close to a business center and a railroad station.

Families of moderate affluence patronized the better roadside establishments in preference to restaurants and hotels in noisy and crowded business districts. At counters as clean as any in a big city's railroad stations, the traveling salesman, the truck driver, the migratory laborer, and the business executive returning from a fishing trip sat side by side with a readiness for conversation born of hours of aloneness behind a wheel.

Efforts to Regulate Fail.

Civic and official attempts to regulate the roadside growths have been ineffective with only a few exceptions. The exceptions, for the most part, were excessively expensive, such as the broad rights of ways of parkways in the New York area with landscaping screening the adjacent property. As a rule, a new road thru a pretty countryside was soon blotted by billboards and indiscriminate construction by the caterers to travel.

If the use of automobiles shrinks by 1944 as much as the government officials predict, and if the war lasts as long as military experts here forecast, peace may find America with an opportunity to rebuild its roadsides free of their many objectionable characteristics—if motoring again becomes America's favorite pastime.

Converting an Auto Into Ambulance

A Battle Creek company has developed a method for converting a two door sedan into an ambulance for use in civilian defense. When the need for an ambulance is over the car is quickly restored to its original purpose. A small turntable set up on the floor of the car enables a folding cot to be swung into the interior. Picture shows how car appears with patient.

BARRETT LOSES PLEA TO BAR 8c FARE TOMORROW

Court Denies Injunction In Street Car Suit.

Jacob I. Grossman.

Attorney General George F. Barrett lost yesterday in his second legal effort to prevent the street car lines' new 8 cent fare from going into effect tomorrow morning.

Judge John F. Bolton of the Superior court refused to issue a temporary injunction forbidding the Chicago Surface Lines [the street car lines] from raising the fare from 7 to 8 cents.

Judge Bolton took no action on Barrett's demand for a permanent injunction against the increased fares. This matter is expected to be heard later.

Undecided on Next Move.

Barrett said he is undecided as to his next move, but that he may take his petition for the temporary injunction to the Illinois Appellate court.

Barrett attacked the Illinois Commerce commission's order for the increase as illegal. He said that as attorney general he represents the state, but that his "first clients" are the street car riders in the street car fare case.

The attorney general argued that the street car lines have no legal right to ask for an increase because their franchise has expired. He said that because the lines have no right to the streets their property has the legal status of junk.

The commission's order, Barrett said, permits the street car lines to capitalize on a monopoly, since they occupy the streets and the city cannot afford to oust them.

Rails Improvement "Request."

Moreover, Barrett said, the commissions' order urges that the street car lines improve their service, but does not order them to do so.

William Wilson, one of the attorneys for the lines, asked if Barrett wanted the lines to vacate the streets after Barrett termed their properties "junk."

"That doesn't enter into it," Barrett replied.

Jacob I. Grossman, attorney for the joint board of management and operation of the surface lines, said all the attorney general's objections were without foundation.

Declines to Void Order.

Judge Bolton, in declining to issue the injunction, said the commerce commission had had ample time to study the case since authorizing the rate increase on April 10, and that since it had not reconsidered he saw no reason for the court to upset its order.

The attorney general has a petition pending with the commission in which he asks that the increase be suspended and that a rehearing be granted.

Street car lines officials said the increase will be put into effect as scheduled at 12:01 a. m. tomorrow.

Meanwhile the Chicago Industrial union council branded the increase a 7 million dollar traction "steal" and demanded that Gov. Green and the commerce commission rescind the rate order. The council appointed a committee to ask Mayor Kelly to use his influence to combat the increase.

The United Conference on the High Cost of Living also demanded that the commerce commission reverse its order for the fare increase.

VISITING NURSES CARE FOR 43,956 PATIENTS IN YEAR

During 1941, members of the Visiting Nurses' Association of Chicago made 370,716 visits in order to care for 43,956 patients, according to the organization's 52d annual report made public yesterday by Superintendent Mary E. Westphal.

"Our accomplishments cannot be told in figures," states the report. "The acutely and the chronically ill, babies and little children, old men and women, expectant mothers, all have had our nursing care and help. The nurses have not only helped infants get a good start in this world, they have also made it a little easier for some of the patients to leave it."

The report tells of numerous individual cases, and one in particular, in which 528 visits were made to Mrs. F. The loyalty of the nurses to this woman was matched by her husband's devotion, and his simple expression of thanks is a treasured souvenir of the case by the nurses.

The association's 1941 income was $352,563, its expenses $363,186, or an excess of $10,623 in expenses over income.

RICH COLLECTION TELLS HISTORIC STORY OF NATION

Treasures on Display in Downtown Building.

You walk down the flight of stairs in the Studebaker Fine Arts building, 414 South Michigan avenue, to the basement landing. A cigar store Indian, vintage of 1880, stands with palm outstretched. From beyond a wall comes the pleasant tinkle of music box tones.

You walk into the room beyond and you've just walked backwards into 50, 75, 150 years and more of American history. For this is the room which houses part of the great Americana collection of Lawrence E. Dicke, one of the country's ace gatherers of historical items.

Dicke, a gray-haired, slow-talking man equipped with a minute knowledge not only of the country's important history but of its miscellany, thinks, modestly, the collection is "worth coming miles to see." A visit there more than strengthens that belief.

Letters Written to Lincoln.

Dicke, in 40 years of collecting his material, has things few people in the world have these days. Ask to see his Lincoln collections and he leads you to one section of the room. You see photographs of the martyred president, Mary Todd Lincoln, the boys, the cabinet, many rare pictures you'll not find in standard history books. There are Lincoln letters, too; one advising a client to try another lawyer, another thanking a client for slight compensation.

Treasured, and expensive, in case you want to buy it, is one of the earliest biographies of Lincoln, written in 1860 by John Locke Scripps, one of the early owners and editors of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, then still known as the PRESS and TRIBUNE. It has only 32 pages and the print is tiny. There are only a few copies in the country.

You stroll along the walls, decked with political posters of varying age and varying sentiment, with sporting prints, with posters of American wars as far back as the Revolution. There are shelves with political buttons from McKinley and Bryan to Willkie and Roosevelt, with framed autographs of George Washington and Kosckiusko, Buffalo Bill Cody and P. T. Barnum.

Book on Art of Kissing.

There are old etiquette books and a rare item of 1859 called "The Philosophy of Kissing, By One Who Knows." Political cartoons deriding and praising. A pair of posters from the last World war, "Beware of German Trips!" and "We are at war and it is a very serious thing."

In four decades Dicke has collected more than 100,000 items—1,000 Currier and Ives and other early prints, 1,000 famous autographs, 1,000 historical prints, 2,000 buttons, badges, insignia, old pamphlets, books; 500 political broadsides, old time photographs, 500 valentines as far back as the types of 1820, Godey and flower prints, maps and guides of early America, embryonic Chicago, 10,000 items alone about this city.

Rare Picture of Singer.

Dicke is one of the few Chicagoans who still have their copies of that famed lyric, "Dear Midnight of Love," written by the late alderman of the 1st ward, "Bathhouse" John Coughlin and sung by little May De Sousa in the Chicago Opera house on an October night 42 years ago. Yes, he also has one of the rare pictures of May, who climbed to musical comedy fame on the alderman's immortal song.

He has the first book printed in Chicago, a dull volume of law cases issued in 1840. He has the first novel, "The War Scout" [1850], and the first book of poems, those of long forgotten William Asbury Kenyon [1845]. The latter belonged to the poet-newspaper man, Eugene Field. He has city council records, papers dealing with the Fort Dearborn massacre, land deal doucments, hundreds of stage bills, theater tickets, and pieces of sheet music.

Wife Also a Collector.

Where did he get them all? "I've been collecting since I was a boy," smiles Dicke. "I started gradually with old engravings issued before the fire and just kept going." His wife, Marry Ann Dicke, with whom he lives at 808 Washington street Evanston, also is a noted collector.

The two have made notable trips to buy choice items. The most memorable, says Dicke, was in 1923 when they sped to Nova Scotia where they heard that the rare "Chicago Illustrate," a series of 82 lithographs issued in 1867, was for sale. It was and they bought it.

The tinkling sound you hear as you view the wonders of the Dicke collection is explained, incidentally, when Dicke leads you into a side room and points to "The Regina," certainly the grandfather of all juke boxes.

It's a huge mahogany affair, invented for the World's Fair of 1893 with immense discs which slide up and down on springs and then produce the music on the same principle as the much tinier music boxes and old fashioned phonographs. But you can't buy that. Dicke recently sold it for $1,000 to Alden Scott Boyer, a fellow collector whose cosmetics store is just above the Dicke galleries.

"Anything else in the gallery tho," says Dicke with a grin," is for sale, but any one's free to come and just look around.

Day by Day on the Farm

By GAIL COMPTON

Farm Gardener Busy.

April 18, 1942.

THE gardener at the farm is busy all day long with the outdoor garden these days. The greenhouse doors are opened, the sashes have been lifted from the cold frames, and attention has turned to getting the flower beds ready.

During the last week the gardener has been putting in gladioli bulbs. Some of the bulbs were started in four inch pots in the greenhouse the first of February. These plants now are almost a foot high and will be set out in their permanent locations shortly.

Other bulbs that have been kept over the winter were set out in long rows in one part of the garden. Each bulb was treated before planting. The gardener soaks them in a solution containing one ounce of bichloride of mercury to eight gallons of water. This poison kills any thrips that might be present. The thrips ruin the blossoms and stop the flower growth.

Wage War on Thrips.

The gardener suggested that if glads are to be planted in areas where there has been an infestation of thrips, the plants should be thoroly sprayed later with Paris green. This will destroy any thrips that attack the plants after they are up.

The hybrid tea roses are showing a delicate growth and are responding rapidly to the warm weather. The rose bushes were hoeled up during the winter. They now have been uncovered and cut back to live wood. Tiny new shoots could be seen sprouting from the dark wood.

The gardener has a spraying program mapped out for his roses to prevent them from killing out or being damaged by black spot. He will spray them with a bordeaux mixture when they first start to come into leaf, and continue the spraying thru the hot months. He recommended any fungicide spray that had copper or sulphur in it as a good deterrent for black spot.

Time to Feed Peonies.

Now is the time to give your peonies a complete plant food, the gardener advised, as they are beginning to come to life and get their new spring growth. An inspection of the peony plants in the garden showed many long, thick, green and white sprouts appearing from the roots.

Peonies will respond nicely to steamed bone meal if it is scattered up and down the rows of plants. If a complete commercial fertilizer is used, place about a handful around each plant. Too much will burn them.

The asparagus beds have been scratched up, as have the rhubarb plantations. The asparagus shoots have been given a high nitrogen fertilizer which should force them to produce thick, juicy stalks.

The Conquest of the "Choker"

How Science Combated Diphtheria

By DR. IRVING S. CUTTER

(Photos courtesy Northwestern University Medical Library.)

Edwin Klebs, who first described the diphtheria bacillus.

Emil von Behring, who first prepared diphtheria antitoxin.

This is the first of a series of stories about the men whose discoveries have advanced science's fight against deadly diseases.

MANY A SMILE comes during the reading of old-time books on medicine. Perhaps the dark ages were correctly named. At any rate, physicians were obliged to labor without the scientific light of our era. Valiant and earnest as they were, these exponents of healing were powerless against many diseases. For example, what they called membranous croup (diphtheria) forecast tragedy more often than victory.

Fortunately for us and our children, the conquest of the "choker," as the disorder was labeled by the Spaniards, is now a reality. But the steps which led to this achievement have been steep and treacherous.

Few of us realize that George Washington succumbed to diphtheria. Altho the father of our country stood up under arduous periods of campaigning, he was never really robust. On one occasion he accompanied his half-brother Lawrence, a victim of pulmonary tuberculosis, to the Barbados, and while there suffered an attack of smallpox. He was also familiar with "Jesuit's bark" (quinine). His diary makes frequent mention of "spells" of chills and fever (malaria), for which he employed this product.

We have a number of accounts of his last illness. He had spent a stormy, sleety day —Dec. 12, 1799—in the saddle. He returned to his home about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, wet and thoroly chilled. Without changing his garments, he sat down to a meal which had been kept warm.

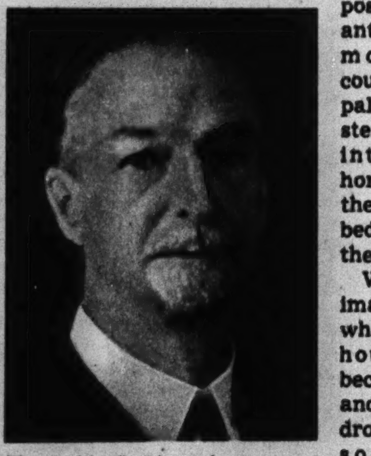
The next morning he complained of a sore throat. After lunch he went out to mark some trees for cutting and was quite hoarse when he reëntered the house. A vigorous shaking fit awakened him at 2 in the morning. Despite added bedclothing, the seizure persisted. When attempts were made to administer hot drinks he could not swallow. All the then known remedies, including bleeding, were without avail. He gradually became weaker and death occurred at 10 o'clock that night.

There can be scarcely any doubt that the disease was malignant diphtheria. The sore throat, hoarseness, and difficulty in swallowing pointed to the fact that a rapidly growing membrane had obstructed the larynx.

Many of us are old enough to remember when this terrible scourge struck the community in which we lived. The front door of the afflicted household was adorned with a strip of red flannel or other characteristic emblem. This served to notify all passersby and would-be visitors that some one within was suffering from a contagious malady. Whenever the disorder was rife other members of the family, without exception, became infected.

• • •

No scientific study of diphtheria was made until Louis Pasteur and Robert Koch and their pupils began to develop the germ theory and to hunt for causative organisms. In the meantime a French physician, Pierre Bretonneau (1778-1862) had described the symptoms and the course of the ailment with great accuracy. He it was who gave us the word diphtheria. In 1819 a devastating epidemic of sore throat appeared in Tours, France, where Bretonneau lived. His intensive work demonstrated that he was not dealing with ordinary sore throat. He emphasized its highly contagious character and asserted that the membrane might extend down the windpipe. On one occasion, with a child choking to death, he was brave enough to make an opening in the trachea. With respiration restored, the youngster recovered.



Theobald Smith, who proved that vaccination will protect.

Then came the striking proof of Edwin Klebs, in 1883, that the cause was a specific microbe which would flourish in the laboratory when fed upon special food. Still later Emil von Behring (Nobel prize winner in 1901) attempted to develop within the blood of horses a neutralizing substance against these bacilli. He reasoned that since the animal is so large, it would withstand quantities of the germ which would destroy a guinea pig. In addition, that the blood of the steed would produce protecting chemicals or antitoxin. Sure enough, when the serum from the treated horse was injected into guinea pigs or other small animals it safeguarded them completely.

But dare he try his remedy upon a human being? His discovery was made in the summer of 1890. Early in the autumn word was sent to him that a small boy in one of the public hospitals was desperately ill. Would he please administer his new medicine? Confident in the possession of an antidote, he summoned all his courage. With a pale face but a steady hand he introduced the horse serum and then sat by the bedside to watch the effects.

We can well imagine his joy when after a few hours breathing became easier and the little one dropped into a sound, natural sleep which betokened convalescence. This 36-year-old scientist had built his theories upon such a firm foundation that failure was impossible. He had attained a goal which the world had been seeking eagerly for nearly 2,000 years.

• • •

The use of antitoxin and its spread thruout the globe is now an old story. Refinements in manufacture have been brought about so that less and less of the compound is required. In other words, the potent elements have been concentrated.

But the end was not yet. "Why can we not make a vaccine," said certain research workers, "and protect every one so that no matter how frequent the exposure, the child thus armed will not contract the disease?" Following this suggestion, a mixture of toxin and antitoxin was utilized. Later it was found that the toxoid alone would establish immunity when injected in minute doses. Thus was born a plan by means of which susceptible persons could escape the pestilence.

• • •

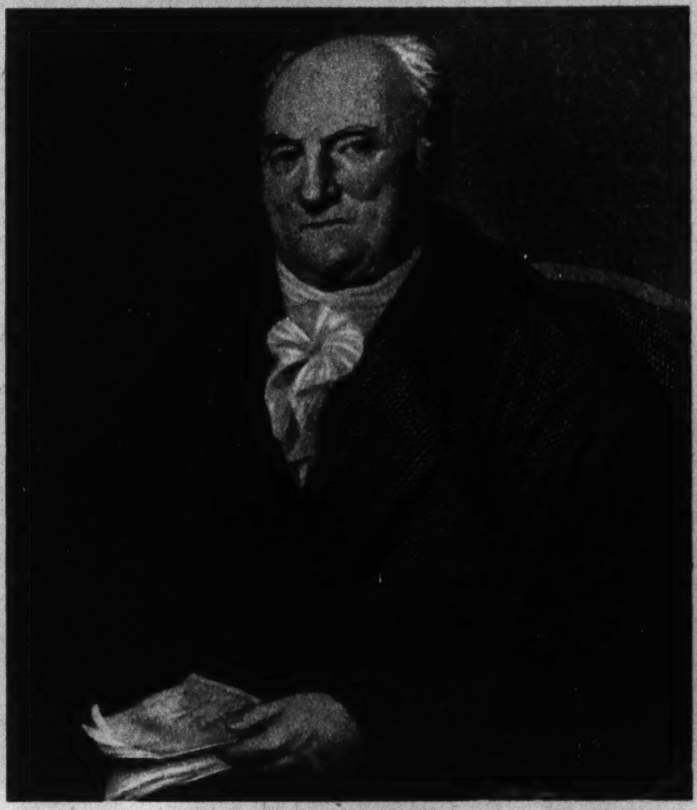
Yes! We still have diphtheria. There were thousands of deaths thruout the world last year. But there need have been none, or scarcely any. Just as we read occasionally of some citizen who has never ridden in the "cars," so we may encounter families where prejudice, superstition, or ignorance will step in and halt every measure designed to avoid disaster. But among intelligent peoples, wherever the public press travels, news of modern progress in the preservation of life is welcomed. Moreover, we have a skin test, devised by Béla Schick, which will tell us whether an individual is susceptible or not.

It was Theobald Smith, an American, who proposed our present plan. He worked with guinea pigs and verified his prediction that protection would last for approximately two years. Subsequently Von Behring showed that human beings would respond in like manner. William Hallock Park of New York City applied the method effectively to the general population.

Thus our children have been fortified against a stealthy destroyer of life. No longer need mothers shiver at the mention of the ailment or fear that their offspring will be snatched from them one by one. There are countless thousands living today because of the beneficent rôle of antitoxin.

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

● This is another in a series of biographical sketches of America's historical celebrities appearing every week in the Graphic Section. The illustrations are taken from a famous work, "The National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans," published in 1865.



Elias Boudinot

ELIAS BOUDINOT, noted statesman of the Revolutionary period, was born in Philadelphia, May 2, 1740. His great-grandfather, of the same name, had been driven out of France in 1685 by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes and had settled in America in 1687. The subject of this sketch was the fourth successive Elias of the family Boudinot.

He studied law as a young man and in 1760 was licensed to practice that profession. By 1770 he had attained prominence as a lawyer. In the meantime, however, he had moved to New Jersey, where in 1774 he became a member of the committee of correspondence of Essex county.

In August, 1775, as a member of the New Jersey provincial congress, he was instrumental in obtaining gunpowder for Washington's army, which was besieging Boston.

• • •

The Continental congress early in 1777 appointed Boudinot commissary general of prisoners, with the pay and allowances of a colonel. In this capacity he organized the care of the American prisoners, going so far as to spend $30,000 of his own money in their behalf. After the war he succeeded in recovering most of this money. In the latter part of 1777 he was elected to the Continental congress, but he did not attend its sessions until the following year, and then only at the insistence of General Washington, who pointed out that it offered the best means of recovering the money that he had spent.

Boudinot was elected again and again to congress and served in it until 1784, being its president in 1782. As a member of this body he signed the treaty of peace with Great Britain and the treaty of alliance with France.

As a leading member of the Federalist party he helped ratify the new federal constitution in New Jersey, escorted Washington to New York for his first inauguration as President, and served in the first three congresses after the formation of the federal Union. In the congressional attack on Alexander Hamilton's conduct of the treasury department he was the leader of the defense.

In 1795 Boudinot succeeded David Rittenhouse as director of the government mint. In this capacity his record was above criticism. Holding the position for 10 years, he finally resigned in order to devote his main attention to biblical study—he was an extremely devout man.

In connection with his studies he wrote a number of religious works, including "The Age of Revelation," "Memoirs of the Life of the Rev. William Tennent," "The Second Advent," and "A Star in the West." In the last-named works he endeavored to prove that the American Indians were the lost tribes of Israel. He helped found the American Bible society and was elected its first president in 1816. All but his early years were spent in New Jersey, his residences there being successively in Princeton, Elizabethtown, and Burlington. He died Oct. 24, 1821.

PERFECT POEMS

The Tribune has been requested by many readers to continue publication of "Perfect Poems," altho the original list, taken from "Fifty Perfect Poems," compiled by Rossiter Johnson and Charles A. Dana, has been exhausted. Future poems will be selected from the works of all writers whose poetry has survived the test of years.

THE AMERICAN FLAG

By JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE (1795-1820)

When Freedom, from her mountain height,
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars in glory there!
She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
The milky baldric of the skies,
And striped its pure celestial white
With streakings of the morning light,
Then from his mansion in the sun
She called her eagle-bearer down,
And gave into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chosen land!

Majestic monarch of the cloud!
Who rear'st aloft thy regal form,
To hear the tempest-trumpings loud,
And see the lightning lances driven,
When strive the warriors of the storm,
And rolls the thunder-drum of heaven,—
Child of the sun! to thee 'tis given
To guard the banner of the free,
To hover in the sulphur smoke,
To ward away the battle-stroke,
And bid its blendings shine afar,
Like rainbows on the cloud of war,
The harbingers of victory!

Flag of the brave! thy folds shall fly,
The sign of hope and triumph high!
When speaks the signal-trumpet tone,
And the long line comes gleaming on,
Ere yet the life-blood, warm and wet,
Has dimmed the glistening bayonet,
Each soldier's eye shall brightly turn
To where thy sky-born glories burn,
And, as his springing steps advance,
Catch war and vengeance from the glance.
And when the cannon-mouthings loud
Heave in wild wreaths the battle shroud,
And gory sabers rise and fall
Like shoots of flame on midnight's pall,
Then shall thy meteor glances glow,
And cowering foes shall shrink beneath
Each gallant arm that strikes below
That lovely messenger of death.

Flag of the seas! on ocean wave
Thy stars shall glitter o'er the brave;
When death, careering on the gale,
Sweeps darkly round the bellied sail,
And frightened waves rush wildly back
Before the broadside's reeling rack,
Each dying wanderer of the sea
Shall look at once to heaven and thee,
And smile to see thy splendors fly
In triumph o'er his closing eye.

Flag of the free heart's hope and home,
By angel hands to valor given,
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us,
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us?

VITAMIN FOR GRAY HAIR

Millions of people enduring gray hair—and hating it—now may be able to eliminate it by natural means! It's the big vitamin news of the year!

Scientists have discovered that a vitamin deficiency can be the cause of many cases of gray hair.

National magazines are currently publishing reports of tests not only with animals but with people citing results which may be "revolutionary."

In extensive tests, animals have been deprived of the calcium pantothenate vitamin in their diets and their hair turned white. With calcium pantothenate restored to the diet, the white hairs turned dark again.

Now, tests with the vitamin calcium pantothenate have produced startling results in people of various ages, some young, some old, with varying degrees of grayness. These facts are not advanced as conclusive—not all the people taking calcium pantothenate for gray hair restoration treatment have showed improvement, but it is reported that 88% did.

Some people show quicker results than others taking the same daily amount of calcium pantothenate. A man 50 years old showed hair color improvement in 20 days—a woman 23 years old did not show color improvement until after 6 months. In many cases there was positive evidence of a return of natural hair color after 90 days.

Nutritional experts state that calcium pantothenate, which is a vitamin food supplement, is harmless even though taken in quantities many times larger than the suggested dose. It is available in pleasant capsule form under the name CHROMA-THENATE.

Try a ninety day supply.

Models Are Movie Material

Looking at Hollywood with John Chapman

Voice of Movie Fan will be found on Page 9

Kay Aldridge, for Instance, Has Become Serial Queen

Hollywood.

A MODEL IS a sort of upper-class showgirl. A showgirl is a stately babe who walks around wearing clothes, or makes a few feathers look like clothes, in a musical comedy. A model is a stately babe who wears clothes at fashion shows, dates all of the best boys in town at the best night clubs, and wins fame by having her face and/or form portrayed in four colors. Hollywood has always been interested in models, and in the course of a year turns over in an impersonal way more models than a motor factory trying to shift to aircraft production.

Some of our best movie stars have been clothes mannequins—Norma Shearer, for instance. And Hollywood, ever on the lookout for a beautiful face above a form dee-vine, makes yearly raids on the portrait galleries, fashion shows, and élite rendezvous of Chicago, Cleveland, New York, and even Los Angeles. It brings out a yearly batch of lovelies on stock contracts for $75 or $100 a week, publicizes them, uses them for calendar art—and dares them to show enough personality to warrant their options being taken up.

Last year the Warners assembled, either by importation or local raids and pickups, six fabulously beautiful models and gave them a nation-wide buildup as the Navy Blues sextet. They were Kay Aldridge, Peggy Diggins, Marguerite Chapman (no relation, doggone it), Claire James, Georgia Carroll (no relation, either, dagnabit), and Lorraine Gettman. Each one had Hollywood at her feet, and each still has the chance to become a star; but none is a star yet.

Kay Aldridge has had the most interesting subsequent career, because it's so different from what you'd expect of a cover girl. Kay has become a serial queen and for the last several weeks has been barking her pretty shins, falling off horses, fighting villainous Bedouins, eating box lunches on location, and wearing khaki shirt, khaki shorts, a six-gun, and a knife in a 30-reel thriller called "The Perils of Nyoka."

"Perils" is a Republic serial. I won't burden you with a plot, but will merely give you the instalment headings. From these you can write your own plot, and I'll bet it's the same one. They are: "Desert Intrigue," "Death's Chariot," "Devil's Crucible," "Ascending Doom," "Fatal Second," "Human Sacrifice," "Monster's Clutch," "Tuareg Vengeance," "Burned Alive," "Treacherous Trail," "Unknown Peril," "Underground Tornado," "Thundering Hoofs," "Blazing Barrier," and "Satan's Fury."

• • •

That, friends, is a heck of a set of predicaments for a cover girl, and when I went out on Republic's location I told Kay so.

"The Stork club set," I told her as I eyed a black-and-blue mark half way between one of her knees and one of her shorts, "would hardly recognize you now."

"But," said Miss Aldridge, "this is my dish. I was never meant to be a model. I can't walk like one yet, because I'm still pigeon-toed. I'm a farm girl from tidewater Virginia. Why, our house is the oldest frame house in that part of the country, built in 1690, and we still haven't got any money to put in plumbing and lights. Before we do that we've got to get enough money to fix up the house so it will be worth putting lights and plumbing into."

Kay's career might have been nothing whatever had it not been for the wonderful accident of superlative beauty. She was a country girl. Her father had died when she was a small child, and while her mother earned money by teaching, Kay was brought up by three great-aunts. Kay went to a female seminary in Maryland, won letters in track, was voted prettiest girl in the school, then became Apple Blossom princess of Winchester, Va. But she had no notion of making beauty a career, so she studied stenography and wound up with a job in the war department in Washington, D. C.

Somebody had suggested that she was attractive enough to be a John Powers model in New York, and she kept this in mind. In the war department a lieutenant asked her to go up to West Point to a dance, and she went. From West Point she went to New York with $6 in her purse and called at the Powers office on an off chance. Powers immediately put her to work—and that was the end of Kay Aldridge, the farm girl and government stenog. In her place appeared a glamorous cover girl.

A cover girl assignment took Kay with a group of models on a junket to Honolulu, and on the way back she naturally stopped off in Hollywood. Hollywood naturally gave her a job. Twentieth-Fox first engaged her and put her in chill parts and beautiful gowns. She didn't register. Then Warners made her one of the six honeys in "Navy Blues." She registered, but not as an actress.

• • •

Recently Republic began hunting for a new serial queen, and the choice narrowed down to Kay on the basis of looks. "But can you show any life?" she was asked by somebody who had seen her in the chill parts. "Just give me a chance," said Kay. They did, and she has shown so much life that she has already injured two stunt men in fights. She hasn't yet learned to pull her punches, as good movie scrappers do.

The life of a beauty in New York or Hollywood is extremely pleasant. Pretty clothes, publicity, compliments, parties, plenty of beaux. A hothouse life. Being a serial queen is something else. Most of "The Perils of Nyoka" is being shot on location in Ventura county, about an hour's drive from' Hollywood. Kay checks in at the studio at 6 a. m., puts on her shorts costume, and gets made up; then with the rest of the troupe she takes a bus to the ranch. Until the light fades around 6:30 p. m. it's bang-bang-bang, cramming footage into the camera, with only a few minutes out for eating a possibly dangerous box lunch.

Brenda Joyce

Janis Carter

It's after 8 p. m. when Kay has washed the dirt and makeup and donned her own clothes at the studio. Just time for dinner and flop! into bed. For a few days Kay tried commuting to her home in Santa Monica, which she shares with her mother and two brothers, who work in an aircraft plant. A few days were enough; then she took a cabin in a motel near the studio. The movie company thought it a bit undignified for a serial queen to be putting up at a roadside auto camp, but it didn't bother Kay. She never did go much for the New York model stuff and cold glamor rôles. She's just a Virginia farm girl who happened to be born beautiful.

What has happened to the other beauties who got nation-wide plugs in "Navy Blues"? Well, Claire James, who was Miss America at the New York fair and who has been in show business since Gus Edwards' modern revival of his "School Days" troupe, married Busby Berkeley, M-G-M's musical show director, three or four weeks ago.

Marguerite Chapman, a New Yorker and another Powers model, did not have her option renewed after "Navy Blues"—but Columbia picked her right up and has given her a good rôle in "Parachute Nurse." The studio is convinced that she has personality as well as beauty and is giving her all the chances to win stardom as an actress. Columbia has also done well by another cover girl, Jinx Falkenburg.

Georgia Carroll, a tall, blonde Texan, was also a fotog's model in New York, and when she came to Hollywood studios gave her bits in "Maisie Was a Lady," "Ziegfeld Girl," "They Met in Argentina," and a couple of other films. Warners gave her the old buildup along with her five mates, but finally dropped the option and Miss Carroll is now free-lancing.

• • •

Lorraine Gettman of Lincoln, Neb., didn't come to Hollywood by way of the eastern picture galleries. She came right out here and became the model of a local beauty discoverer, Tom Kelly, who soon began getting her on magazine covers and billboards. Warners have taken up her option—which means that they think she can act; but no great rôles have fallen her way yet.

Another whose option was taken up is Peggy Diggins, a New Yorker who thought she was going to become a dancer but who instead became a model for the other cover girl Croesus, Walter Thornton. Warners have had her in bits in "Santa Fe Trail," "High Sierra," "City for Conquest," and other flickers besides "Navy Blues."

Another studio which has always had an eye for curves is Twentieth-Fox, and a number of its actresses are ex-models. Janis Carter helped pay her way thru college by being a mannequin at a Cleveland, O., store.

Then she went to New York, sang in church choirs, finally landed a rôle in "Panama Hattie." Roseanne Murray of Chester, S. C., was a Powers model and first came to notice in Vyvyan Donner's fashion shorts in the Movietone newsreel. Roseanne is now working at her first substantial film rôle—that of a secretary in the Don Ameche-Henry Fonda-Lynn Bari "The Magnificent Jerk." Brenda Joyce, Missouri-born but California-raised, worked thru three years of U. C. L. A. by being an advertising and fashion model for Bullock's, Magnin's, and other local big stores. Her real name is Graftina Leabo. Nobody discovered her. She discovered herself by going to Twentieth-Fox and getting a job as an extra. Now she is working with Laurel and Hardy in "A-Haunting We Will Go."

Of all the recent crop of four-color, slick-paper beauties I think Kay Aldridge has made herself most interesting by tackling a knock-down, drag-out job in a serial. There's no better way of learning how movies are made—and, girls, you've got to know what movies are about before you get very far in them.

Kay Aldridge, at left, as the heroine in "The Perils of Nyoka." And, below in an action scene from one of the instalments.

LLOYD WENDT

AUSTRALIANS for years have been cognizant of the Japanese threat in the South Pacific. They have regarded their country, a vast island continent about the size and shape of the United States, as the bastion of the white race in the Pacific, and all political parties have for years adhered to the principle of "white Australia," which bars colored races from permanent residence save for the few thousand aborigines present when the white man came. This principle is no reflection on colored races, the Aussie points out, but is maintained for purely economic reasons. As a result, however, there is no Japanese fifth column in Australia to assist the invader, as in Thailand, Malaya, Burma, and the Netherlands Indies.

There are only 7,000,000 Australians, but they are a fighting race. They are much like western Americans, because they are still men of the frontier. Of the total present population 86.3 per cent were born in Australia.

• • •

Altho more than half his continent is still undeveloped, the Aussie is no backwoodsman without modern methods of warfare. In the last two years he has been developing his industry, which, while not big enough to supply all his needs, helps now and can be expanded as the war continues. His cities, in which more than a half million persons work at manufacturing, are big and modern. Sydney has a population of 1,303,000, Melbourne 1,047,000. Brisbane and Adelaide have more than 323,000 persons each, and Perth has 225,000.

The Australian has a fondness for automobiles almost equal to that of Americans, and has nearly as many cars per capita. His difficulty is lack of oil. In 1939, to keep the Australian cars and factories running, there were imported 145,000,000 gallons of oil and 455,000,000 gallons of crude petroleum, much of it from the Netherlands Indies, now in Japanese hands.

A curious characteristic of the Australian is his penchant for city life. More than 47 per cent of the population lives in the eight largest cities and only 35.9 per cent lives in rural areas, despite the fact that the real wealth of the country is in farm production. One explanation of this is the great ranches, a few of them as large as the state of Alabama, on which thousands of cattle and sheep are raised with little supervisory labor. Another is the recent tendency of the people to leave the farms for the industries of the city.

Some observers think that Australia will be doomed eventually if this tendency is not checked. There has been almost no emigration to Australia in recent years, and the birth rate has been falling. Births still substantially outnumber deaths—the Australian death rate of 9.93 per 1,000 is one of the lowest in the world—and the population is slowly increasing, but it has not yet begun to utilize the full resources of the country.

For Australia is a rich country, both actually and potentially. It supplies about one-fifth of all the world's wool, it exports vast quantities of meats, grain, and dairy produce, and it is forced to limit its production of sugar for lack of a market. It has coal and iron supplies and moderate amounts of other minerals, produces plenty of fruits, has all the electric power it can use without touching the ultimate possibilities. The only vital lack is oil, certain soft woods, and some manufactured articles.

It is the profusion of wealth that permits the bulk of the population to engage in commerce, manufacture, and shipping in the principal cities while little more than one-third of the workers are basic producers. Despite this disproportion in economic activity, the city dwellers live well.

According to the 1933 census, of the 1,434,000 private houses in Australia 55.4 per cent are owned by the people living in them. There are few slums in the big cities. Most of the workers live in their own five-room homes, built at an average cost of $2,900 to $5,000, including the price of a 50x120-foot lot. Before the war a furnished flat with two bedrooms, a living room, kitchen, and bathroom could be rented for about $10 a week in good districts; unfurnished flats were about $7.25 a week. A five or six room house in the suburbs could be rented for as little as $28 to $33 a month.

The cost of living generally is low. Thousands of families in good circumstances live on less than $22.75 a week. The average basic wage for the commonwealth is about $14 a week. Before the war that was considered sufficient to support two adults and two children, altho it provided merely the bare necessities. Prior to the outbreak of the war, and the subsequent increase in prices, Australian dietitians estimated that $8 a week would provide the foodstuffs needed for a family of two adults and two children.

• • •

Most of the families in the cities live modestly. The middle class groups could afford a servant if they could obtain one, but there has always been an acute shortage of servant help—there are 100,000 fewer women than men in the country. Says a recent government handbook:

"A great many women in Australia do their own work, and it means no loss of standing. You will find this very true; you may be at your laundry tubs Monday morning and meet whom you will, where you will, on Monday afternoon. If you admit to doing all your own work, far from losing by the admission, you will gain by it, for we have a real sense of the dignity of labor in Australia."

The life of the Australian farmer is not so pleasant, but it makes for a rugged individualism characteristic of the continent. Altho the best land in New South Wales has now been settled, there are immense tracts of productive land which the farmer may obtain almost without cost if he will live on it six months of the year and make improvements.

In western Australia a settler can get land at from 15 cents to $2.25 an acre, and he need pay nothing the first five years but the interest on the cost of surveying his tract. If he is content with a homestead of 160 acres or a grazing plot of 400 acres he may obtain them in some sections merely by paying the survey and land office fees. He must make improvements at the rate of $2 an acre within seven years.

The man who yearns for real territory under his feet can get cultivation farms of from 1,280 to 2,560 acres or grazing lands from 12,800 to 38,400 acres merely by agreeing to stock it and fence it according to government requirements. Stocking such areas requires capital, of course.

The difficulty with these lands is not that they cannot be made productive, but that they are too far from transportation. Some ranchers drive their cattle overland for three or four weeks before they reach a railroad. In the southeast the farms and ranches are prosperous and well served with transport, but in the distant spaces the inhabitants live a lonely life.

The farmers and grazers of Australia are much like our own

Because of terrain, gold mining shipments are made by plane.

ONE HUNDRED miles from Australia's northern coast, and in some places only seven bomber hours from Sydney, lies New Guinea—second largest island in the world, and a threatening outpost in Japan's advance in the southwest Pacific.

The island's value is more than just strategic, however. It is rich in many natural resources and is a paradise for the scientist and anthropologist.

Among islands New Guinea ranks next to Greenland in size. It spreads over 330,000 square miles of the southwest Pacific. The western half normally is administered by the Netherlands Indies, the east by Australia. Australia's share is subdivided into Papua and Northeast New Guinea Territory.

Before the first World war the Northeast Territory was known as Kaiser Wilhelm's Land. Australia seized it from the Germans in 1914 and received a postwar mandate. Papua, once a British crown possession, was turned over to Australia in the early 1900s.

• • •

New Guinea has been called the last stand of stone age man. Its interior largely belongs to the head hunter and cannibal. The more than a million natives range from pigmies to near-giants, from blacks to deep tans. Most familiar is the negroid Papuan type—long, bushy hair, scar-decorated body, shell and tooth necklace, feathered headdress, bones worn crosswise in the nostrils. Some nomadic tribes live almost as simply as wild animals; others reside in relatively advanced communities.

Many Papuan houses are built on piles or in trees. The grass-thatched tree house is reached by a long ladder. The tree dweller is likely to feast on yams, rice, corn, sugar cane, bananas, breadfruit, or sago palm flour.

Before the war in the Pacific the whites in New Guinea numbered six to seven thousand. They were planters, mining employés, traders, or missionaries. Four thousand lived in Northeast New Guinea, 2,000 in Papua, and only a few hundred in the Netherlands west.

The island, lying almost on the equator, is not healthful to travelers. Fevers abound. The climate is hot and humid. Insects are harassing.

The major factor in development of New Guinea was the discovery of gold during the middle 1920s. The chief gold fields are some 40 miles inland from the east central coast, where the Japanese made their first landings. With transport blocked by mountain and jungle, the gold fields inaugurated plane service in 1927. Airfields at Salamaua and Lae sent tons of equipment and received millions in gold. The two ports (now in Japanese hands) became boom towns.

Petroleum has been an increasing lure. Prospecting has indicated valuable deposits in both the Netherlands and Australian areas. Also undeveloped are vast timber stands, coal, copper, and silver deposits.

Rubber, coffee, and sisal are normally produced on European-operated plantations. Copra, from coconut cultivation, long has been an important product of the island.

For the naturalist peacetime New Guinea presented a laboratory for research. Rare orchids grow in hundreds of varieties. Some of the curious animals, like the pouched marsupial and egg-laying mammal, are allied to Australia's. The island's natural life ranges from the brilliantly marked butterfly to the fruit-eating bat. One of its most notable birds is the beautiful bird of paradise, whose export has been forbidden.

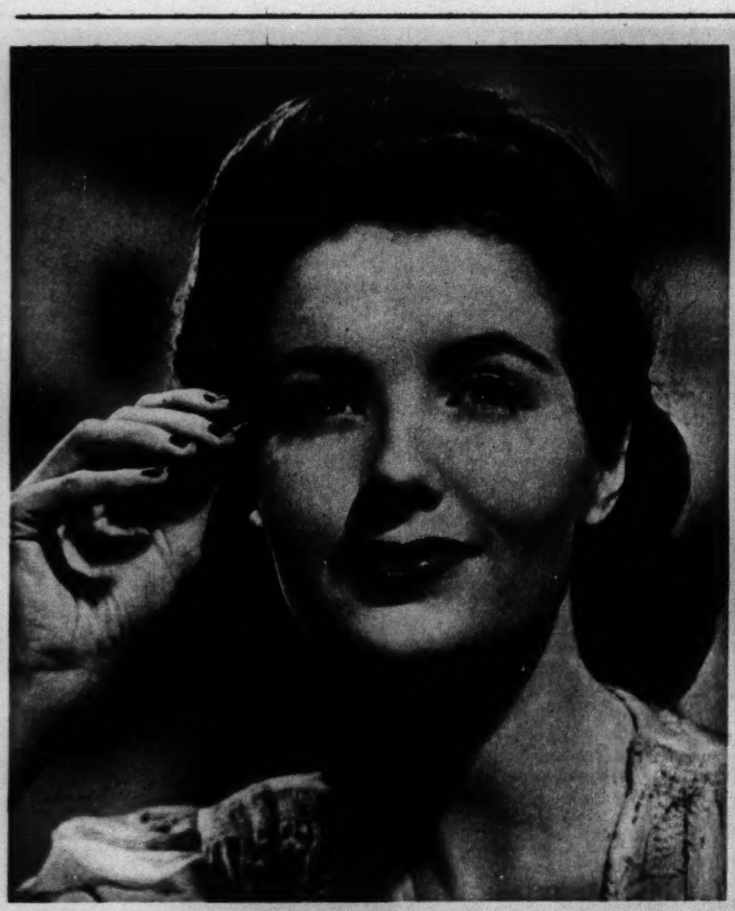
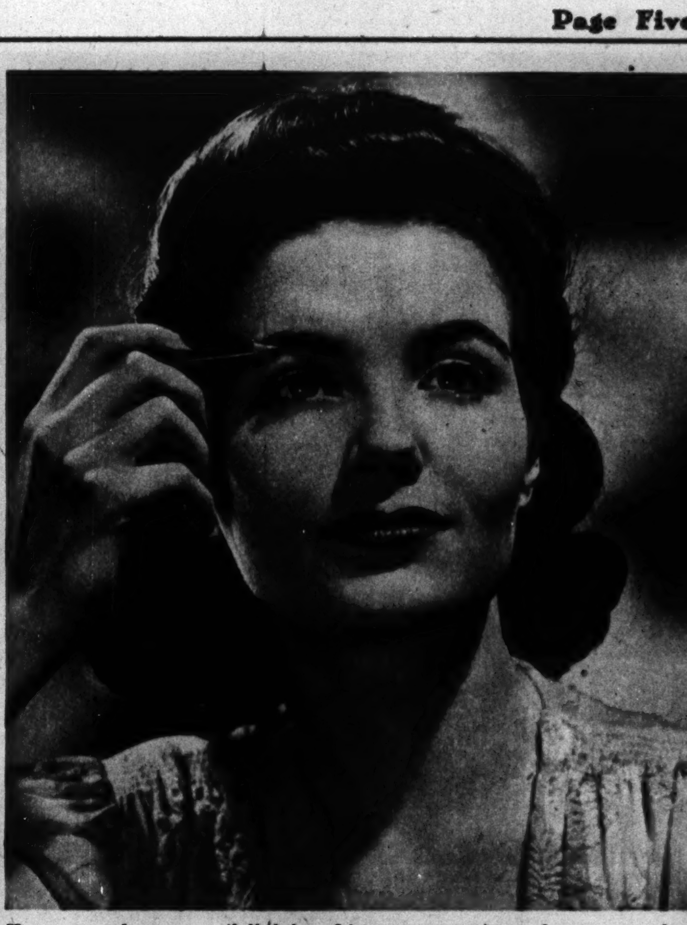
AYE FOR AN EYE

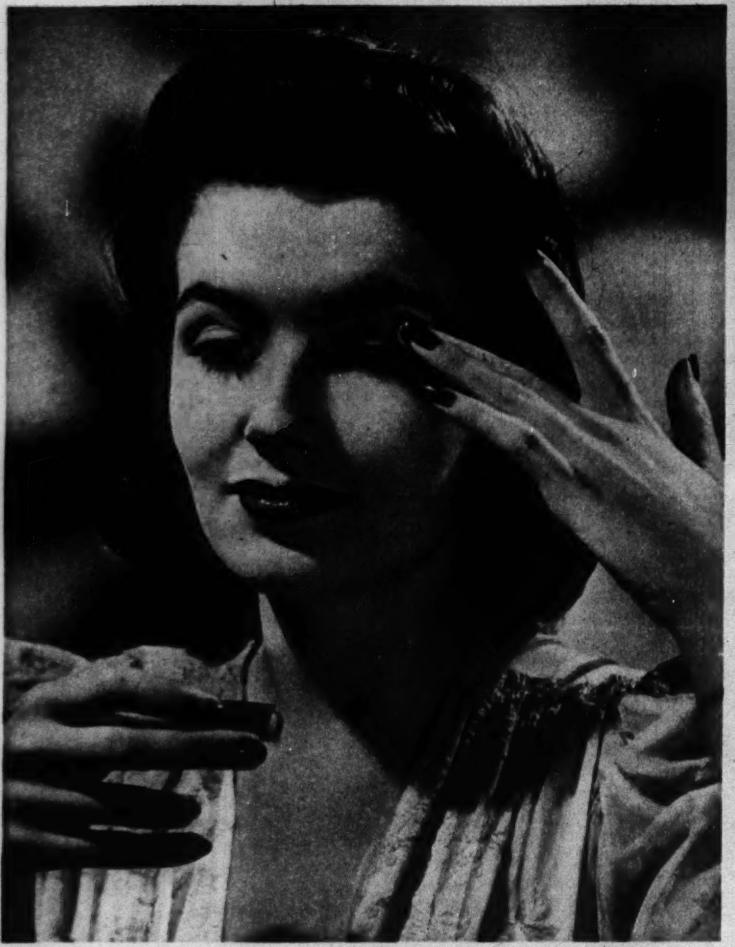


Mascara should enhance. Apply it in long, even, upward strokes, allowing no pointed clusters to form. Select it to complement your coloring, not to make you look like a gypsy.

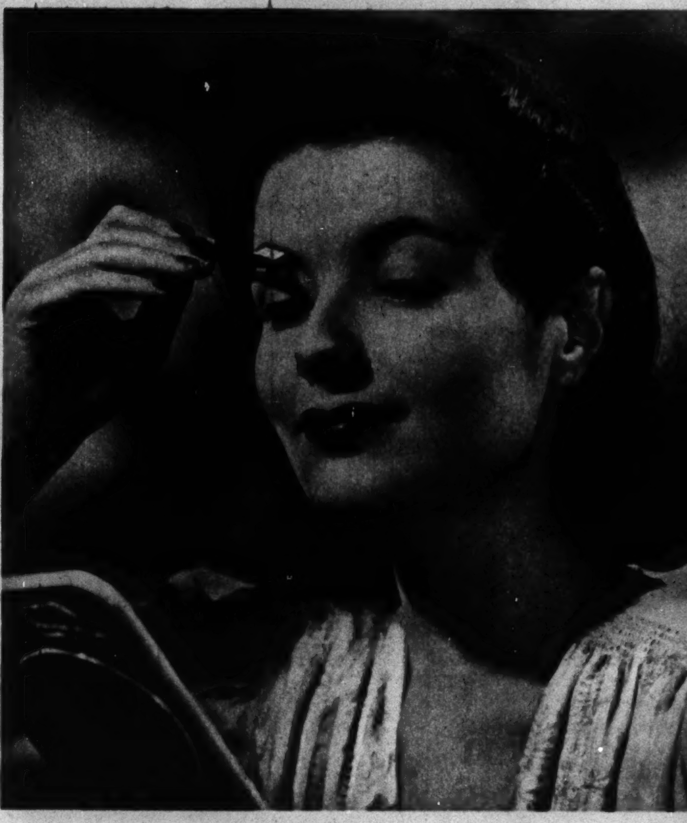
Emphasize your eyes. They may be strictly utilitarian, but use them for something more than just seeing.



Use an eyebrow pencil lightly. It's meant to give color, not to chart a brand new course for the brow line.



Eye shadow will bring out the artist in you. You'll have fun experimenting with the various hues to find the one that emphasizes the hidden depth of your orbs. (Tribune Studio photos.)



Good grooming demands an eyebrow brush. It will keep the brows free of powder and the hairs in a well defined line.

By LOUISE DOOLEY

EYES ARE a fascinating subject. Whether they are cornflower blue, coolly gray, deeply brown, entrancingly green, hazel, or what have you, they can become very arresting.

Eye makeup is a ticklish business. It takes plenty of experimenting in your own room before the proper effect can be achieved. Eye makeup too lavishly applied can be ruinous. Be discreet and studiously avoid that hard, garish appearance that looks as if you're playing the rôle of Sadie Thompson.

There's hardly a woman who can boast a pair of eyes that are not improved by a modest use of eye makeup. Mascara should be applied in long, even strokes the full length of the lash. Put it on evenly and brush the lashes with upward strokes. Don't make the mistake of using it too heavily and matting the hairs in separated clusters. Some women will find that a second coat applied after the first coat is well dried will be best for their particular needs. If the lashes are unusually short the mascara may be applied to the tips only to add the illusion of length. Mascara on the lower lashes is to be used lightly. It is apt to smudge and give a too-late-hours look.

• • •

Eye shadow can bring out the artist in you. There are many beautiful shades in this cosmetic ranging thru brown, various blues, greens, purples, and grays. Select the color that brings out the most flattering color of your orbs. Blend the tint lightly with the fingers, starting from the center of the upper lid close to the lashes. Be sure that the blending of color is thoro, with no uneven patches to give a mottled look.

An eyebrow brush is an essential to good grooming. Brush the brows upward, flicking out any particles of powder that may be clinging to them. With even strokes brush the hair into place, following the natural line. If there are too many scattered hairs on the under side of the line they may be plucked out, but it is folly to pluck until the line that nature intended to complement your face is completely obliterated. If the brows need a little added color use an eyebrow pencil, but don't make the mistake of running it thru so the skin under the brows bears little dots of color. Touch the line so that only the eyebrows themselves are tinted.

AUSTRALIA

rugged pioneers. They are lean, hardy men and women, inured to the hot climate, at home in arid distances that may spell destruction to an invading army.

A booming industry in Australia is sugar cane production in Queensland. In the extreme north of this tropical state live 250,000 white persons, the largest white colony in the tropics anywhere in the world. Nowhere else, say the Australians, are white persons exclusively engaged on so vast a scale in the production of sugar. The country has been exporting about 400,000 tons of sugar a year. It could produce much more, but has been restricted by a world quota system. If American ships bringing troops and supplies to Australia could return with surplus wool and sugar from that continent it would not only help save Australia economically but would augment these supplies in the united nations' larder.

• • •

Both in the tropics and the arid west the Australians are waging a fight against the forces of nature that has not been wholly won. Given time, the productive areas of the continent may become as populous and prosperous as the United States. But now, facing invasion, the Aussie, tough as he is, suffers from his lack of numbers and the limitations of his manufacturing equipment. Until American troops are on hand in great numbers, military experts say, it would be almost impossible to prevent the Japanese from landing somewhere on Australian soil if they elected to make the attempt.

The attack, many observers think, will come against the southeast coast, below the Great Barrier reef that extends 1,200 miles south from the tip of the Cape York peninsula. The peninsula itself lies only 100 miles from Japanese-invaded New Guinea, but it is so wild and desolate as to offer little lure for the invader. It is known to Australians chiefly as a land of strange marine creatures, tree-climbing fish, the fiddler crab, the poison-spined urchin, the ferocious eight-foot eel.

These creatures are familiar to the intrepid divers who frequent the peninsula in search of trochus, the shellfish whose glistening shell was shipped to Japan in peaceful times and thence exported as pearl stud or button.

At one time, during the gold rush of the 1870s, there was a city, Cooktown, on the east coast, with a population of 14,000. By 1936 it was a ghost town of 400 persons. Now little is known about the peninsula and its immediate area save for Thursday Island, 22 miles from Cooktown, where world cruise steamers used to stop for a few hours. If Australia beats off the Japanese, Cape York peninsula may some day flourish, for there sugar cane and tobacco do excellently and coffee grows wild.

The entire west coast is almost equally open to development and presents similar hardships. There is cattle country, gold mines, pearl fisheries, and land suitable for wheat growing. Paul McGuire in his book "Australia, Her Heritage, Her Future" estimates that this region can eventually support millions of people.

Asa's son-in-law, Peter Kingsmill, a young physician, is nervous. He attributes it to overwork and explains that he must leave that night for Baltimore on a special case.

She has been expected to marry Craig Fleming, a young lawyer, but in her willful way has decided to win Peter away from her sister, Roy. To her this is an adventure. He attempts to interest Fitzroy, but the latter owns tenements and attempts to switch Craig from his purpose with the bait of other lucrative legal jobs. It only serves to strengthen Craig's determination.

5 While Craig and Roy work together and gradually build up a great fondness for each other, Peter and Stanley are not finding life too happy. She visits Craig, ostensibly to ask advice about borrowing money on Peter's insurance, but actually to inveigle him into having dinner with her at a roadside tavern. When Craig doesn't show up she drives off furiously. In her recklessness she runs over a woman and child, and, terrified, refuses to stop.

11 The next morning policemen come to the Timberlake home. Stanley's blood-spattered car has been found in a vacant lot. Stanley defends herself. "I didn't have the car last night. Parry, our house boy, took it. He was going to wash it." Parry is arrested at once, but he denies he is guilty. His mother swears he was home all evening. And Roy believes them.

Surprise at Port Arthur

Adm. Alexeieff, the viceroy, in command of Russian Asiatic fleet.

Vice Adm. Togo, commander of Japanese fleet.

● The accompanying article is another of the series on the subject of famous military surprises. The Japanese surprise at Port Arthur on the eve of the Russo-Japanese war was in many respects like the surprise at Pearl Harbor. At Port Arthur, however, the Japanese struck at night, and with destroyers, for it was before the time of bombing planes.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

IN THE OUTER HARBOR of Port Arthur, at the southerly tip of the Manchurian peninsula of Liao-tung, the Russian squadron under Vice Adm. Starck lay at anchor. As darkness descended upon this remote naval base, 5,500 miles away from Moscow by rail, lights blazed ashore and at sea. Every one of the czar's vessels of war in the outer roadstead dazzled like a lighted Christmas tree.

No torpedo nets had been set to protect the anchored craft. No scout ships had been sent out to scour the waters thereabout.

Was there any excuse for this extraordinary laxity?

Only this: Russia was not at war.

Yet two days before Japan had presented to Russia what was in effect an ultimatum, and at the same time diplomatic relations between the two governments had been broken off.

Should the Russian squadron have been on the alert? Should Vice Adm. Starck, or Adm. Alexeieff, the viceroy, in full command of Russian warships in Asiatic waters, have ordered the squadron to be on guard against attack?

In consideration of what all the world knows now, the answer to these two questions is YES. Even then there was good reason for the Russian ships of war to be ready any moment to repulse an attack, for had not the Japanese fleet back in 1894 attacked a Chinese convoy off Phung-Tao a week before the formal declaration of the Chino-Japanese war?

As the vessels of the Russian squadron swung at anchor in Port Arthur's outer harbor the night dragged on. Still the lights blazed aboard the ships. From ashore came the sound of a soldiers' chorus. Apparently no one was on watch anywhere there.

Then at about an hour of midnight 10 swift Japanese destroyers swept in under cover of darkness, their guns blazing, their torpedo tubes loaded and ready for the kill. Seven Russian battleships, six cruisers, and numerous other vessels were caught completely off guard. Before their resistance could be organized the Japanese destroyers had vanished into the night.

But before these attackers had fled they had managed to fire 18 torpedoes. Three Russian vessels were struck and damaged, the 13,100 ton battleship Tsarevitch, the largest vessel of the squadron; the 12,700 ton battleship Retvisan, and the first class armored cruiser Pallada. It required two months to repair these damaged ships. It was only the poor torpedo marksmanship of the Japanese, apparently, that saved the whole squadron from destruction.

Here the Japanese possessed full advantage of the element of surprise, and, had they been as efficient then as they have proved to be today in numerous instances, they easily could have accomplished in a few minutes what it later took them months to do.

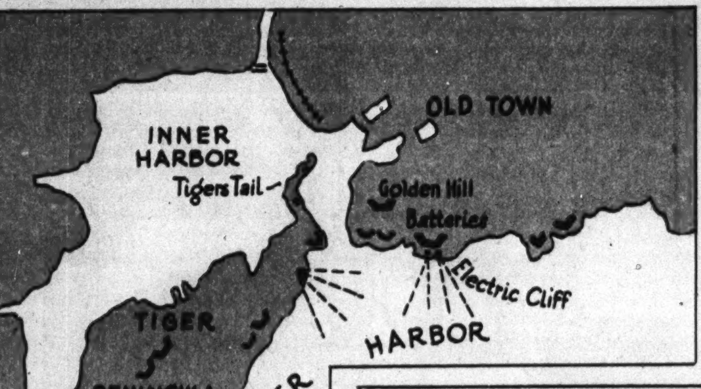
This surprise attack at Port Arthur was carried out on the night of Feb. 8, 1904, two days before the formal declaration of war.

• • •

Relations between Russia and Japan shortly before this attack were somewhat similar to those between the United States and Japan just before the treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor. Negotiations had been going from bad to worse. Japan resented Russia's presence in eastern Asia. It was eager to wipe out the Russian fleet in Asiatic waters. It wanted Port Arthur, which it had won in the Chino-Japanese war, but had been compelled by European powers to return to China. It desired Port Arthur as a symbol of Japanese superiority. Even then the Japanese were obsessed by the idea that they were an extraordinary people.

Russia had acquired Port Arthur from China by lease, and had proceeded to fortify it and establish a naval base there. This had alarmed Japan, which demanded that Russia take its troops out of Manchuria and recognize Japanese predominance in Corea. Russia played for time, planning all the while to strengthen its army and its fleet in eastern Asia.

The situation, which reached a crisis with the breaking off of diplomatic relations, found the Russians with a fleet in Asiatic waters somewhat inferior to that of the Japanese. The Russians there had 7 battleships, 11 cruisers, 25 destroyers, 17 torpedo boats, and 12 sloops and gunboats. Four of the cruisers were at Vladivostok and one was at Chemulpo, Corea. The rest were at Port Arthur. Against this force the Japanese had a fleet under Vice Adm. Togo, consisting of 7 battleships, 33 cruisers, 19 destroyers, 85 torpedo boats, and 16 sloops and gunboats.



Harbor of Port Arthur.

Russia, however, possessed additional naval strength, its fleet in the Baltic, thousands of miles away by a roundabout sea route. The Japanese had no vessels in reserve, nor yards in which to build them. A union of the Baltic fleet with the Asiatic fleet would give the Russians great superiority. Togo was determined that this union should not take place. His plan was to destroy or capture the Port Arthur squadron and the other Russian vessels in Asiatic waters before the Baltic fleet could make the long trip and arrive on the scene. Therefore, in the truly Japanese manner, he struck before war was declared.

On Feb. 6, the day that diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan were severed, Togo's fleet lay with steam up at Sasebo, on Tshushima strait. The next day it stood out to sea. Early on the morning of the 8th it was off Round Island, 60 miles east of Port Arthur.

On this fateful day—the 8th of February—a Japanese vessel put in at Port Arthur with the Japanese consul from Chefoo aboard. It anchored in the middle of the Russian squadron, took on board Japanese residents of Port Arthur, and sailed away before nightfall. This awakened the suspicions of Adm. Starck of the Russian squadron, who asked permission of the viceroy to take precautions, such as setting the torpedo nets and sending out scout ships. Alexeieff, however, refused this permission, declaring that precautions of this nature were premature.

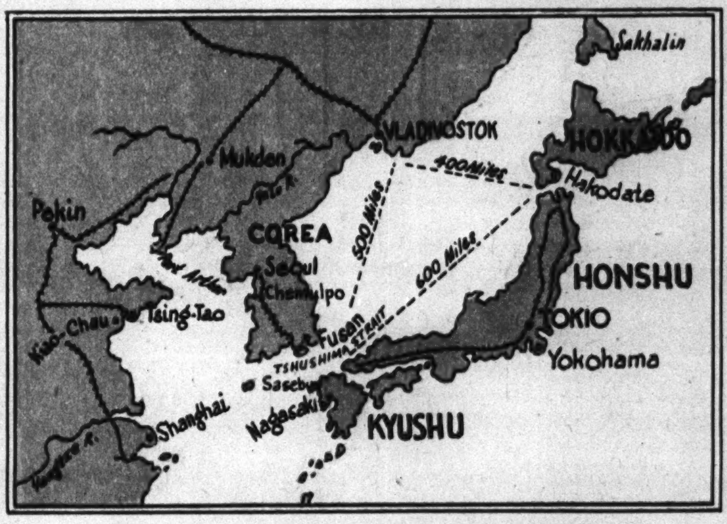
Wars rarely are won by genius. As a general rule they are lost by stupidity. Thus did Adm. Alexeieff, the viceroy, make the first blunder of the Russo-Japanese war, a conflict marked by numerous blunders on the part of the Russian leaders. That night the 10 Japanese destroyers, formed into three divisions, struck the Russian squadron as previously described in the outer anchorage at Port Arthur. These destroyers were from Togo's fleet.

• • •

The day after the surprise attack at Port Arthur the Russian squadron put to sea and fought an indecisive action with Togo's ships. On Feb. 12 it again was attacked by the Japanese, and thereafter it was unable to operate except on the defensive. Russia sent Adm. Makaroff, its outstanding naval leader, out to take command of the fleet in Asiatic waters, but on April 12 his flagship, the Petropavlovsk, struck a mine and went down with all its crew, including Makaroff.

In the meantime the Russian cruiser at Chemulpo had been destroyed.

A strong Japanese army on the Liao-tung peninsula slowly advanced southward toward Port Arthur. The city and base eventually was cut off and besieged. By Aug. 10 shells from the Japanese siege guns began falling on the squadron in Port Arthur's harbor. Adm. Witjeft, successor to Makaroff, took his ships out of the harbor that day. Togo's fleet appeared on the scene immediately. The Japanese vessels were superior in armament and speed. The battle which followed lasted five hours. Witjeft was killed aboard the battleship Tsarevitch. Instead of making toward Vladivostok, where it could have joined other Russian naval units, the squadron scattered. One of its cruisers was sunk, two others were interned, one at Shanghai and one at Saigon, and the battleship Tsarevitch was interned at Kiao-chau. The rest of the squadron, including five battleships, fled back into the harbor of Port Arthur, which proved to be its death trap.



Theater of operations in Russo-Japanese war.

The Russian cruisers at Vladivostok, when news reached them of the sortie from Port Arthur, sailed out and toward Tshushima strait. On Aug. 14 they encountered a superior Japanese cruiser squadron. They were badly riddled by enemy shells. Two got away.

Thus was the power of the Russian fleet in Asiatic waters shattered or dispersed. The vessels bottled up in Port Arthur harbor were of no value in offense and of little value in defense. When Port Arthur surrendered to the Japanese on Jan. 2, 1905, there fell to the conquerors, in addition to the works and arms ashore, 4 battleships, 2 cruisers, 14 gunboats and torpedo craft, 10 steamers, and nearly 50 other and smaller vessels.

• • •

The final acts of the war were swiftly approaching. In March the Russians lost the decisive battle of Mukden, the greatest of modern battles fought up to that time. In the meanwhile, tho, the Russian Baltic fleet, under the command of Adm. Rojdestvensky, was steaming nearer and nearer the scene. But it was coming too late. Its commander knew that he had little hope of victory, so he determined to meet the enemy as soon as possible and end the suspense.

On May 27, 1905, the Russian fleet, which might have altered the course of the war a year before, met Togo's fleet in Tshushima strait. Outmaneuvered and outshot, it had no chance against the Japanese. Of the 37 vessels of Rojdestvensky's fleet which entered the strait only nine escaped destruction or capture.

Russia and Japan signed a treaty of peace on the following Sept. 5 at Portsmouth, N. H. By the terms of this document Russia was decidedly the loser. Undoubtedly the surprise attack of the Japanese at Port Arthur, altho it caused little material damage, served in a measure to steal the initiative away from the Russians.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

A picture story of life on the Ohio State university campus appears in today's Picture Section.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Charles Batterman, junior from New York, and Yvonne Roberts, Springfield, O., sophomore, between classes at Ohio State.

OHIO STATE, at Columbus, is one of those huge universities, with an enrollment of about 12,000, where the student, and the observer, can find just about what he seeks. It has the largest agriculture and veterinary colleges in the country; it has serious students and silly ones, a noisy minority and a quiet majority, rich kids and poor kids, dressy ones and dowdy ones. You get conflicting answers to all your questions, because in such a big, big family there are conflicting views among the youngsters. Some feel it's tough, some feel it's a breeze. Some see fads, others have never noticed one. Some of them think the campus is beautiful—which it isn't—others think it's just what it ought to be, a huge, workmanlike plant for the use of a whale of a lot of people.

It abounds with ROTC cadets, 4,500 of them, uniformed in blue. If it has a beauty spot it would be Mirror lake, beside Pomerene hall, and the outdoor amphitheater beside it. Its buildings are of all types and ages, but its armory has a sturdy, medieval grandeur that is impressive.

• • •

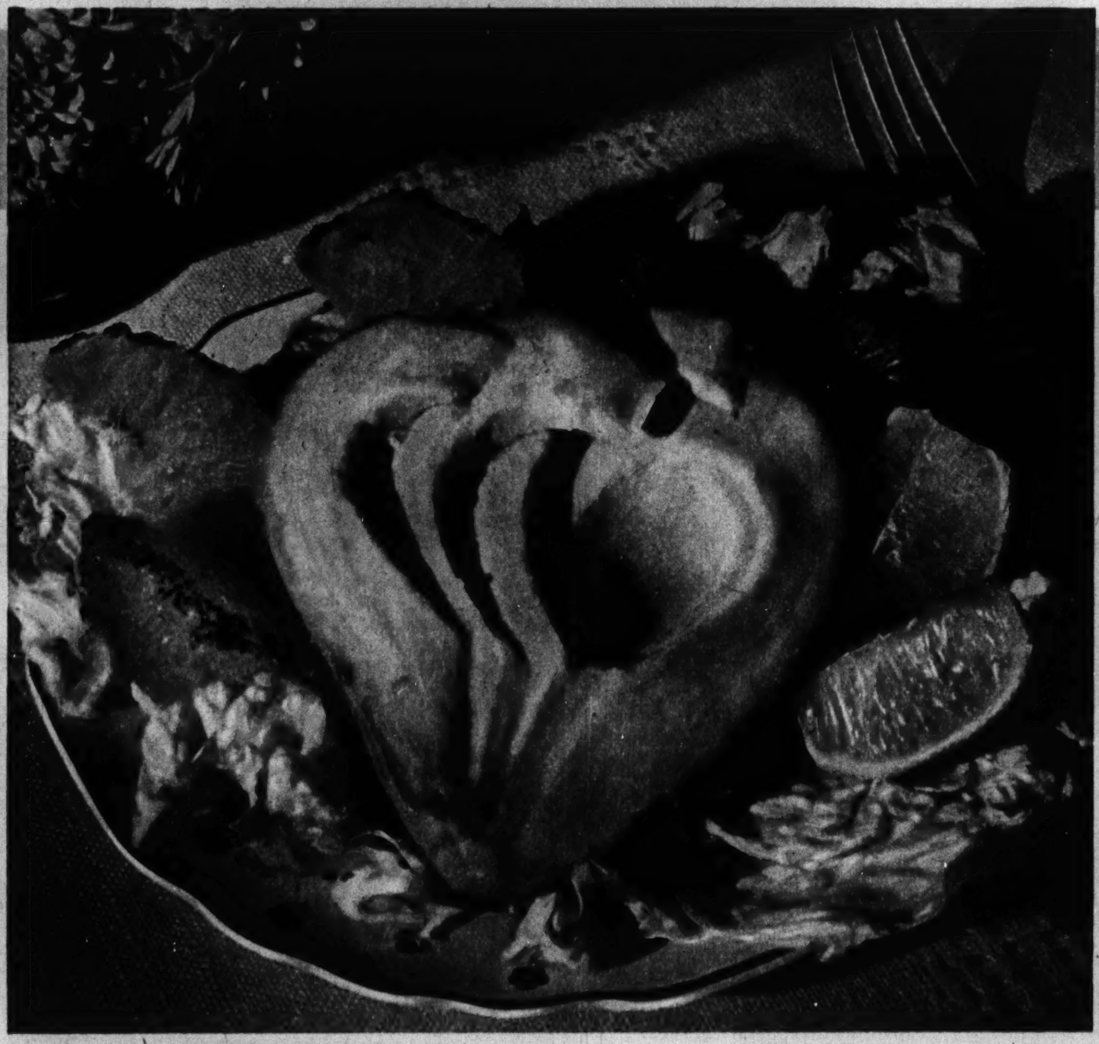
Ohio State took steps not so long ago to discourage "queens" and the crowning thereof. As at so many huge universities, every clique had its queen. Now, by agreement of all concerned, there are supposed to be only three a year, one for homecoming, one for the merry, merry month of May, and one for the senior prom.

Dress among the girls follows no particular pattern generally, but among the set that forms fashions there are fads that are rather fun. The most startling one current is that of enameling the horn rims of glasses with red finger nail polish! And bronze nail lacquer is having a slight whirl, too. Boys' jackets, straight and boxy and bulky, are considered pretty swish as adornment for the slim feminine figure. Heaven only knows why the college girl so often chooses the shapeless silhouette, but she does. Big, limp sweaters are her favorite wardrobe item, the bigger and the limper the better!

This spring at Ohio State the girls who like to be whimsical about clothes are fairly mad over the combination of bright lipstick red and pure sunshiny yellow. It's startling but smart, and the most usual version is red skirt with yellow blouse or sweater and yellow socks and a red hair bow. And there is a wave of purple over the fashion horizon, usually in sweaters, worn with chartreuse or soft gray skirts. This is one of the prettiest collegiate color mixtures that has ever been fostered.

SALADS, AND SUGAR SAVERS

Sirup from canned fruit can help cut down the sugar you use in desserts. This is a jellied peach whip.



Old-fashioned rocks may help you use that bacon fat.

Above: With grapefruit, lemon, or French dressing, an avocado half is the perfect salad fruit. You'll like it best salted.

At right: Apple sauce, pecans, and candied cherries make these buns truly delicious. The apple sauce is mixed right into the dough.

Canned Fruit Sirups Will Help Sweeten Desserts

By MARY MEADE

YOU'VE HEARD about how to cut down the sugar content of puddings and desserts by using the sirups from canned fruits as part of the sweetener. Peach whip, a jellied version, provides an example of how to do this.

JELLIED PEACH WHIP

(Serves six)

- 1 tablespoon or envelope of plain gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon mixed ground cloves and cinnamon
- ½ cup hot canned peach sirup
- 1 cup mashed canned peaches
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 egg whites, beaten until stiff

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add sugar, salt, spices, and hot sirup. Stir until dissolved. Add peaches and lemon juice and chill in refrigerator until mixture begins to thicken. Beat until frothy and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a mold rinsed in cold water and chill until firm.

Don't spoil this dessert by doing it up in whipped cream. It needs no garnish. A soft custard made from the yolks of the two eggs used in the pudding itself would be suitable if you feel you must sauce this dessert.

Something good in the salad line is the California avocado, now plentiful in the markets. Buy an avocado which will yield to gentle pressure between the palms.

In the photograph a peeled avocado half is cut to look a little prettier than usual. Three slices are cut from the round end forward but not thru the stem end. These slices are spread out in a fan arrangement. Grapefruit sections and lemon accompany the avocado, which should have been well salted. A French dressing may be served separately with this good plateful.

If you have bacon drippings on hand, use part of them in this recipe for old-fashioned rocks. The bacon fat should be solid and cold. Half bacon fat and half butter will make a grand cookie. You will need little if any salt when using two salted fats like these, and the half teaspoonful in the recipe may be omitted.

OLD-FASHIONED ROCKS

(About four dozen)

- 1 cup solid shortening
- 1½ cups sugar (or 1 cup sugar, ⅓ cup honey)
- 3 eggs
- 3½ cups sifted flour (slightly more if honey is used)
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon cloves
- ½ teaspoon salt (omit if salty fat is used)
- 1 cup chopped dates
- 1 cup broken walnut kernels

Cream shortening until plastic. Add sugar or sugar and honey gradually, beating until smooth and creamy. Beat in eggs vigorously one at a time. Sift dry ingredients together and stir into first mixture. Add dates and nuts. Drop by spoonfuls onto greased baking sheets and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes, or until browned.

The home economist for the Michigan state apple commission is responsible for the recipe for the yummy pecan and apple sauce rolls in today's fourth picture.

APPLE PECAN BUNS

- 2 cups milk, scalded and cooled to lukewarm
- 1 cake compressed yeast
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 3 teaspoons (1 tablespoon) salt
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1 cup apple sauce
- 8 cups flour

Add yeast, sugar, salt, fat, and apple sauce to the lukewarm milk, stir until yeast is dissolved, then add half the flour and beat until smooth. Add enough more flour to make a dough that can be handled. Knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl, brush with fat, cover, and set in a warm place to rise until light. When bulk has doubled roll dough ¼ inch thick, spread with melted butter, and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Roll jelly roll fashion, slice in inch pieces, and place slices in greased muffin pans. In the bottom of each muffin cup leave a candied cherry, a few pecan meats, and a tablespoonful of sirup made by melting 1 cup brown sugar and ⅓ cup butter together. Or use honey and butter for the sirup. Let rolls rise to double bulk, then bake at 375 degrees for 30-40 minutes. Turn out at once on cake rack.

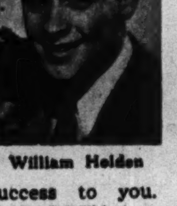
Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Would you please tell us where we could write to procure pictures of John Sutton and John Payne? Also would you be kind enough to give a short sketch of the life of John Payne? Thanking you sincerely; we hope your column continues for many years. MAUD DEMPSEY and MABEL PHILPOTT.

Dear Misses Dempsey and Philpott: Glad to oblige. For photographs of John Sutton and John Payne write to Twentieth Century-Fox studio, Beverly Hills, Cal. The usual cost for pictures is 25 cents. John Payne was born in Roanoke, Va. Educated Mercersburg academy, Roanoke college, and University of Virginia. He has green eyes and brown hair. Before entering motion pictures in 1936 he was featured soloist on many radio programs.

Dear Miss Tinée: I enjoy reading your column in The Chicago Tribune. I have seen all of William Holden's pictures and am wondering why he is not given more publicity. I would appreciate a biography and a small picture of him, as I have very few. Wishing more success to him and continued success to you. Thank you. ELIZABETH A.



William Holden

Dear Miss A.: To date Mr. Holden hasn't appeared in many pictures, therefore hasn't had much publicity. He was born in O'Fallon, Ill., April 17, 1918. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 165 pounds, and has brown hair and blue eyes. Educated South Pasadena High school and South Pasadena Junior college. Screen career started when he played the title rôle in "Golden Boy." Thanks to you from us both for your interest.

Dear Mae Tinée: I went to the movies to see my favorite actor, Robert Taylor, in "Johnny Eager" recently. I enjoyed the picture very much, and Taylor gave another swell performance. I remember when the reporters said he couldn't act. I wonder what those jealous loud-mouths think of him now? Bob has been my favorite since I was 11 years old, and I'm 18 now. I would appreciate it very much if you would print a picture of him in your column. Thank you. I'll be looking in The Tribune. Yours truly, FLORENTINO TASSONE.

Robert Taylor

Dear Miss Tassone: Such loyalty assuredly merits reward! Here's Bob's picture for you.

Dear Mae Tinée: I just had to write to you and tell you what a good sport I think you are to print that most insulting letter from J. R. McBride. I can't understand him. I for one, and I know there are plenty of others, look for and read your most interesting column. And I sure want you to keep the good work up.

I must admit I didn't like Greta Garbo in that one picture, but I am one of her fans, and that rôle was not for her at all.

Here's wishing you will write for the paper for years to come, and I'm glad you don't let such letters get under your skin. Sincerely, MRS. HARRY SCHMIDT.

Dear Mrs. Schmidt: Thanks for rallying 'round!

Dear Mae Tinée: I have recently seen some very good pictures, but do not remember the actors' names—those I liked best. They are obviously new players, and I would therefore appreciate their names, that I may compliment them on their ability.

Chief Crazy Horse in "They Died with Their Boots On" and Mr. Faulkner in "The Night of January 16."

Thank you so much. Yours truly, MISS CORINNE T. JOHNSON.

Dear Miss Johnson: Happy to be of service. Anthony Quinn played the rôle of Chief Crazy Horse in "They Died with Their Boots On," and Nils Asther played the part of Bjorn Faulkner in "The Night of January 16." You can write to Mr. Quinn in care of Warners-First National studio, Burbank, Cal., and to Mr. Asther in care of Paramount studio, 5451 Marathon street, Hollywood, Cal. HOORAY! I'VE SAID GOODBYE TO TOUGH PIE CRUST—THANKS TO CRISCO AND ITS NEW PASTRY METHOD!

NOW! Be SURE of FLAKY PIE CRUST!

New Crisco method ends 2 big causes of tough crust!

Wouldn't you love it if making a lovely flaky pie meant no more guesswork than making muffins? Everything measured out just so!

Thanks to Crisco, it's come true! . . . Crisco brings you a brand-new pastry method that ends all guesswork. Now you're sure of flaky, tender pie crust.

Be sure to use Crisco

First off, you have a new, different Crisco to work with. It's "Sure-Mix" Crisco—better than ever for flaky, tender pie crust. Thousands of women find pure, all-vegetable Crisco more dependable than any other shortening. And Crisco pastry is digestible, too!

But now, New Crisco gives you another boost to sure pastry success! Crisco and its new pastry method end the 2 big causes of toughness—using too much water and over-handling the dough.

New Crisco method makes you doubly sure!

Read the details of amazing new Crisco pastry method at the right. No guesswork in it! See how it ends 2 big causes of tough crust. Don't forget—this method was perfected specially for Crisco. We don't promise Crisco's sure-fire success with just any shortening! So be sure to use Crisco and only Crisco.

NEW! EASY! Crisco's Sure-Fire Pastry Method

DOUBLE-CRUST MEASUREMENTS

2 cups sifted flour • 1 teaspoon salt
*⅔ cup Crisco • ¼ cup water

Notice—this method tells you exact amount of water to use. Standard recipes don't . . . yet too much water is the first big cause of tough pastry. That's ended now!*

Sift flour and salt into bowl. Take out ⅓ cup of this flour and mix with the ¼ cup of water to form a paste. Add Crisco to remaining flour; cut Crisco in with knives, fork or blender until the pieces are the size of small peas.

Next, add flour-paste to Crisco-flour mixture. Mix thoroughly until the dough comes together and can be shaped into a ball. (Notice—the dough is never sticky—it's easy to handle, easy to roll out! So this method saves you from over-handling the dough—the second big cause of tough pastry.) Divide in half—roll out both crusts about ⅛ inch thick. (All measurements level.)

ONE-CRUST MEASUREMENTS: Use 1⅓ cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup Crisco. Take out ¼ cup flour and blend with 3 tablespoons water.

APPLE PIE WITH TOASTED CHEESE TOP—Use your favorite apple pie filling and double-crust proportions of Crisco pastry. Bake in hot oven (425° F.) 10 minutes, then lower to moderately hot (375° F.) 30 to 40 minutes. Before serving, lay narrow strips of cheese in a lattice design on top. Place under broiler or in oven until cheese just begins to melt.

Explosives Used in War: Demolition, Detonators

This is the third of a series of articles on explosives as used in modern war. Previous articles covered the general uses of explosives and the particular characteristics of the propellants used to fire shells from guns.

By CHARLES LEAVELLE

INTO THE bombsight floats an image of the target. The bombardier presses the release. A projectile slips thru the trap in the plane's floor and hurtles earthward.

There has been a slight miscalculation. The missile falls 50 yards from the target, bursting in the open. Even so, walls crumble and the target collapses. Shock waves that flash from the center of an explosion are almost as devastating as tho the bombardier had scored a direct hit.

High explosives that go into the bombs, shells, torpedoes, and mines of modern warfare have been so developed that the shattering forces they unleash are the most destructive science can devise. Their explosions, however, no matter how real and effective, are termed "artificial."

• • •

An explosion actually is merely the sudden increase in volume of a substance—liquid, solid, or gaseous. The expansion of water freezing in a pipe and its sudden release thru breaking the pipe is a natural explosion. Rapid combustion with atmospheric oxygen, as of grain dust or gasoline fumes, constitutes an explosion.

A military explosive, however, contains the necessary oxygen within itself. Rearrangement of the constituents of an unstable molecule immediately transforms the substance into fiery gases that occupy thousands of times the space of the original substance. The change is started by heat, friction, percussion, shock, or a combination of these. The suddenly expanding gases exert great pressure and shock upon the immediate surroundings.

As has been seen in previous articles, the explosion of substances used to propel shells and bullets must be so controled as to avoid bursting the gun barrel. Demolition explosives, however, are given free rein, because bursting and shattering is their mission.

Probably the most important of all military explosives is TNT (trinitrotoluol). Tho known as early as 1863, its military value was not realized until 1904. It is manufactured by allowing nitric acid to act upon toluol, which is obtained principally by distilling coal in gas works and from by-products of coke ovens.

(Tribune photo.)

What an accidental explosion of powder can do to an arms plant. (Remington Arms Co., Bridgeport, Conn.)

Contrasted with the "artificial" explosion of powder, this blast in a grain elevator is classed as "natural." (International photo.)

Because of the relative scarcity of toluol, TNT frequently is mixed with other explosives in loading shells and bombs. Also known as triton, trotyl, tolite, trinol, and tritolo, TNT resembles maple or brown sugar and is extremely bitter. If ignited in the open it will burn slowly.

If inclosed in a shell it will detonate violently at the rate of more than 5,200 yards a second, if loosely compressed, or 7,000 yards a second if packed to its maximum density.

Despite its great destructive power, TNT is among the most stable of explosives and can be manufactured, packed into shells, and shipped with comparative safety. It will not form compounds with metals such as are used in shells or bombs. It will combine, however, with alkalis to form highly sensitive salts that are easily detonated. Extreme care, therefore, is exercised to keep these away from it.

Because of the limited supply, TNT often is mixed with ammonium nitrate, which has approximately the same rate of detonation and strength, to form amatol. Like TNT, ammonium nitrate can be melted and poured into bombs and shells or be cast into various shapes.

It has its drawbacks, however. It will form sensitive salts with all metals except copper and tin, will absorb moisture, and can be detonated by rifle bullets. (This is important in selecting an explosive for use in aerial bombs, which may be struck by bullets during engagements with enemy planes.)

One of the most insensitive and destructive of all is explosive D (ammonium picrate), which is produced thru the action of picric acid upon ammonia. For this reason it is ideal for use in armor-piercing shells and bombs.

• • •

It is practically impervious to ordinary shock or friction. It also is more insensitive to detonation by mercury fulminate. For this reason the fulminate always is augmented by a booster charge, which when it explodes sets off the main charge.

The explosive chiefly used as a booster is tetryl, whose true name is trinitrophenylmethylnitramine. It is sensitive and will detonate from friction, shock, spark, or bullet impact. Tetryl may be crammed directly into the fuse with fulminate or pressed into pellets which may be loaded into the fuse or around the fulminate.

It is produced thru the action of nitric acid upon the coal distillate benzene (not to be confused with benzine, which is essentially gasoline), which then is reduced to aniline and combined with wood alcohol, sulphuric acid, iodine, and other ingredients. Tetryl is yellow, tasteless, and crystaline. When heated it melts, decomposes, and explodes.

The mercury fulminate with which tetryl is used detonates completely and with great violence on ignition by flame or heated wire or when subjected to shock. It is made from metallic mercury, nitric acid, and grain alcohol, all of which must be of the highest purity, else the manufacturing process may be extremely hazardous. Fulminate usually is stored in cloth bags submerged in water crocks in underground vaults. It is shipped in barrels, packed in wet sawdust.

This temperamental explosive will detonate much more easily at high altitudes than at low. It is loaded into detonators at pressures of about 3,000 pounds to the square inch. Needless to say, the loading presses are surrounded by heavy barricades and no one is allowed near them while loading is in process. If particles of sand or grit have gotten into the fulminate, employés of the loading plant shortly will be picking up pieces of the presses from the surrounding landscape.

Mercury fulminate is present in the caps of all small arms cartridges. Usually it is mixed with potassium chlorate or some other flame-producing agent, which is ignited when the firing pin detonates the fulminate.

• • •

Another explosive used with mercury fulminate as a booster charge is picric acid, whose destructive power exceeds even that of TNT. Sometimes it is used to displace part of the fulminate in a fuse. With the development of TNT, picric acid was discarded as an individual explosive by practically all countries except France. The British called it lyddite, and the Japanese, who still use it to an extent, call it schimose.

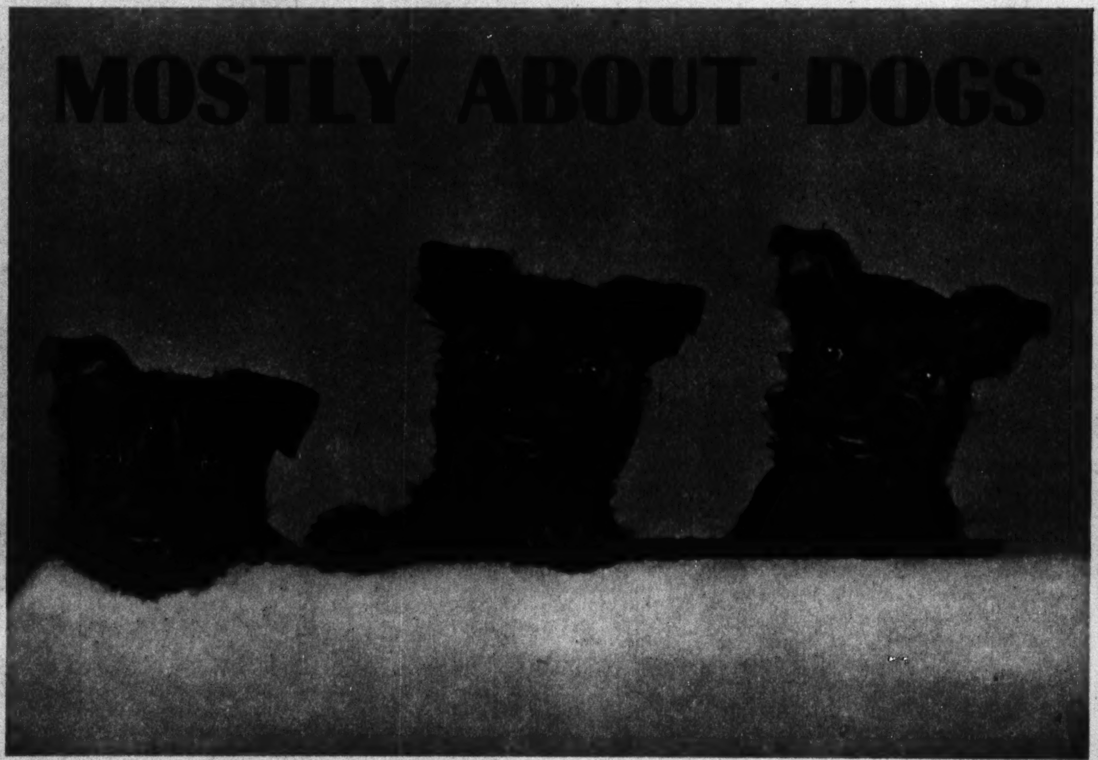
In America it is combined with ammonia to form explosive D, as explained, which is used in practically all shells fired by coast defense guns—whose purpose is to penetrate armor of hostile warships.

Among the methods in use for producing picric acid is the comparatively simple one of mixing phenol (carbolic acid) with sulphuric and nitric acids and water in a crystalizing bath.

These are the principal explosives now in use by America's armed forces, tho constant experimentation or research have brought about refinements and increased efficiency in many of them. Now that America is in the war, the most conclusive tests of all are being applied to its explosives, munitions, and methods—in the great laboratory of the front lines.

Next Sunday—Aerial bombs.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS



These Scottish terrier puppies, 3½ months old, are typical of the breed, which has been a favorite with Americans for many years.

By BOB BECKER

THE PUBLIC has shown in no uncertain manner that it likes the terrier breeds. The Scottish, Airedale, bull terrier, the smart little fox terrier, Manchester, Sealyham, and others are well known to dog fanciers. The Irish have given us the Kerry blue and the Irish terrier. From Scotland we have accepted the cairn terrier, West Highland white, and the terrier that reminds all of us of that country—the Scottish terrier.

The gallant little Scottish terrier has enjoyed high popular favor for 15 years. Only the wire-haired fox terrier has kept ahead of the Scotty, according to American Kennel club registration figures.

During the late 1920s a gasoline manufacturer brought the Scottish terrier to national attention by means of a striking advertisment which showed three Scotties posed in their customary state of alertness. That advertisment did much to bring the breed to the attention of the public. Later the makers of greeting cards and playing cards decided that the perky little Scotty had a pictorial appeal all its own, with the result that the breed received even more attention.

• • •

But a dog breed has to be able to withstand more stringent tests than the ability to look attractive in a picture. A breed can get an unlimited amount of space on billboards and in newspaper advertisments, but unless it has the character and personality to back up its free advertising it soon will fade out of the picture, because American dog owners know what they want in a pet dog.

There is no doubt that the Scottish terrier has many qualities to endear it to any family. It knows how to be alert and watchful without being unnecessarily noisy; it has the ability to run all day with children and then keep quiet when that is the desire of the family; it is a happy-go-lucky dog in the home, but it has plenty of courage. When the occasion arises the Scotty can be tough.

There is a good reason for the quality of alertness which is so typical of the Scotty. It was originally bred as a working terrier—a dog for going to earth against foxes and other types of vermin. And when given the chance to work the modern Scotty has shown its heritage, making an excellent ratter around farm buildings.

Stonehenge, one of the first of the modern dog writers, published an intriguing description of the Scottish terrier in his book published in 1887. Here's the way he described the Scotties of that time:

"As a dead game animal the Scottish terrier is not to be surpassed by any dog except bulls or bull terriers, but the courage of the latter dogs is so exceptional that it is no disrespect to any other dog to place them for pluck in a class by themselves, and pound for pound there is no dog but a bull terrier which can beat the hard-haired Scotchman by far. Still he has a natural advantage over the bull terrier, for his hard coat and thickly padded feet enable him to go thru whins and over rocky places where the other would be useless. His intelligence and love of home, his pluck, docility, and affection for his master, should make him a favorite with all who want a varmint dog; and nobody who once gets a good one, of the right style and stamp, will care to let him go."

Many generations of Scottish terriers have come and gone since Stonehenge wrote his critique of the breed, but the essential characteristics of the Scotty have changed little. The Scotty still is a game, sporty, active dog—one which can make itself at home in almost any situation.

Patient, capable of deep affection, fond of children, hardy—the Scottish terrier has another good point in his favor. He doesn't take up much room in the house. This is a distinct advantage to many families which are unable to give much space to a family pet. The Scotty stands about 10 inches high at the shoulder and weighs around 18 to 20 pounds. It's possible to get one in the following colors: Steel or iron gray, brindled or grizzled, black, sandy, or wheaten. White markings are objectionable.

If kept well groomed the Scotty is a very attractive little dog. This is especially true of those animals that have been trimmed so that they have rich furnishings below and a good set of "whiskers." The bright, piercing eyes of this terrier are one of its most attractive assets. They're real terrier eyes.

DOG NOTE

The American Kennel club has amended its rules to permit dog shows to award the title "best local dog in show." The major award in any all-breed event is "best in show," but at most competitive events in smaller cities this title goes to a top quality dog which is exhibited at shows all over the country. The new title will be awarded to the dog owned in close proximity to the city in which it is exhibited which goes highest in breed and group competition.

The poodle has steadily been gaining favor because of its proved ability to assimilate training. Dogs of this breed have been leaders in obedience tests held all over the country.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

Equipment Really Needed for Good Photography

PHOTOGRAPHIC equipment is getting scarcer every day, even tho the supplies of film, paper, and chemicals seem still adequate. But new cameras and accessories of most types are rapidly disappearing. This brings up the question of what one really needs in order to take good pictures.

It has been often said and proved that a good photographer can turn out excellent pictures with the cheapest camera and without the aid of the innumerable gadgets that have been produced for the benefit of less skilful and experienced amateurs. But there are certain results that even the most experienced professional photographer cannot obtain without the proper equipment, while, on the other hand, substitutes can be found or made for many a gadget.

Besides a camera, the prime necessity for taking good pictures is an exposure meter. It takes more experience than the average amateur will ever gather to make correctly exposed pictures without the aid of a meter. At the moment exposure meters of all types and brands are still available, but it appears certain that their production will be stopped within a short time. Therefore you should buy one now if you can afford it, and if you cannot, get yourself at least one of the exposure guides that sell for anywhere from 10 cents to a dollar. They will keep you from wasting film by trying to make impossible exposures, and if you follow their advice you will rarely go far wrong, even tho their use involves a lot of guessing.

A second essential gadget is a lens shade. It cuts out stray light, helps to prevent fogging, gets you clearer, crisper pictures. You can still get them made of metal or rubber. Also you can make one yourself of the same materials or of plain cardboard. But be careful when designing the shade so that it does not cut off part of your picture.

Filters, especially yellow and red ones, are absolutely essential if you want to get certain effects such as darkened skies with white clouds. Filters made of dyed optical glass are bound to become scarce. You can get them made of gelatin and mount them yourself between glass disks, or in a pinch you can experiment with colored cellophane, altho you are bound to waste some film before you have determined for yourself how to expose with such filters to get the desired results.

There is still a supply of flash synchronizers and flash bulbs, altho certain types of bulbs may disappear in the near future and the production of synchronizers is influenced by priorities for metals. Many construction plans for synchronizers have been published in photographic books and magazines. The same is true about practically any and all other types of photographic equipment. By doing a little research work you can find these plans, and if you are handy with tools you can build yourself many a useful gadget.

Auxiliary lenses for portrait or telephoto work are a great help to photographers. They, too, will become scarce, and there is little you can do about it. Some clever photographers have adapted cheap spectacle lenses to take the place of this equipment.

Tripods are not as popular as they should be, yet they are quite essential to taking certain types of pictures. Metal tripods and tripod heads will disappear soon, while the wooden variety may remain available indefinitely. It is relatively simple to build a wooden tripod, even tho the finished product may not look too attractive.

Camera cases are important to protect your valuable equipment. Purchase a special camera case or adapt a small suitcase or other container for this purpose.

There is bound to develop a shortage of darkroom equipment made of metal and rubber. At the present time you can still take your choice of most enlargers, contact printers, safelights, timers, developing trays, print washers, and the like, but in the not too distant future the supplies will diminish considerably. Secondhand and home-built equipment will be the answer.

The main point to remember is that no matter how limited the supplies of photographic equipment may become—today you can still get practically everything—good pictures will be taken as long as cameras, film, paper, and chemicals are available.

You can make clever table top pictures with the simplest of props. All you really need is a little imagination and patience. A combination of such qualities will give you good pictures even with simple equipment.

A Hand for Sarah Bernhardt

ANOTHER IN A NEW SERIES OF STORIES DRAMATIZING EVERYDAY PROBLEMS OF YOUNG AMERICA

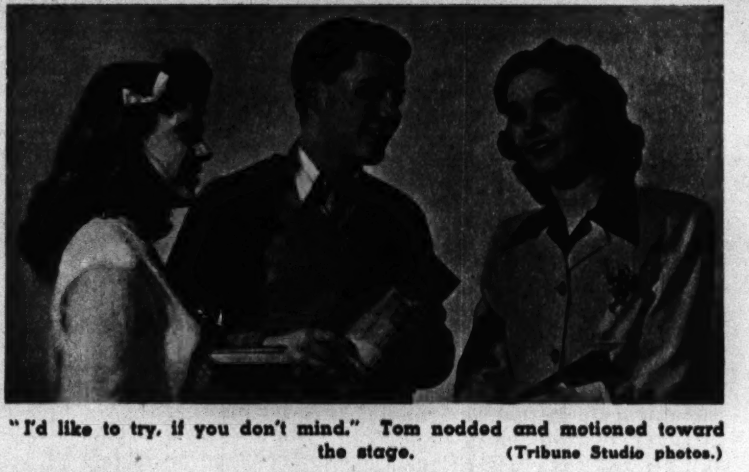
By MAUREEN DALY

"MAKE IT cokes all round," Ginie Owen said to the drugstore fountain boy as seven of the the smoothest girls from East Township High school crowded into a booth at the drugstore. "We can all just relax now and go at this thing intelligently," she added.

Lynn Taylor crowded in beside her. "It's a big responsibility, of course," she commented importantly, "but with Tom Woods directing and all of us working hard I'm sure we can put it over. I think it was very wise of the faculty to decide to let the students handle the whole thing." These seven girls had been appointed to organize a larger committee to select and produce the senior class play, and the drugstore had been picked as the most logical after-school meeting place.

One of the girls pulled out a pencil and a notebook. "The first thing we must remember is that every one on this committee must be interested and must really have talent in some line. I don't think there should be more than 12 of us."

"There are seven of us right here, so all we've got to do is to pick out five more," Lynn declared dogmatically. She was the prettiest girl in the class and always had the smoothest long sweaters and put her lipstick on with a brush, and the girls always listened when she talked. And, besides, she dated more than any other girl in the drugstore crowd, so her words carried weight.



"I'd like to try, if you don't mind." Tom nodded and motioned toward the stage. (Tribune Studio photos.)

The fountain boy brought the drinks, balancing the tray artistically on one hand, his eyes on the girls, and Lynn gave him an appreciative smile.

Ginie sipped quite thoughtfully. "We've got to remember," she said, "that we need not only actors and actresses but people for crew work, costumes, and scenery, and also some one who can help us pick out a really good play."

"But the acting is the most important thing," one of the other girls put in. "The leading fellow and girl can make or break a play."

"What we need is some one with umph and real talent—some one who can put the part across," Lynn remarked, thinking of herself.

"We haven't even got a part to put across, because we haven't got a play picked out," some one laughed.

"I took elocution for four years when I was in grade school," Lynn went on.

• • •

Ginie pushed her glass aside and wrinkled her forehead in thought. "I was talking to Tom this afternoon, and he said that of course most of the actual work, and the acting, too, will fall on us seven and others we select for the committee, but tryouts will be open to any one.

Jennie was talking her lines as if the words were her own, and her hands moved naturally and easily.

I know my own limitations, so I'd like to volunteer to work on scenery right now."

One of the other girls joined her, but Lynn and the other five had vague, shimmery hopes of seeing themselves in glory on the night of the play—dazzling footlights, the smell of grease paint, all the fellows and girls of the school awed by the dramatic triumph.

"I'd like to try out for a part—and I wonder if Dick De Bruin will try out for the male lead," some one said dreamily.

Four other names were suggested for the committee and agreed upon; four long-haired, bright-lipped girls who dated almost as much as Lynn and belonged to the school's smooth crowd. And then Ginie ventured a suggestion. "You all know Jennie Anselm, don't you?" They nodded. "Well, if we are looking for real talent, she is in my English class, and we have been reading contemporary poetry, and the teacher had her read some of Edna St. Vincent Millay aloud, and she did it wonderfully—her voice is so low and so throbbing. She did it just like Katharine Hepburn. I suggest we have her on the committee."

Ginie took down Tom's comments.

There was a small, cold silence. Jennie Anselm was a tall, quiet senior with dark eyes who almost never spoke to any one. She lived far on the other side of town and brought her lunch to school each day, eating it by herself at noontime. All the girls liked her but never bothered to talk to her much.

Lynn sat running her fingers thru her soft, yellow fluff of hair, and her voice was elaborately polite when she spoke. "She might be good, Ginie, but you must consider this: We will have to have meetings at night, and it will be so far for her to come—way from the other side of town—if we meet at each other's houses," and her words were oozing with condescension.

"And besides," some one added in the same tone of derogatory concern, "we might pick a modern play and have to wear our own clothes—what would she do if she got a part?" And the suggestion dwindled away under their courteous snobbery.

• • •

Eight o'clock on Thursday night had been set for tryouts for the play, and Tom Woods, important as director, stood at the front of the stage with a pencil stuck behind his ear, brushing over his short crew cut with a worried look as he shouted out instructions. The male lead had already been selected, but there were still 12 girls waiting to try out for the part of the girl from Missouri who had come to New York to struggle her way onto Broadway. They had decided to put on a modern play.

Tom walked off the stage and sat in the front row of the auditorium, his forehead wrinkled in almost professional anxiety. Ginie Owen sat beside him, holding a script and taking down his comments about each of the competitors. One by one they walked to the center of the stage, stiff with drama, their voices tense and stagy or else rattling off the lines in a staccato monotony. Tom sighed as he listened to them, and Ginie scrawled pictures of round, fat pigs—the nearest things to "hams" she could think of—on the margin of her papers.

Lynn's turn came near the end, and she walked onto the stage almost swaggering with confidence. She had on a new blue and yellow plaid skirt and a yellow sweater, with a long double string of pearls that hung almost to her waist. The footlights shone up till her hair looked like angel hair. The lines were simple and direct, and she went thru them with her usual umph and vigor, as if she were reciting a torch song, and she looked expectantly down at Tom when she had finished.

"If we were looking for Lana Turner she'd get it," he muttered to Ginie, "but that's not what we need. Any one else want to try?" he called.

• • •

Jennie Anselm had been sitting off by herself all evening—Ginie had said hello to her when she came in—and she stood up now, saying quietly, "I'd like to try, if you don't mind."

Tom nodded and motioned toward the stage. "What's that girl's name?" he asked Ginie. "Don't think I ever saw her before."

Jennie walked to the center of the stage with a slow, easy grace, her hands relaxed at her sides. Her hair was combed out, dark and fluffy, making her face seem very small and white, almost mysterious. Backstage Lynn was giggling and joking with Dick De Bruin, and the noise drowned out Jennie's first words. But suddenly the whole auditorium was silent. There was a quiet, moving sincerity about her voice that silenced the others into listening. The stage was in bright isolation in the dark, hushed quiet of the auditorium. Jennie was talking her lines as if the words were her own, and her hands moved naturally and easily. She was living the part. Suddenly it wasn't a high school stage at all, but a New York booking agent's office, with a tall, dark girl asking for a job while her heart throbbed till it seemed to beat in her temples and her hands were limp and tired with discouragement. When Jennie finished speaking no one said a word. Tom whistled softly under his breath. "Ginie, there's a Sarah Bernhardt," he said.

As she walked offstage, her cheeks suddenly glowing and her eyes bright, the other girls crowded around her, their voices warm with congratulations. The part was unanimously declared hers. Jennie's voice was low and vibrant among their high chatter.

Lynn stood off by herself for a moment watching the others, and then with sudden resolution she walked over toward them. "And Jennie," she said, her tone friendly, "any night you have to practice late I would be glad to have you stay at my house if it's too far for you to go home. Mother would like it, too," she added.

Tom gathered his script together and stuck his pencil behind his ear. "Some one switch off those footlights," he shouted, and then he turned to Ginie with a wink. "What did I tell you?" he said. "It takes a Sarah Bernhardt!"

Vitamins, Vitamins, who's got the Vitamins?

1. Does this vitamin business seem clouded in mystery? Are you puzzled by its magic alphabet, wondering how you can provide all these wonderful little substances for your family? You don't need to be! For vitamins are merely elements in food. They are constituents of scores of good things to eat that every grocer carries. But you must know which foods contain them.

2. Ask your grocer to show you PEP's Vitamin Grocery Chart. It gives the vitamin content of nearly all common foods. And, speaking of KELLOGG'S PEP—this great cereal is extra-rich in the two vitamins least abundant in ordinary diets—B_1 and D. Each serving contains 4/5 to 1/5 the minimum daily need of B_1, depending on age, and 1/2 the daily need of vitamin D.

3. Don't be surprised if you find this famous cereal is hard to keep in the house. Children and grown-ups alike demand it by the double bowlful! For PEP means crunchy flakes of wheat, flavored to the Queen's taste and toasted to a golden crispness. Ask for PEP today. It is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

DESIGNED FOR COMFORTABLE LIVING. The owner of this home bought it after reading a description of it in a Tribune Real Estate want ad. This home is typical of the many values you will find offered in Tribune Real Estate want ad columns. You have greatest assurance of finding what you want when you depend on Tribune want ads because the Tribune prints more real estate want advertising than any two other Chicago newspapers combined. If you are planning to buy a home, start reading the Real Estate columns in the Tribune now.

HIT ON ALL SIX

Tomorrow

TAKE PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA

Tonight

YOU can't be "all out" for success when you wake up feeling "all in." So never let your stomach go sour during the night due to over-indulgence. Give that excessive acidity the one-two action of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

First, Phillips' Milk of Magnesia settles the upset stomach—quickly relieves the discomfort. Next it finishes the job by acting as a gentle laxative—promoting a mild yet thorough elimination. An ideal laxative-antacid. Try it at bedtime, the next time you eat a rich dinner or stay up late at a party, and wake up "hitting on all six." Read the directions on the Milk of Magnesia package and take only as directed thereon or as prescribed by your physician.

ONE-TWO ACTION!

1 AN EFFECTIVE ALKALIZER. Gives speedy relief when your stomach feels "uneasy" or gassy due to too much acid. Rated among the most effective neutralizers of excess stomach acids known. Acts almost immediately.

2 A MILD LAXATIVE. Not a purge — merely promotes more thorough elimination. Does not leave you feeling "all wrung out." Take it at any time of the day—because it does not act with embarrassing urgency. Many physicians recommend it for young children. There is no better mild laxative.

"Why do you say theyre Best for Juice and Every use!"

HE: "The sun, the soil, and science put 'extras' in California oranges!"

SHE: "What 'extras'?"

HE: "First, the juice is richer. You can see its deeper color. You can taste its more-delicious flavor. And science proves it has more vitamin C, more vitamin A, more calcium, more health in every glass."

SHE: "And what's the reason?"

HE: "California oranges ripen on the tree in all-year sunshine. They have the benefit of fertile soils, scientifically fed and watered."

SHE: "But you said 'best for every use'!"

HE: "Right! California Navels are seedless — and easy to peel, slice and section. So they're perfect for salads and desserts . . . an ideal way to put vitamins and freshness in daily lunch boxes."

SHE: "How can I tell I'm getting them?"

HE: "Easily. Just look for the 'Sunkist' trademark on the skin. Then you'll know you have the finest seedless Navel oranges from 14,500 cooperating growers in California and Arizona."

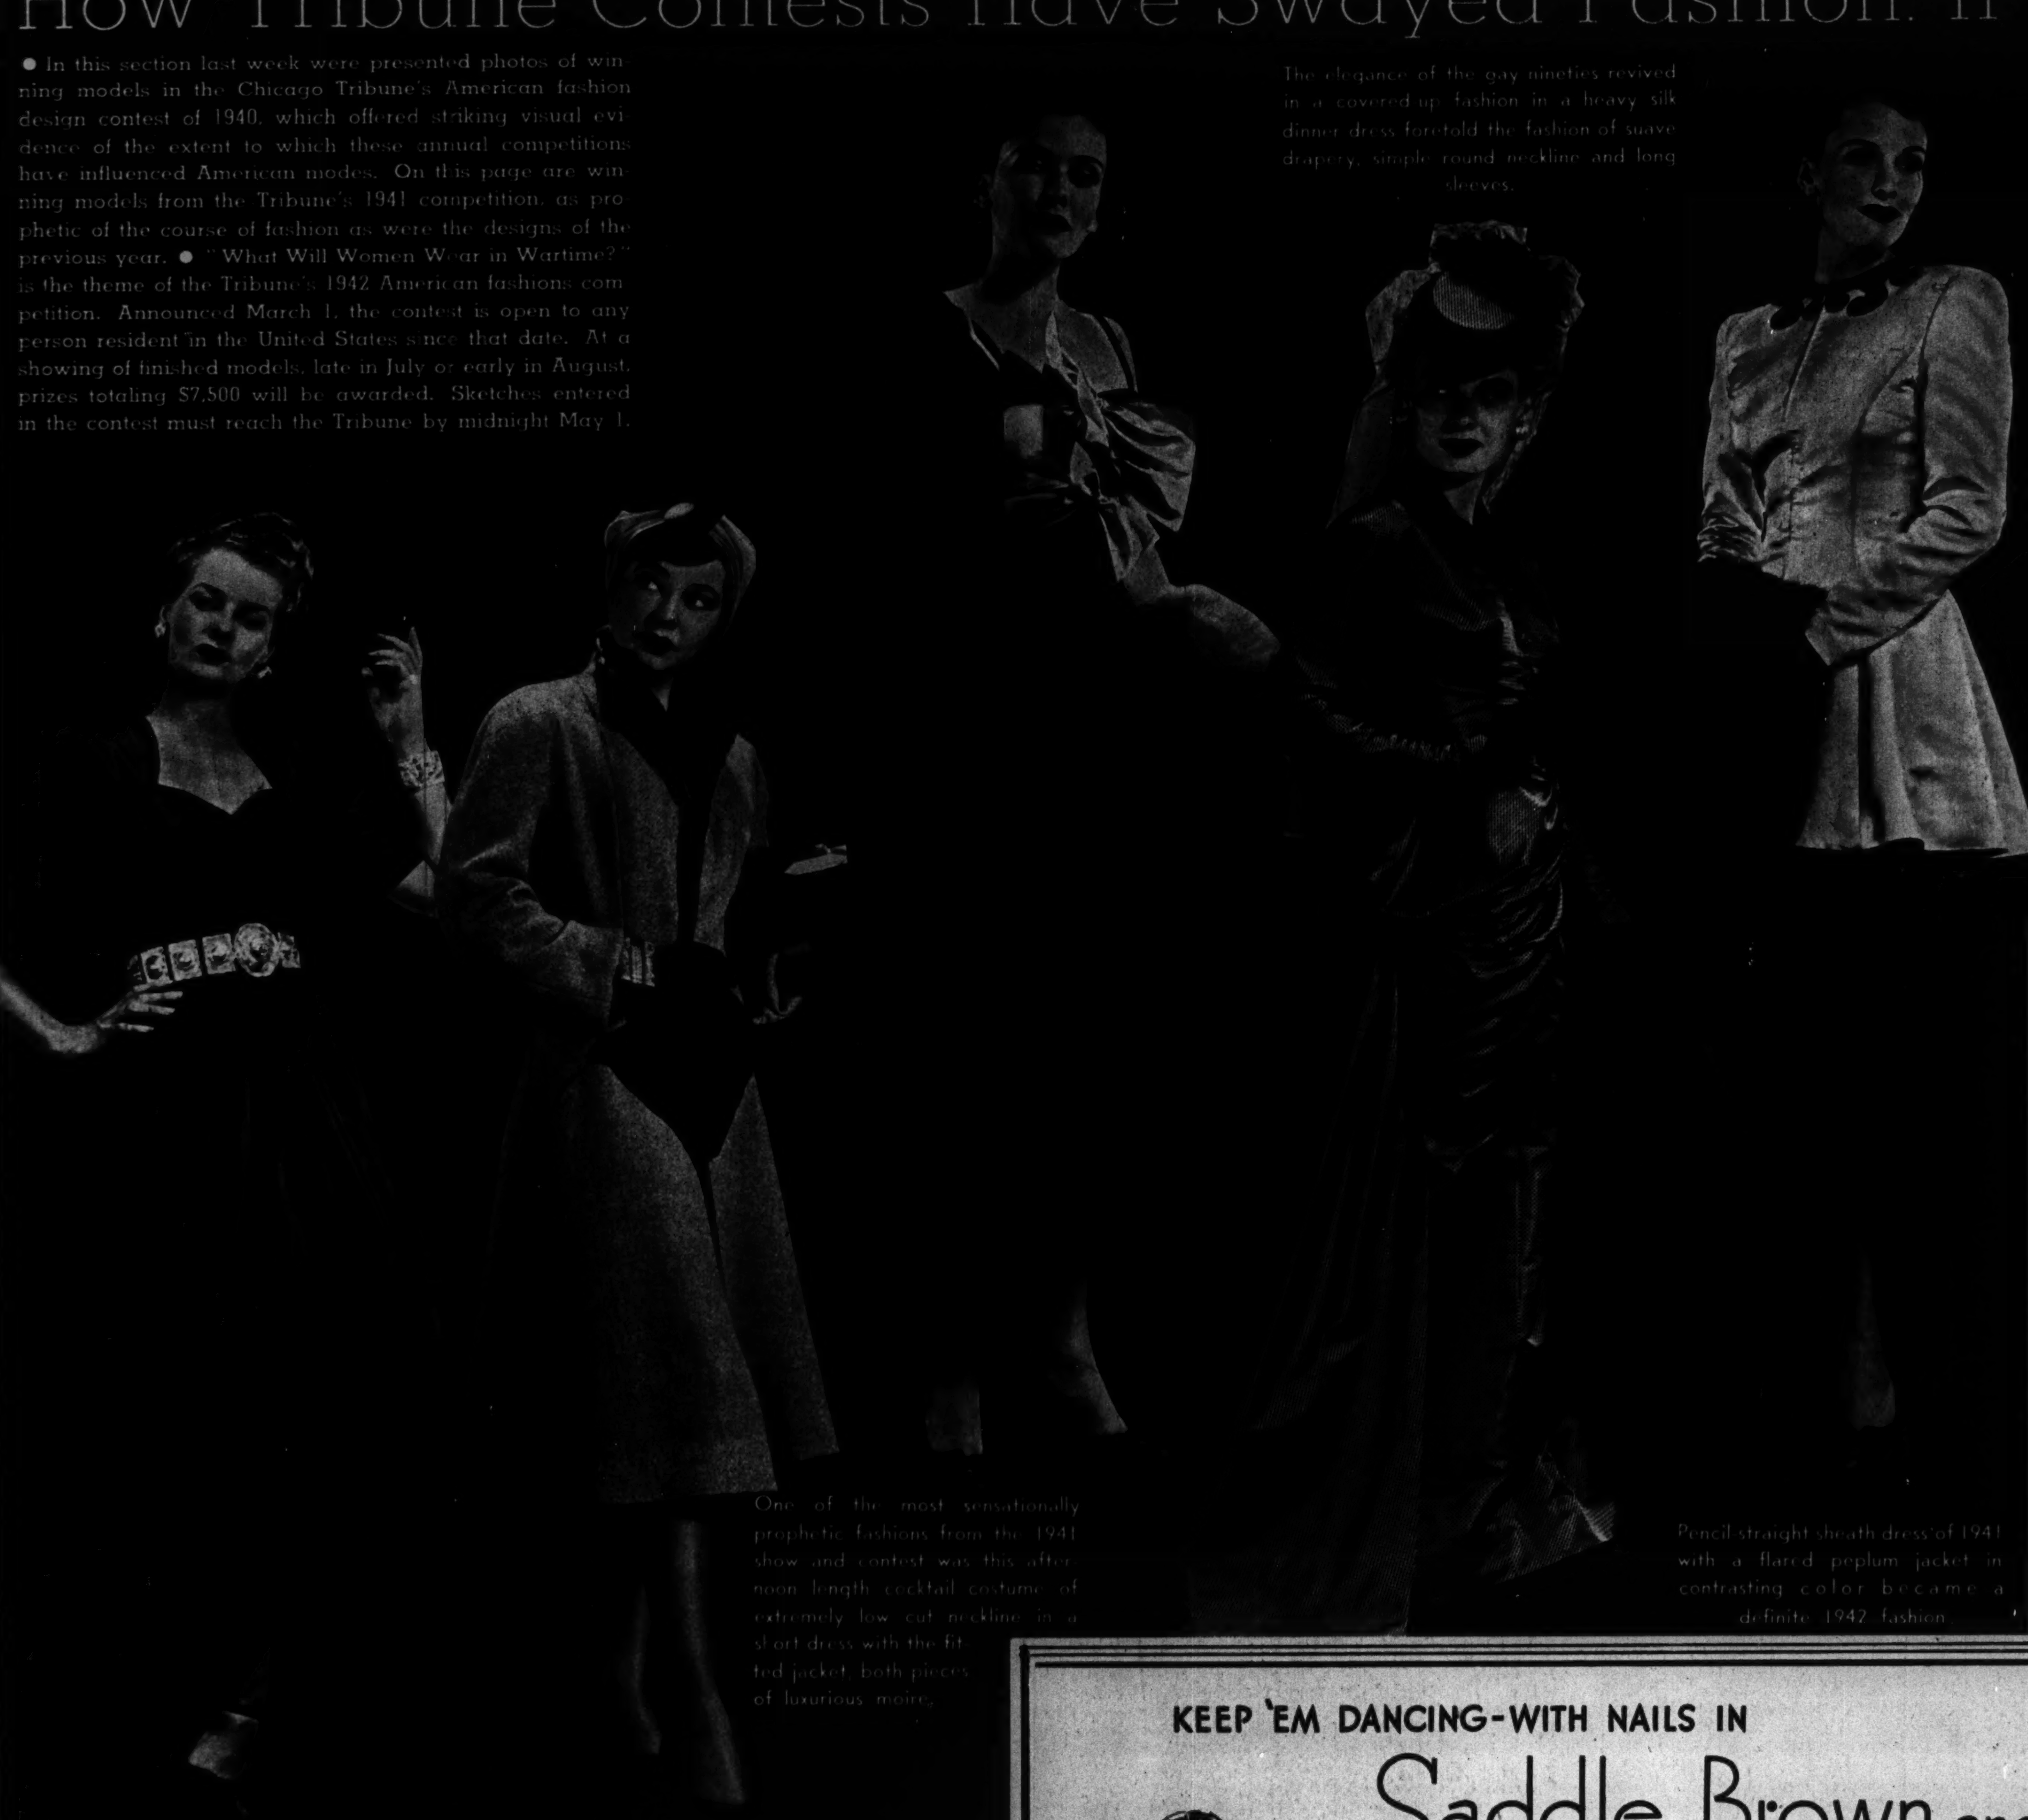
How Tribune Contests Have Swayed Fashion: II

● In this section last week were presented photos of winning models in the Chicago Tribune's American fashion design contest of 1940, which offered striking visual evidence of the extent to which these annual competitions have influenced American modes. On this page are winning models from the Tribune's 1941 competition, as prophetic of the course of fashion as were the designs of the previous year. ● "What Will Women Wear in Wartime?" is the theme of the Tribune's 1942 American fashions competition. Announced March 1, the contest is open to any person resident in the United States since that date. At a showing of finished models, late in July or early in August, prizes totaling $7,500 will be awarded. Sketches entered in the contest must reach the Tribune by midnight May 1.



The elegance of the gay nineties revived in a covered up fashion in a heavy silk dinner dress foretold the fashion of suave drapery, simple round neckline and long sleeves.

A velveteen coat dress with gigantic matching beret foretold the high fashion of a coat dress costume complete in one color.

One of the most sensationally prophetic fashions from the 1941 show and contest was this afternoon length cocktail costume of extremely low cut neckline in a short dress with the fitted jacket, both pieces of luxurious moire.

Pencil-straight sheath dress of 1941 with a flared peplum jacket in contrasting color became a definite 1942 fashion.

A Chinese metal belt inspired this costume of dull crepe slit skirt and the dramatic contrasting top of tangerine colored taffeta featuring the flared, circular cut peplum. It is a creation of 1941 still smart in 1942.

Curved shoulder lines, wide, straight sleeves, and the flaring short skirt took the fashion spotlight for distinctively new daytime coats in light colors contrasted with sharp black sealskin. With this was worn a matching hat.

Suit dress of high colored wool, simply but most effectively cut in 1941 to flatter the figure lines, became the most popular of fashions for 1942.

Detailed, simply designed daytime dress in soft taupe wool started the fashion for diagonal seaming and the wide, easy armholes of long, tapering sleeves.

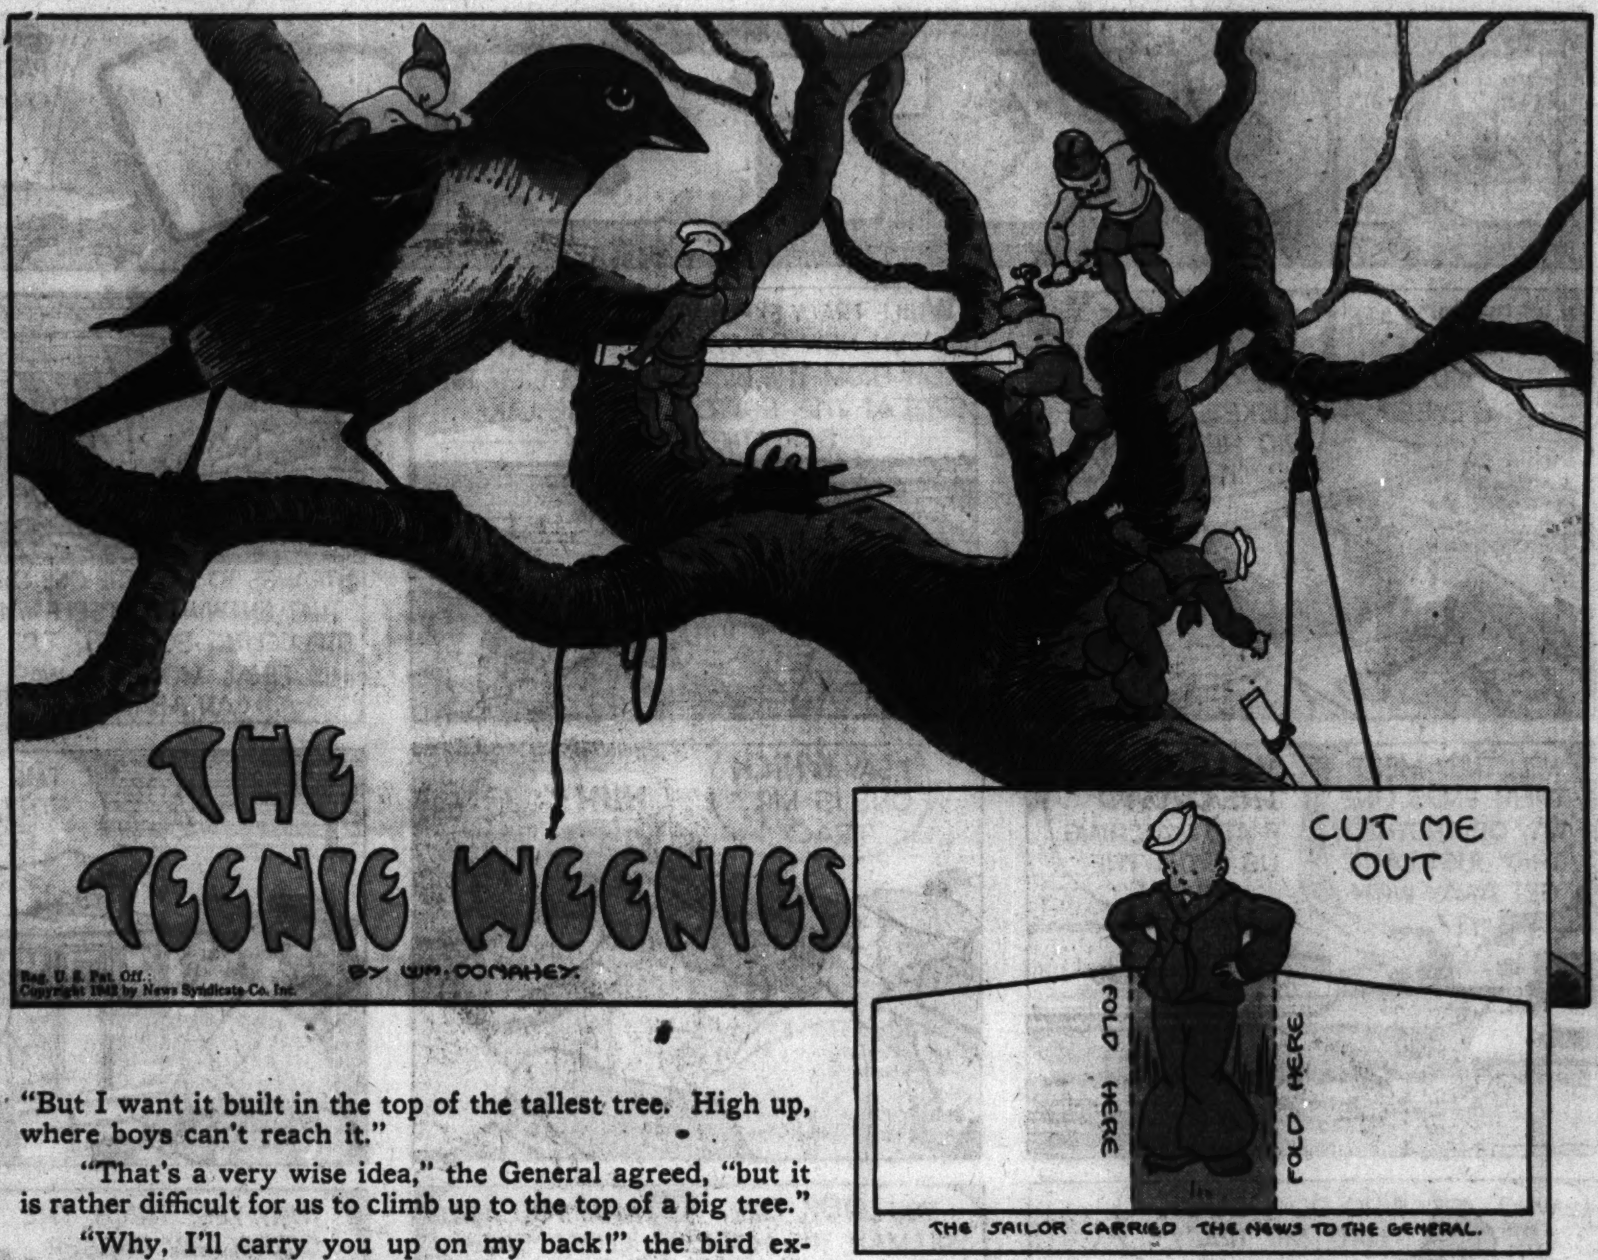
A ROBBERY!



THE TEENIE WEENIES

CUT ME OUT
FOLD HERE
FOLD HERE

THE SAILOR CARRIED THE NEWS TO THE GENERAL.

NEWS TRAVELS mighty fast to the Teenie Weenie village. The little people have many friends, far and near, who quickly carry important news to them. This is why the Teenie Weenies knew about the robbery within an hour after it had taken place. A sparrow told the red-headed woodpecker, and the woodpecker told one of the four respectable mice. The respectable mouse told Kippy the chipmunk, and Kippy told Nick the squirrel. Nick informed the Teenie Weenie Sailor, who immediately carried the news to the General.

"Two boys have stolen a bird's nest!" the Sailor reported. "They pulled it right out of a bush and carried it away. Nick said the poor sparrow just finished building the nest, and that she is on the verge of a nervous breakdown."

We'll go right over and see if we can be of any help," said the General. He set off at once, followed by several of the little people.

They found the bird, a young sparrow, flitting nervously about on the low branches of a thorn bush. It was very plain to see that she was in great distress.

"You seem to be in trouble," the General shouted up to the bird.

The sparrow stopped hopping about and looked at the Teenie Weenies.

"I've been robbed!" she told them excitedly. "Two boys pulled my nest right out of this bush and carried it away. I-I-I had just finished building it. It was my first nest and I had spent days working on it. It was lined with horse hairs and they are hard to find these days."

The bird's voice trembled, and the Teenie Weenies expected her to break into tears.

"Why don't you build another one?" suggested the Dunce, for the loss of something better to say.

"It's plain to see that you know nothing about a bird's nest," said the sparrow, staring hard at the Dunce. "It takes days and days to build one. It takes hundreds of trips all around the country to find horse hairs, string, bits of paper and other things which go into the building of a nest. Then you must twine horse hairs and pieces of string around the limbs of the tree to hold the nest fast. If the wind is blowing, it makes the work even harder. It was such a lovely nest and now it's gone."

"We could help you build another nest," ventured the General. "We could build a framework among the branches which would make it easier to fasten the nest, and we could help you find material to rebuild the nest."

"That would be wonderful!" exclaimed the sparrow. "But I want it built in the top of the tallest tree. High up, where boys can't reach it."

"That's a very wise idea," the General agreed, "but it is rather difficult for us to climb up to the top of a big tree."

"Why, I'll carry you up on my back!" the bird exclaimed. "Let's begin today."

After examining several trees the sparrow selected a limb at the top of a tall apple tree. The Teenie Weenies brought over their tools and necessary pieces of wood for the work. The bird carried the little workmen up to the top of the tree, where they fixed a Teenie Weenie pulley to a stout limb and pulled up the needed lumber.

The Dunce made many excuses to ride up and down on the bird's back, but the General soon put a stop to that by sending the little chap off in search of string and horse hair.

When the Teenie Weenies had finished the frame for the nest, the bird set to work building her home. Several of the little men helped her tie the strings while other Teenie Weenies, on the ground below, collected material for finishing the nest. Nick the squirrel helped considerably by carrying some of the material up the tree in his strong teeth.

The Lady of Fashion raveled the top of an old woolen sock and the yarn made a soft lining for the new nest.

The bird was most grateful to the Teenie Weenies for their help and very happy that her nest was now out of the reach of robbers.

DON'T TRY TO WIND THIS STUFF UP IN THE DARK, PHYLLIS. I CAN'T SEE WHAT I'M DOING.
I'M NOT TRYING TO WIND. YOU'RE THE ONE WHO IS PULLING. WHAT ON EARTH ARE YOU DOING?
I'M NOT DOING A THING. BUT I WARN YOU, IT'S GOING TO BE A BAD TANGLE IF YOU DON'T STOP JERKING.
I'M SITTING PERFECTLY STILL. IT IS YOU WHO ARE JERKING. YOU'LL RUIN EVERYTHING!
GOSH, MY ARMS ARE GETTING TIRED. AND YOU MUST BE PRETTY JITTERY IF YOU CAN YANK LIKE THAT AND NOT KNOW IT.
THERE! YOU NEARLY PULLED THE YARN OUT OF MY HANDS.
CALM DOWN, PHYLLIS. THERE'S NO USE BEING AFRAID IN THE DARK.
THERE, YOU'VE DONE IT—JERKED THE BALL RIGHT AWAY FROM ME.
ALL CLEAR!
WHAT THE—?
WALT, I TOLD YOU TO HOLD STILL.
ME HOLD STILL! I'D HAVE TO BE A MAGICIAN TO DO A JOB LIKE THIS.
IT GOES INTO THE OTHER ROOM, TOO!
WALT, I JUST CAN'T UNDERSTAND HOW IT COULD HAVE HAPPENED.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES by MILTON CANIFF
NORMANDIE, WE'VE BEEN LUCKY... THIS FUNNY NIP-NIP TOOK US IN WHEN WE HARDLY HAD A CHANCE OF SURVIVAL... BUT HE BOTHERS ME A BIT...
...HE PRACTICALLY ADOPTED US AFTER WE SLIPPED AWAY FROM THE ENEMY... BUT HE IS NO ORDINARY COOLIE...
I'VE NOTICED IT TOO, PAT!... HE SAYS HE CAME BACK TO HIS NATIVE VILLAGE TO HECKLE THE JAPS... BUT HE IS FAR FROM BEING A SIMPLE FARM BOY!
...HELLO, MR. NIP-NIP ...WHY DO YOU HAVE THAT BIG KNIFE?
OH, IT IS YOU, LITTLE ONE...
OF COURSE IT'S ME... MERRILY! WHY DO YOU LOOK SO FUNNY, MR. NIP-NIP?
THE SMALL ONE SURPRISED ME... I WAS—BUSY! I THOUGHT YOU WERE SOME OTHER PERSON....
OH, MY MUZZ AND MR. RYAN ARE THE ONLY OTHER PEOPLE HERE... AND THEY WOULDN'T ROMP AROUND THE RIVER... 'CAUSE YOU ASKED THEM NOT TO...
IS THAT SO, LITTLE MERRILY...: DID YOUR MOTHER AND MR. RYAN SAY ANYTHING ELSE ABOUT NIP-NIP?
MR. RYAN SAID HE THINKS YOU AREN'T JUST A FARMER... BUT HE SAYS YOU WERE NICE TO US —AND WE SHOULDN'T TRY TO BOTHER YOU IN WHATEVER YOU'RE DOING!... WHAT ARE YOU DOING MR. NIP-NIP?
...WHAT AM I DOING, GIRL-CHILD? ... THAT IS A LONG STORY... BUT WHAT YOU SAY ABOUT MR. RYAN CAUSES ME TO MAKE A DECISION! COME ALONG, LITTLE ONE!
SAY, MR. NIP-NIP —YOU DON'T TALK FUNNY LIKE BEFORE! ...YOU SAY THINGS RIGHT— JUST LIKE MY MUZZ AND DADDY AND MR. RYAN...
...THE LITTLE MERRILY IS MOST OBSERVANT... YES, NIP-NIP KNOWS YOUR LANGUAGE...AND HE MUST SPEAK SOME OF IT TO YOUR MR. RYAN... TIME GROWS UNCOMFORTABLY SHORT...
AS MERRILY AND NIP-NIP GO TO TALK TO PAT... ANOTHER SCENE IS TAKING PLACE MILES AWAY...
DID FORTUNE SMILE UPON OUR EFFORTS THIS TIME, MY COMMANDER?
FORTUNE LAUGHED ALOUD AT OUR LACK OF EXPLOSIVES! IS THERE WORD OF THE LONG ABSENT NIP-NIP?
4-19
MY COMMANDER WILL RECALL THAT THE MISSION OF NIP-NIP WAS ONE OF GREAT DANGER! HE MAY HAVE FAILED!...
NIP-NIP IS SMART... HE MUST HAVE BEEN DELAYED BY SOME INCIDENT OF IMPORTANCE ...HE KNOWS WHAT THE DRAGON LADY DOES TO DAWDLERS!

THIS WILL PREVENT THE FIRE FROM RISING TO HIS HEAD AND FACE . . . . . .

LEADERS TO DRAFT LILAC DAY PLANS

CITY'S BIGGEST LANDLORD IS A BUSY WOMAN

Head of 32 Million Housing Project.

BY ANTON REMENIH.

Miss Elizabeth Wood. [Allied News Photo.]

"You ask me, young man, what it takes to be a successful landlord. It takes a love of bricks, mortar, and dirt, because they are capable of creating magic. Above all else, you must appreciate dirt. Dirt is important."

This doesn't sound like a typical formula for success and it isn't because Chicago's biggest landlord—head of a 32 million dollar housing plant involving more than 4,000 homes—isn't typical.

This landlord isn't typical first, because she is a woman, Miss Elizabeth Wood; secondly, because she "prepared" in part for her job by studying biology, teaching poetry in an exclusive girls' school, and selling books, house to house, and lastly, because 45 male engineers, designers, and department heads call her "boss" and like it!

Supervises Four Projects.

Officially, Miss Wood, who resides at 3145 Cambridge avenue, is executive secretary of the Chicago Housing authority. She supervises the operation of four low cost housing projects, the Julia C. Lathrop, Trumbull Park, Jane Addams, and Ida B. Wells homes, and soon will head five more defense housing projects totaling 1,800 homes and costing almost $11,000,000 now under construction.

In addition to managing existing properties, a man sized job in itself demanding a knowledge of big business finance, architecture, sociology, and administrative ability, Miss Wood supervises the selection and acquisition of new sites and guides architectural studies for new projects.

Contemporaries in the field call her "The Jane Addams of public housing."

Talks Man's Language.

Daily Miss Wood talks to a stream of men flowing thru her office at 208 South La Salle street. It takes only a few minutes for most of them to forget she's a woman. She has been so successful dealing with men, staff workers say, because she has a sense of humor, she's unceremonious, and, most important, she knows her business. She's one woman men listen to.

Miss Wood, who is in her late 30s, explaines away her present position modestly. "I was in the way when housing jobs came along. I didn't plan it that way. Yet, strangely enough, each job I held taught me something vital to this work. Had I planned my career I couldn't have done better."

Studied Biology First.

Planning a career in science, Miss Wood studied biology for three years under her father, a professor at Illinois Wesleyan college in Bloomington. "What could be more remote from building homes? Yet, the training I received examining a bone under the microscope helps me now to visualize the three dimensional house when I look at a blue print. And there, too, I learned about flowers—and flowers are as important as furniture in a home."

Miss Wood traces her strong feeling about landscaping as applied to housing projects back to these days. "It isn't good to take people away from grass, flowers, and earth," she declares. "Dirt is important."

What Miss Wood did after graduating illustrates a key characteristic—versatility. She became a teacher at Vassar college, a teacher of poetry!

Earned Master's Degree.

She discovered quickly that no one wanted an ex-Vassar teacher. She got a master's degree at the University of Michigan and then went to pains to conceal the fact. She had decided to enter the business world and felt that employers would shy if aware of her past. She became a house to house canvasser of books, a job she held 10 months.

Next she became a secretary for a free lance writer for trade journals. "I told him I was a high school graduate. Who would be willing to pay a Vassar teacher $12 a week?" This job taught her much about the technical details of a house.

Next she became a secretary director for the home modernizing bureau of the Building Industries of Chicago. Here she learned how to read a blue print and picked up a building materials vocabulary.

Became Case Worker.

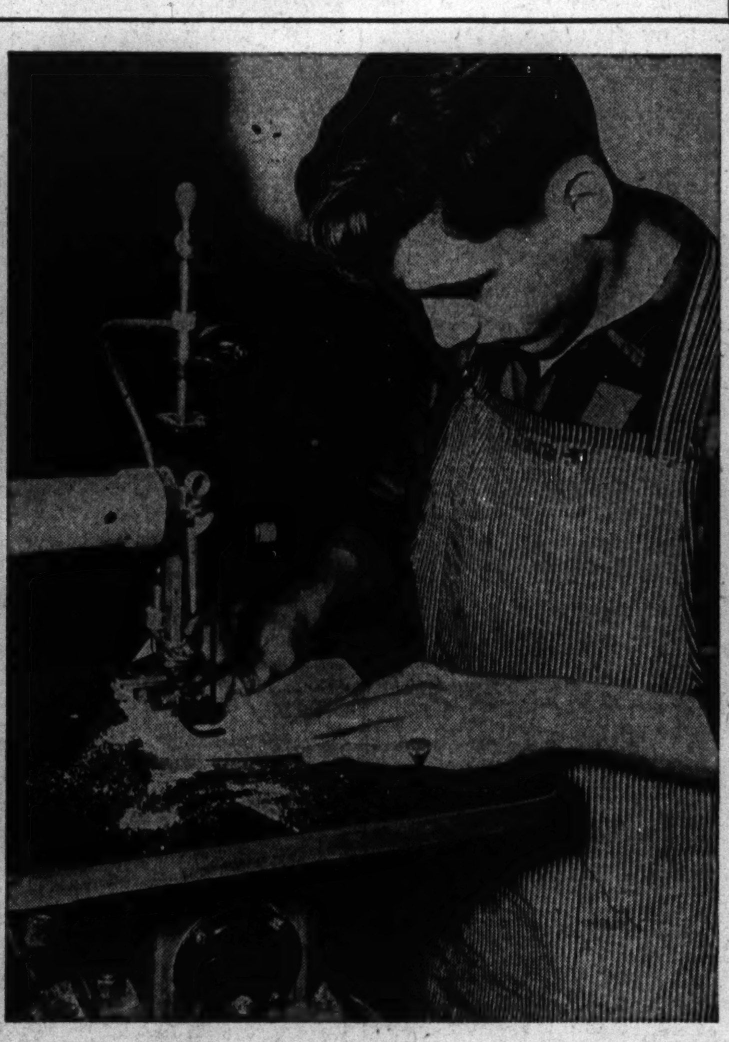
Then came the depression and a job as case worker for the United Charities of Chicago. During the two and one-half years she held this job she learned "more about living conditions in Chicago than was comfortable for one person to know."

Then followed jobs with the Metropolitan Housing council and the State Housing board. She learned about financing on the latter job. In 1938, a housing commission under Mayor Kelly selected her to head the new Housing authority. No one was concerned that Chicago's biggest landlord would be a woman. And certainly no one is today.

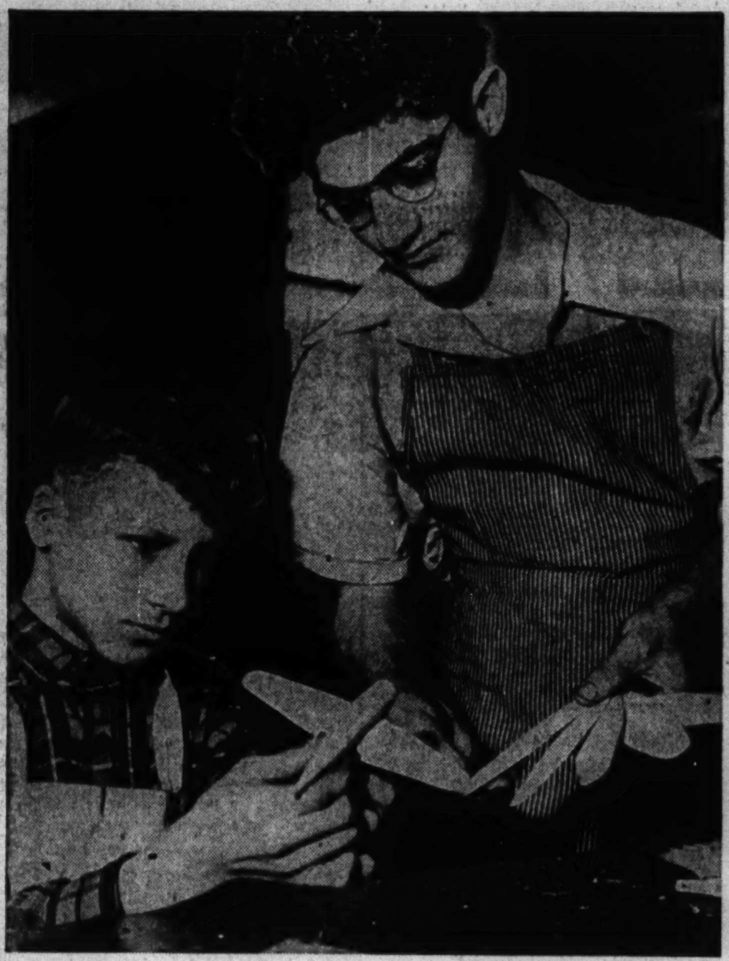
Waller High Puts Model Planes in Mass Production

Almost 175 boys at Waller High school, 2007 Orchard street, are turning out 200 model airplanes to be used by fledgling navy pilots who must learn to recognize more than 50 types of fighter craft now in use by all nations. All important is the silhouette of a model since it simulates the appearance of a plane at an altitude. No propellers are added and no landing gear, since most are retractable. Jacques Sohn of 710 Rush street, 14, is shown examining the silhouette of a twin engined bomber. Models are built to the scale of one inch to six feet.

[Board of Education Photos.]



William Livingston of 2325 Cleveland avenue, 15 years old and a freshman, using the electric jig-saw to cut wings. A model must be perfect.



Bob Wesley of 628 Schubert avenue, seated, and Danny Azoo of 652 Dickens avenue are attaching wings, one step in the model aircraft assembly line at Waller. When a student masters every step in the line he may make an entire model and is eligible for one of seven classes of certificates awarded by the navy.

The assembly line technique is used at Waller. Boys don't make complete models until they have perfected every detail. These boys are making bomber fuselages. From left to right they are Eric Braunig, 725 Webster avenue, 14; Norman Keepers, 2144 North Clark street, 16, and Peter Gaut, 1719 Orchard street, 16. All are freshmen.

Girl of Brazil Sets Us Right on Languages

Margarida Vasconcellos is a slender, dark eyed Northwestern university co-ed who appears remote, indeed, from such weighty expressions as "international relations" or the "good neighbor policy" as she practices her voice lessons in the N. U. music school.

Yet, the slight little brunette is probably more aware of the meanings and implications of international relations and the good neighbor policy than even her teachers. Miss Vasconcellos, as an exchange student from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, is an integral part of building up neighborliness.

Sent Here on Scholarship.

She came to Evanston in November. She is here on a scholarship from the Institute of International Education based on the good neighbor policy and sponsored by the Pan-American union. Carrying out the good will design, Miss Vasconcellos was fortunate enough to be one of the students chosen by a steamship line for free passage here. But getting home again in June may be a different story, she thinks.

"I guess I will have to fly," she says. "The steamship line has always made a practice of choosing two students from Brazil, from Argentina, and from Chile and giving them free passage up here. I don't know how we'll all get home unless we do fly."

Dislikes Winter Weather.

Miss Vasconcellos likes everything about Chicagoland except the winter weather. She says she is chillier here than she was on her Christmas vaca-

81 CLUBS WILL HELP TO CHEER CITY'S SHUT-INS

Luncheon Meeting Is Wednesday.

When guild chairmen and presidents of 81 garden clubs thruout Chicagoland meet Wednesday noon to complete their plans for the 14th annual "Share the Lilacs" campaign, their efforts might well be compared to modern wartime production methods.

For it is their responsibility to see that fragrant lilacs by the thousands of bouquets find their way from farms, estates, and homes, large or small, in the suburbs, to the patients and shut-ins of Chicago's hospitals, homes, and orphanages. It is their task to insure that bouquets, cut fresh on Lilac days, arrive at suburban stations for swift transportation to the city. How well they have organized this work is seen in the record—more than 100,000 bouquets distributed last year among 25,000 individuals.

See Bumper Crop.

The women will represent garden clubs affiliated with the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, which coöperates each year with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in bringing a touch of spring to the city's shut-ins.

Their meeting will be held at noon at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. and working plans will be drafted to help speed the delivery of the fragrant blooms from the suburbs to the hospitals and institutions in the city. This year, with the lilac bushes promising another bumper crop, guild officials are hoping to exceed last year's record.

Gathered by Volunteers.

The flowers are gathered by volunteer workers from backyard gardens, parks, estates, and solitary bushes wherever they are found. The guild chairmen supervise the work of getting the blooms to the railroad stations, where they are delivered freight free to the city terminals. Here the lilacs are picked up by Tribune trucks and sped to the various hospitals.

Response to the lilac campaign last year was so great that 158 institutions were given bouquets of the fragrant flowers. The days on which lilacs will be distributed this year have not yet been determined. When guild officials feel that the blooms in all the suburbs have reached their peak, the distribution days will be announced.

Club presidents and chairmen of garden clubs in this area coöperating in the preparations for lilac distribution this year are the following:

LIGHT BALLOTING BRINGS WINS TO PARTY REGULARS

Church Only Nominee to Beat Organization.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

The lightest primary balloting in several years was the chief factor in bringing congress nominations to nearly all the regular organization in the 10 congressional districts of Cook and Lake counties. Not since 1930 have so few persons voted in a congressional election, according to a comparison of the nearly complete 1942 results compared with those of other years.

The one exception to the rule of regular organization victories was the G. O. P. primary in the 10th district, which includes part of Cook and all of Lake county [districts 1 to 9 are in Cook county]. Here former Congressman Ralph E. Church, in an intense personal campaign, overcame the strong organization backing given Congressman George A. Paddock to win by nearly 7,000 votes.

Regulars Win the Others.

In every other case where there were contests the regularly supported candidates won by overwhelming margins. Indorsements were given in every case but the Republican primary in the 8th district.

Here is the tabulation of the nearly complete unofficial primary returns in the county, the asterisks [*] indicating incumbents. The table shows the total number of precincts in each district and the number missing from the returns for each party.

Two Sons, Like Father, in Navy

WALDO W. HEALY.

BILL HEALY.

DAN HEALY.

Father with Dewey

Bill and Dan Healy have donned blue uniforms to follow in the footsteps of their father, Waldo W. Healy, who served with Admiral Dewey two wars ago. Bill, 22 years old, welder in civilian life, recently was assigned to a destroyer operating out of the Boston Navy yard, where his father was sworn out 43 years ago. He is a ship fitter, having had six months training in the Ford factory service school at Dearborn, Mich.

Dan, 29 years old, changed from one blue uniform to another last month. He had been a park district policeman for four years. Now he is a 3d class petty officer stationed in the master-at-arms office on Navy Pier.

The picture of the senior Healy was taken on June 1, 1899, in Hong Kong. Only 16 years old, he was a seaman on Admiral Dewey's flagship, "Olympia," in the Philippines during the Spanish-American war. After the war the fleet sailed around the world. Before his enlistment, Mr. Healy had been left end on the Notre Dame varsity football team. The family resides at 1221 Farwell avenue.

[Editor's Note—Just to make it a family affair, Paul Healy, metropolitan reporter, was assigned to write this story of his father and two brothers.]

YOUTH TO HAVE THE SPOTLIGHT FOR ONE WEEK

Physical Fitness to Be Program Keynote.

North side celebrations of Youth week, which open tomorrow and continues thru April 27, will stress a physical fitness program as a patriotic obligation rather than a luxury. This sentiment was expressed by Emil C. Rothe, boys' physical education director of Lake View High school, in announcing a program Wednesday at the school.

August H. Pritzlaff, director of physical education, board of education, and Dr. C. O. Carlstrom, president of the American College of Physical Education, will speak at Lake View. The students will present a program of folk dancing, conditioning exercises, physical skills on apparatus, games, a first aid demonstration, and a sports review.

Open House at Boone.

Boone school, 6710 North Washtenaw avenue, will observe Youth week April 30 and May 1. Herman Ritow, Boone principal, plans an open house for parents April 30 and an assembly May 1. Other north side schools planning special programs are Swift, Clinton, Jamieson, Stockton, and Peirce.

North side parks and playgrounds will coöperate by conducting athletic contests Saturday. The following are planning competitions: Playgrounds—Hayt, Swift, Peirce, Waters, Budlong, LeMoyne, Audubon, Hawthorne, McPherson, Burley, Agassiz, and Washington; parks—Paul Revere, Winnemac, and Brands.

Sponsors Are Listed.

Nathaniel Leverone, 534 Surf street, is chairman of the Youth Week federation executive committee. Dr. F. O. Frederickson, 1214 Elmdale avenue, is chairman of health and athletic days. North siders on the advisory board are Dr. Charles S. Bacon, Mrs. William J. Bogan, Judge J. M. Braude of the Women's court, Judge John Gutknecht of the Traffic court, Miss Agnes Nestor, Dr. Philip L. Seman, Dr. A. B. Berkenstadt, Leverett S. Lyon, and Mrs. Anne V. Zinser.

One $50 defense bond and four $25 bonds will be distributed as prizes. Twenty-five service men will be guests of the organization.

North Woods Lecture.

Sam Campbell will speak at the Summerdale Community church, 1700 Farragut avenue, at 8 o'clock Saturday evening. His subject will be "Rediscovering Our Great North Woods." He will illustrate his lecture with natural color motion pictures.

EVANSTON G. O. P. POST WINNER IS STILL IN DOUBT

Ashcraft Leads Slater by 129 Votes.

Eight missing precincts among the 65 in Evanston hold the answer as to whether State Rep. Alan E. Ashcraft Jr. or former State Rep. Drennan J. Slater was elected Republican township committeeman to succeed Congressman George A. Paddock.

With 57 of the 65 precincts reported, Ashcraft was leading by a vote of 4,288 to 4,159, a difference of only 129 votes. The vote in the eight missing precincts probably will not be known until the official canvass is made, perhaps some time this week.

Linked with Congress Fight.

The committeeman fight was linked to some extent with the bitter scrap in which former Congressman Ralph E. Church defeated Congressman Paddock for the congressional G. O. P. nomination in the 10th district. Slater and Church had always been harmonious, and Ashcraft and Paddock worked together to help elect Henry D. Penfield mayor of Evanston in 1937. S. G. Ingraham, who defeated Penfield for mayor last year, was in the Church-Ashcraft camp in the recent primary.

In New Trier township Henry A. Gardner, incumbent G. O. P. committeeman, was leading Police Magistrate Allen M. Klein, 4,281 to 1,974, with only two of the 42 precincts unreported.

Niles Picks Blameuser.

George Blameuser, village president of Skokie, was elected Republican committeeman of Niles township to succeed Ferd Baumann. He got 1,895 votes to 955 for Attorney James M. Ballowe of Skokie, according to the unofficial results.

Edwin L. Griese of Northbrook, Republican committeeman of Northfield township, was reëlected by a vote of 564 to 180 over Martin A. Garrity of Glenview.

In the Evanston contest for Democratic township committeeman, Ald. Bennie G. Rubin, who also is a deputy sheriff, was elected to the post he had held temporarily for several months. With 63 of the 65 precincts heard from, Rubin had 2,124 votes to 889 for his only rival, Joseph W. Schoos Jr., a dairyman.

Harold W. White, Democratic committeeman of Northfield township, was reëlected. He polled 360 votes to 134 for George T. Frake, according to returns from seven of the nine precincts. Both men live in Glenview.

RABBI BINSTOCK WILL SPEAK AT GLENCOE TEMPLE

Dr. Louis Binstock, rabbi of Temple Sholom, will be guest speaker at the annual spring luncheon and election of officers of the North Shore Congregation Israel sisterhod tomorrow at the Glencoe temple.

CLUB ACTIVITIES TO BE REVIEWED AT ROGERS PARK

Women to Hear Annual Reports Tuesday.

Annual reports, routine affairs in the closing of a club season, will make up the business of the Rogers Park Woman's club session at 10 o'clock Tuesday in the clubhouse at 7077 North Ashland avenue. After all of the department heads have been heard, Mrs. William Broan, social chairman, will serve the closing luncheon at 12:45 o'clock. After this interval, business will be resumed at 2 o'clock when the president, Mrs. Ford Hicks, reads her report and the results of the annual election.

The day will not be entirely devoted to business, however. Mrs. Harrry W. Raymond, program chairman, has arranged for the Toujour Bon ensemble to appear in a concert as the closing event of 1941-'42.

The official ending of the club year does not signify a summer period of inactivity. Red Cross workers will continue to work at the clubhouse on Thursdays. Clubwomen will continue salvage work also. The salvage chairman, Mrs. C. H. Thomas, has asked for volunteers to staff the salvage office at 6509 Sheridan road.

North Town Woman's Club.

Mrs. Don R. Brown, art and literature chairman, has announced the seventh and last of the programs based on the theme, "Our American Heritage," at 1:15 o'clock Tuesday at Indian Boundary fieldhouse. This program will be called "An Historical Dream." It will be presented by its author, Mrs. Edwin Conen, a North Town member.

Mrs. Conen won second award in the 10th district creative writing contest, and she will read the manuscript she entered as well as her special program.

North Shore Woman's Club.

North Shore women will conclude their club year with a spring luncheon planned for 12:30 o'clock Thursday at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Guests will include Mrs. James Massie, retiring president of the 10th district; Mrs. Arthur Highgate, president elect; Mrs. George M. Street, past president of the junior auxiliary, and Mrs. E. W. Zipse, incoming junior president.

Ravenswood Woman's Club.

The annual business session will open at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in the club rooms at 4605 North Paulina street. Annual reports, balloting for new officers, and general business plans will take up the morning. Business will be over when members have potluck luncheon at noon, and there will be a varied program for the afternoon meeting.

Mrs. Ernest Schmidt, delegate to the Boy Scout organization, will present Peter Norg, North Shore district scout executive, who will show a film illustrating Boy Scout work.

Ravenswood members will meet again Wednesday. The occasion will be the spring luncheon in the ballroom of the Belmont hotel.

Brownson Circle.

Reports of officers and chairmen will be the business of the morning session of the Brownson circle at 7077 North Ashland avenue tomorrow. Officers will be elected in the afternoon. Literary awards will be presented, and beginning at 3 o'clock the prize winning stories and poems will be read. The grandmothers' harmonica sextet will play.

This will be fourth annual appearance of the grandmothers. They are all members of the circle, and playing the harmonica is a hobby. The sextet members are Mrs. Daniel B. Hayden, Mrs. George H. Beaudin, Mrs. Prentiss McKenzie, Mrs. Richard J. Finn, Mrs. P. Francis Byrne, and Miss Mary Ryan.

Glenola Book Circle.

Miss Maureen Daly, winner of the first Dodd, Meade literary fellowship, will be guest speaker at the book circle meeting at 2 o'clock Tuesday in the Loyola theater. This will be guest day.

Edgemere Woman's Club.

The annual meeting will be Tuesday at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Officers and chairmen will submit reports, and new officers will be elected. Mrs. Burt E. Steenson, president, will conduct the annual session. A program will follow the 1 o'clock luncheon. Mrs. Frederick Justice, program chairman, will introduce Miss Clare Wellman, violinist, and Miss Vierlyn Duerr, pianist.

Neighbors of Kenilworth.

Tuesday will be the season's final meeting of the Neighbors of Kenilworth. It, too, will be a luncheon session, and officers will be elected. The speaker will be Miss Lynn Lee Shew, a member of a Chinese merchant family which has been in California for five generations. Miss Shew has a master's degree from the University of California. She has headed the Kwantung relief division of Madame Chiang Kai-shek's national war relief program.

SOUTH AMERICAN SALUTE ON W-G-N 'MELODY' SHOW

Marion Claire, Baggiore, Foote to Sing.

A musical salute to our South American neighbors will be a feature of W-G-N's America Loves a Melody program to be aired from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Marion Claire, Attilio Baggiore, and Bruce Foote will be the singing stars.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

The good neighbor salute will be in the form of a Spanish-American medley of "Valencia" featuring the orchestra and chorus, "Hat Dance" by the orchestra, "La Golondrina" by Miss Claire and orchestra, and "Granada" by Baggiore, the chorus, and orchestra.

Miss Claire will be heard in two solo selections: "Chinese Lullaby" from Bowers' "East Is West" and Romberg's "One Kiss" from "New Moon." Mr. Baggiore will sing Tosti's "Parted." Mr. Foote's solo will be Del Riego's "Homing."

The orchestra will be heard playing "On the Trail" from Groffe's "Grand Canyon Suite" and Morton Gould's arrangement of the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers."

A highlight of the program will be a cello solo of "Liebestraum" by Adolf Hoffman. The entire company will join in Edward's "By the Bend of the River" and in a "Show Boat" medley made up of "Why Do I Love You," "Only Make Believe," and "Old Man River."

The orchestra will be under the direction of Henry Weber and the chorus will be conducted by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor is the producer.

'A Name for War' Topic of N. U. Reviewing Stand

"Wanted: A Name for the War" will be the subject for discussion on the Northwestern Reviewing Stand to be heard on W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system from 10 to 10:30 a. m. today. Speakers will be Dr. Jan Masaryk, vice premier and foreign minister of the Czecho-Slovak government in London, and Prof. Franklin Scott, and Prof. John Eberhart of Northwestern. BUILD LAST SETS APR. 22; PLAN TO REVIVE OLD ONES

Rush to Buy Portables for Armed Forces.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

By order of the War Production board all manufacturers of radio sets for civilian use will cease Wednesday night, April 22. Thereupon, all radio manufacturers will devote their full resources to building communications and related equipment for war use. Some companies are already 100 per cent converted.

The radio industry, which last year built about $500,000,000 worth of receivers, this year is committed to building two billion dollars worth of war equipment.

American homes at the end of the year were supplied with some 57 million receiving sets. There were 30 million homes with sets; some 11 million had more than one set. During 1942 the total number of sets may have been boosted to approximately 60 million.

Sales Extremely Brisk.

How many receivers will be available for distribution after April 22 is a matter of conjecture. Some dealers laid in large stocks. The supply among many more is already low. Sales have been extremely lively ever since it was made known that production was to cease.

Stocks of many models are already badly depleted. In some lines of portables the supply is completely exhausted. Many thousands of portables or other small models have been snapped up by men in the armed forces or by friends and relatives as gifts for them.

Letters in increasing numbers from soldiers and sailors stationed abroad indicate that radios represent one of the most important links with home. From distant island outposts have come urgent pleas for short wave sets. A marine on Johnston Island in the mid-Pacific recently wrote: "It is impossible to live here without a radio."

Plan to Rebuild Old Sets.

That dealers are convinced there will be no more new radios for the duration after the present stock is exhausted is indicated by the fact that all used radios taken as trade-ins are being carefully stored. Many radio men are making plans to repair and rebuild old sets and sell them later when the new sets are all gone.

Many sets in good condition are turned in for new receivers, especially for the combination models with FM and phonograph. Often the replacement of a tube or two or a minor part will put trade-in sets in condition for years more of service.

Beg Your Pardon.

In an article printed recently on the radio page of THE TRIBUNE, various suggestions for making radio receivers last longer, as relayed by the consumer division of the Office of Price Information, were included.

One of these suggestions called for connecting a ground wire to sets that are noisy. It was suggested that a wire be run from the ground post to a water or radiator pipe.

Several engineers say that this suggestion is not applicable to some types of so-called universal AC-DC sets. Persons who have these universal type receivers should follow carefully instructions received with such sets and should not proceed otherwise without consulting an expert service man. With some types of such sets serious damage may be caused to the set by linking a ground wire to the chassis, engineers say.

SALUTE BOWEN HIGH TODAY ON CITIZENS' HOUR

Sixty year old Bowen high school of south side Chicago will be honored on the 62d broadcast of "Citizens of Tomorrow" to be heard on W-G-N at 1:30 p. m. today. William P. Hearne, the school's new principal, a graduate of St. Mary's university, Baltimore, Md., will be the principal speaker, outlining the defense work of the school.

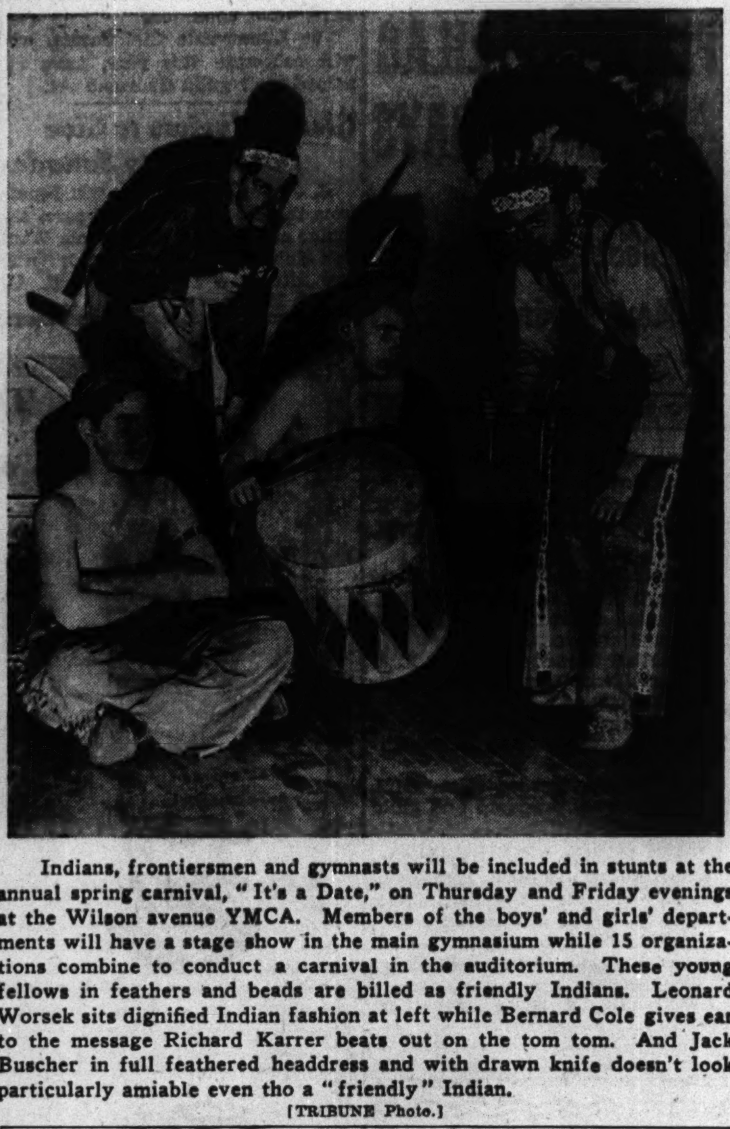
A feature of the program will be a piano solo, Tschaikowsky's "Concerto in B Flat minor," played by Harold Turner, who together with Philip Maxwell, the entertainment's master of ceremonies, started out on the first broadcast of this series in the spring of 1940.

The Bowen girls' chorus, conducted by Lillian Pope, will sing two numbers, "Babylon" by Joseph Clokey, and "America, My Own" by Noble Cain. Maxwell will name two more students to the program's "Honor Roll." They will be Miss Esther Jackson, 17 year old senior in the Crawfordsville, Ind., high school, a leading student and violinist, and Richard Green, also 17, of Bowen high, who will be interviewed.

More A. P. Newscasts.

A new series of Associated Press news reports will be heard on W-G-N at 12:30 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays beginning tomorrow. The programs will be of five minute duration.

In Wilson YMCA Stunt Show



Indians, frontiersmen and gymnasts will be included in stunts at the annual spring carnival, "It's a Date," on Thursday and Friday evenings at the Wilson avenue YMCA. Members of the boys' and girls' departments will have a stage show in the main gymnasium while 15 organizations combine to conduct a carnival in the auditorium. These young fellows in feathers and beads are billed as friendly Indians. Leonard Worsek sits dignified Indian fashion at left while Bernard Cole gives ear to the message Richard Karrer beats out on the tom tom. And Jack Buscher in full feathered headdress and with drawn knife doesn't look particularly amiable even tho a "friendly" Indian.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 20.

Pansies should be starting to bloom nicely. Altho they will do well in any rich, light soil, a sandy, loamy, deep soil is preferable. The best location is one that is not emburdened with trees or full sun. By adding leaf mold, humus, or peat moss a fine stand can be obtained.

The withered flowers must be removed to prevent seedage or the plants will cease flowering. The finest varieties can be propagated from cuttings, by layering or from seed.

It is lawn making time but a considerable number of home gardeners delay the work until hot weather at which time the weeds grow faster than grass.

Tuesday, April 21.

You can have a lawn that is free from weeds if you will take care of the lawn in such a manner that a thick mat of grass is established. Weeds cannot grow under such conditions. Notice how few there are when grass is high and thick—even the dandelions fail to develop as they do where the grass is sparse.

But the ground must be well enriched, which means applying sufficient plant food. Use a complete balanced plant food at the rate of 4 pounds per 100 square feet of area.

Wednesday, April 22.

Vegetable gardeners like to grow a new variety or two to add interest to their garden. The following are among the all-America awards for 1942, but they should be tried out before they are planted extensively on unknown soils. A silver medal was awarded for the pole snap bean "Decatur." It is said to be resistant to rust and is early and produces abundantly pods 6 to 8 inches long, and of fine quality.

The new bush bean "Medal Refugee" also is resistant to bean mosaic and yields a fine pod and is excellent for green beans; good for canning and home use, 85 days.

The Cosberg 600 lettuce is a cross between cos and iceberg and is said to be a sure heading variety under poor conditions; very early, does not bronze. The leaf lettuce, not heading, is New York PW55, very early and crisp. The new Topflight sweet hybrid corn has long ears and is a heavy yielder; yellow.

Thursday, April 23.

There are few gardeners who have not had their snowball plants attacked by the aphid and wonder how to control it. Just as the buds start and again every few days spray with a delayed dormant oil spray, such as nicotine sulphate and soap or some other recommended spray. If necessary dust with nicotine or rotenone dust for it is so fine it can enter thru the openings in the curled leaves.

Dust the hollyhocks to aid in controling rust. Spray the ground around roses with Bordeaux to control black spot spores that are on the ground. Bordeaux may be sprayed on many perennials for they are sometimes attacked by blights, rusts, or other diseases.

Friday, April 24.

Prune evergreens. Stake the central stem if a new straight stem is needed. Pinch off the short terminals of the side growths to obtain a stock growth on pines and firs. Transplant magnolias, sassafras, and other trees with soft roots in spring, altho most of our native trees can be planted as well in autumn.

The short growths of the forsythias can be used as propagating materials if desired. Spade among shrubs and give them an application of plant food.

Cannas should be almost ready for potting at this time. Watch the young stock in the cold frame. Give it air by removing the sash on warm days; at other times simply lift the sash and place a stake under one end or at one side.

Saturday, April 25.

Harden off tender plants like the tomato, pepper, eggplant, geranium, and others for a period of about 10 days before planting. Watch weather reports and gauge the time accordingly. On clear nights it is likely to freeze; on cloudy nights it is not so likely to freeze; plants in low land will more likely freeze than those planted on high ground.

Cover against frost by placing a cone of newspaper over each plant; remove during the day. Pots, cans, or other things can be used. If the hardy annuals are developed enough to handle begin thinning to about 9 to 12 inches apart. After a rain, use the hoe.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

BUILDING BOARD MAKES EASY JOB OF MODERNIZING

Some Types Are Finished in the Factory.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Houses, like tires and clothes and cars and equipment, wear out in course of time and for this reason, with warring against deterioriation and waste a patriotic part of every home program, it is vitally important to keep the houses we have in as good condition as possible.

Many materials needed for home repair are available and substitutes and plastics are on the market in no small quantity for those materials needed by the goverment for war uses.

Especially worthwhile right now, if renovation and repair is necessary, is the inclusion of insulation in the repair program.

Some Are Finished.

Insulation boards are to be had in a host of types.

For the walls and ceilings of practically any room in your house there are boards which come finished and ready to install without any further decoration; there are those which come unfinished, to be painted or papered, and there are those which come primed and ready for the final coat of paint.

There are the building boards in large sheets for easy coverage of large areas. There are rectangular units or small square units called tile, especially adapted for ceilings, and there are the narrow units known as planks that come in varying widths and can be used in many combinations to make attractive wall designs.

Will Deaden Sound.

If you are converting some unused space to an extra room these insulating boards that build, insulate, and decorate are easy to install and also economical. These same boards also contribute somewhat to the lessening of sound thru walls and ceilings.

Materials are obtainable for conversion of unused attic space into living quarters and a high priority rate is given to this type of modernization. Modern panel materials do this work quickly: Those thick, rigid panels of fiber board which come as wide as 4 feet and as long as 16 feet are presized at the factory so that they require only one coat of paint.

And now is the time to stop leaks of all kinds around the house. The drip drip of leaky faucets and gas leaks are wasteful and dangerous too. Roof leaks create an unhealthy atmosphere in the house. Garden hose that leaks can be mended to save water, and save also on the garden hose.

Brother Marines in Hawaii

Three brothers, David, 20, Jack, 24, and James, 19, sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Cosley of 4847 Kenmore avenue, who enlisted together in the marine corps last January are now in Oahu, Hawaii, still together. They're receiving advanced training there. Jack was a 1936 Golden Gloves contender and left a salesman's job to enlist. James and David, before enlisting, worked in shipyards in Oakland, Cal.

GOV. GREEN WILL ACT ON W-G-N'S 'RAMPARTS' HOUR

Illinois Reserve Militia to Be Saluted.

Gov. Dwight H. Green will become a radio actor when he joins the cast of "Americans at the Ramparts" on W-G-N at 7 p. m. next Thursday. Gov. Green will be the narrator for a half hour musical dramatic salute to the Illinois Reserve Militia on this broadcast.

Gov. Green is the commander in chief of the state militia and a former World war aviator. His part in the Ramparts program will be to set the scenes for the dramatic sketches that will tell of the development of the militia which has been rated by the war department as "one of the best in the country."

Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, adjutant general of the militia, will also play an important part in the broadcast. Gen. Boyle will close the show with a short speech telling of the new enlistment plans for the militia. A full dramatic cast will be featured on the program as well as the W-G-N chorus and orchestra under the direction of Robert Trendler.

More than 500 officers and men from Illinois Reserve Militia companies all over the state will attend the broadcast. The militiamen will march up Michigan avenue to the W-G-N studios just before the program goes on the air. They will be led by band units from the various companies. Gen. Boyle and other high ranking officers of the militia will join in the parade. At 53 armories all over the state, members of the state militia and their families will gather to hear the W-G-N broadcast.

Gov. Green will salute the militia as the "fourth service" and officers of the other three fighting services will be in the audience.

FrankMacCormack to Read 'House by Side of the Road'

"The House by the Side of the Road" will be read by Franklyn MacCormack during the program Maid of America, to be heard on W-G-N from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Tuesday. Songs by Evelyn Ames and the music of Robert Trendler and the W-G-N orchestra provide the musical portion of the program.

Miss Ames will be heard in "Paris in the Spring" and "I'll See You Again." The orchestra will play "Thank Your Lucky Stars and Stripes," "Scrub Me, Mama," "It Had to Be You," and a Victor Herbert medley consisting of "Kiss in the Dark," "Indian Summer," and "On Parade."

Heather Tweed is mistress of ceremonies on the program.

That is, until Mamma done told him the price of all these damaged and prematurely worn out articles had gone up on account of a shortage of this, that and the other. BRAZILIAN CO-ED AIDS GOOD WILL POLICY AT N.U.

Likes Everything Here Except Winter.

tion at her roommate's home in Great Falls, Mont. Living at an United States university she finds different in that the university takes a responsibility for one's residence and whereabouts. In Brazil, the universities are government owned and operated and take no responsibility further than providing courses. Students live where and as they choose.

She is concerned that North Americans generally regard Spanish as the language of the continent south. "Brazil's language is Portuguese," she explains, "and that is important in South America because more than half of the continent's population is in Brazil. My country has nearly 50 million inhabitants. In area, Brazil is more than half of South America.

Tells of Jungle in Brazil.

Miss Vasconcellos herself is of Portuguese and French descent. She finds that her fellow students expect her to regard the jungles of Brazil as a foreign country. She says, "We keep in contact with that interior and feel it is ours. There is no strangeness about the jungle to us. Nearly every one used to have farms within the country, but that practice is not so general now. Of course, there are many parts of Brazil where neither missionaries nor traders have penetrated. There are really wild Indians there, and sometimes I think it's a good idea to leave the savages savage."

Miss Vasconcellos says it will be a strange wardrobe she'll take home in June. She thinks her mother will be much interested in the sweaters and wool sox she has had to have here. And all of her 65 close cousins and more than she can count offhand of third, fourth, and fifth cousins will be interested, too.

Has Nurse's Role

Miss June McComb has the role of Florence Nightingale in the play, "The Lady with a Lamp," a story of the great nurse's life by Reginald Berkeley. The play is a production of the senior dramatic students of Immaculata High school, 640 Irving Pard road, and the final performance of it will be this evening in the school auditorium.

BENEFIT BRIDGE TO RAISE FUNDS FOR SCHOLARSHIP

Chicago St. Mary of the Woods club will give a benefit bridge party at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the South Shore Country club, to raise funds for a full tuition scholarship to St. Mary of the Woods college at Terre Haute, Ind. LEADERS TO DRAFT LILAC DAY PLANS

725 HAWTHORNE WORKERS TURN TO ARMY TASKS

Show Enthusiasm in Letters Home.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Special leaves of absence for military service have been granted to 725 employes of Western Electric's Hawthorne works. Normal peacetime employment at the plant is about 20,000.

Officials said that altho many former employes are still in training camps, messages are being received in increasing numbers from Western Electric men now stationed in Iceland, Ireland, Australia, and the Canal Zone.

Company records show that the employes are serving in all branches of the armed service, but that a relatively large number has been assigned to the specialized communications work because of experience in the engineering and manufacture of communications equipment.

One a Lieutenant Colonel.

Of the 725 men in service, one is a lieutenant colonel, four are majors, seven are captains, and 43 are lieutenants. Four have been commissioned as ensigns. Because of frequent transfers it has been impossible so far to check the number of noncommissioned officers.

Of those who already have seen action, at least one former employe, Stanley Rozycki, 5015 West 29th street, Cicero, is believed held prisoner by the Japanese. Rozycki was a member of the marine force defending Wake Island.

The first gold star of the war was hung last month by fellow employés of Private Edmund Koster, 6531 Sinclair avenue, Berwyn, who was killed March 7 in the wreck of an army train four days after he volunteered for army duty.

Private Roland Gambarale, 2141 Gunderson avenue, Berwyn, who was injured in the same train wreck, last week reported to the company that he is recovering.

Two Hailed as Heroes.

Acclaimed as heroes by fellow employés are two Hawthorne men, Private H. J. McAndrew, 2445 Sayre avenue, and Private Anton Batha, 1318 South Albany avenue, who have been serving in the Bataan peninsula campaign. Private McAndrew's father, John McAndrew, is an employé of Western Electric's subsidiary, the Manufacturers' Junction railroad.

"I am sending this letter from Greenland," writes Richard Hrquda, 2142 Gunderson avenue, Berwyn, in an account of his work on Atlantic transport duty. "We have been battling ice steadily all day and night. Winds were recorded at 120 miles per hour. Since leaving Hawthorne I really have covered a lot of water."

Finds Soldiers from Home.

With the majority of Hawthorne Works employes residing in the Cicero-Berwyn area—Lieut. Elmer Brickman, 257 Gage road, Riverside, felt at home when he reported at Fort Lewis, Wash., prior to overseas duty, and found that most of the selectees under him were from Cicero. He is attached to the signal corps.

Among the many Cicero men in service is Arne F. Jensen, 4827 Cermak road, who wrote the company that he is now stationed at Pearl Harbor, ready for anything the Japs have to offer. He is a seaman, first class, but his exact assignment is not revealed.

Released from the coast artillery because he was one of the "Over-28 club," Sergt. John P. Hedlund, 3804 Montrose avenue, returned to his job at Hawthorne Works for only 60 days before the outbreak of war necessitated his return to his regiment.

A Harvard Laboratory.

One of many soldiers who found their manufacturing or engineering experience valuable, Norman C. Lancaster, 5644 Lake street, was especially pleased with his assignment. He wrote:

"I am in the Cruft laboratory at Harvard university—much of a surprise to me. The army sent me here to take a preliminary course in radio engineering. There is a possibility I may take an additional three months course at M. I. T."

N. W. Swanson, 1234 Hood avenue, who was employed in the company's equipment engineering department, also found that the navy valued his training.

Has Job Laying Sub Nets.

"I am on the good ship ———, a submarine net tender," Swanson wrote. "Since our arrival at base we have been busy laying nets."

"Three cheers for the army," wrote Private Stanley R. Rempala, 5026 31st street, Cicero, on the occasion of receiving his rating as private, first class. From his barracks window at Fort Lewis, Private Rempala says he looks out on "beautiful snow capped mountains and on pine trees that cover the hills," but he expects soon to be in action overseas.

Another Western Electric man who is pleased with his assignment is Private Norman A. Nagel, 6921 South Carpenter street, a motorcycle mechanic with the quartermaster corps at Fort Warren, Wyo. But a pathetic note crept into Private Nagel's letter to the company. "At the present time," he wrote, "we are in quarantine with the measles."

Awaits Victory Parade.

Private Edward Bayer, 2319 West Iowa street, formerly employed on

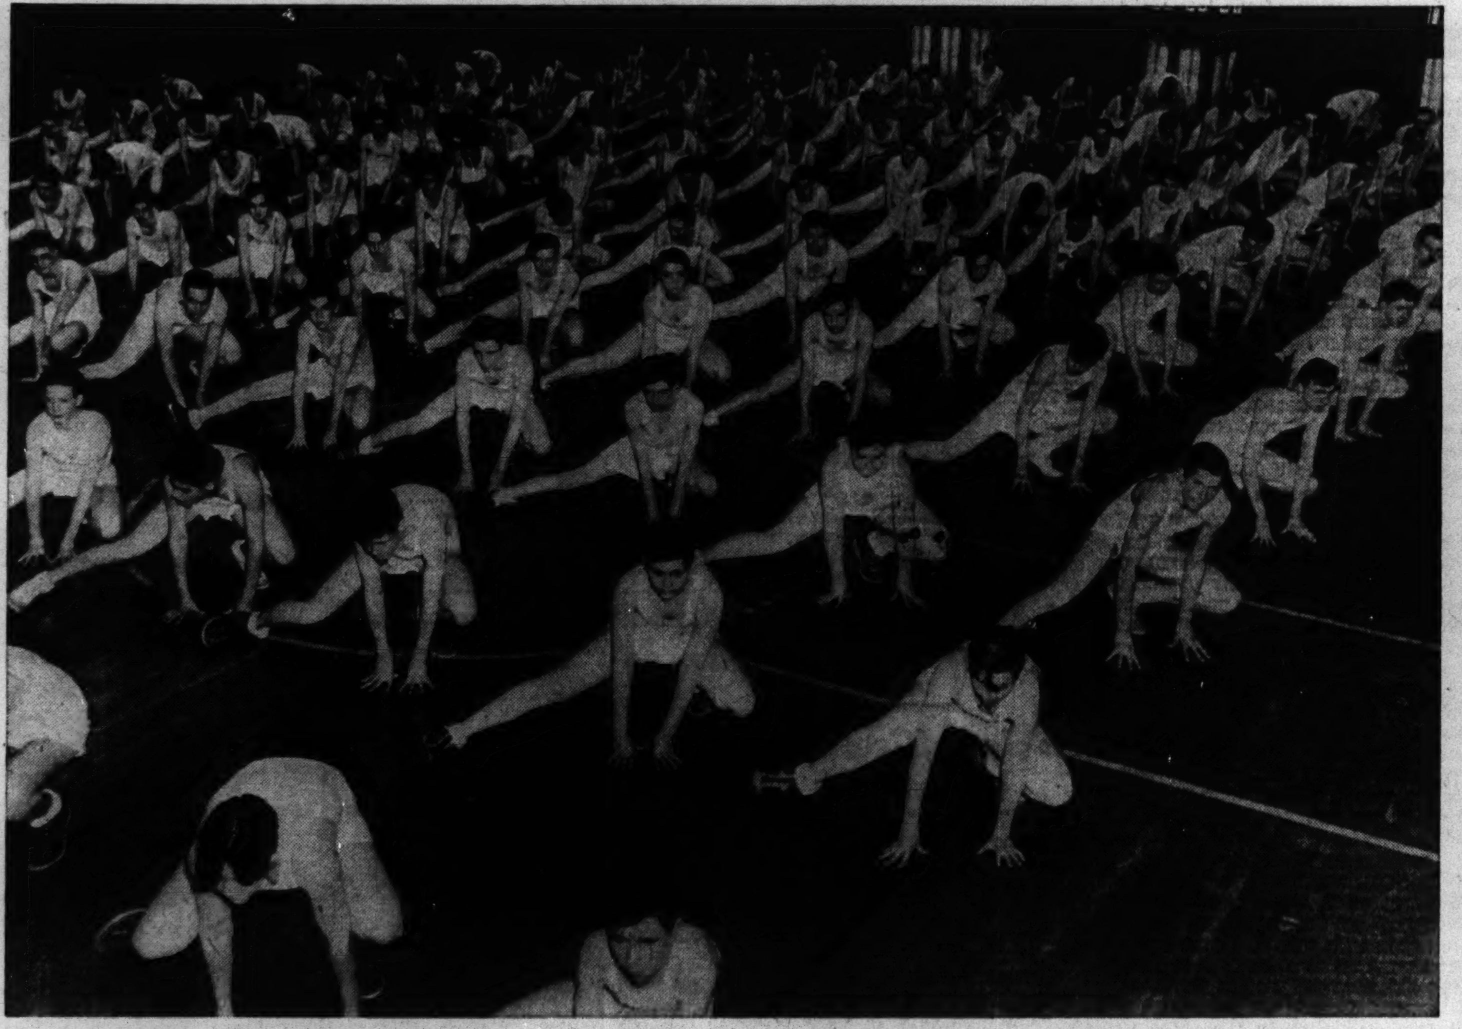
Country Gets Dividend on Physical Training at Oak Park High School



The demands of war for physically fit young men found Oak Park-River Forest High school with a fully developed program. The school has had an intensive physical education program for more than a decade. Every pupil has one period of gym each day. Important part of the program are the mass calisthenics, identical to those given the navy.

If you think it's easy you might try it yourself. Fred Trumbower, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Trumbower, 831 Clarence avenue, is pulling himself up by the strength of one arm. Fred is trying to finish his senior classes early so that he can enlist in the navy air corps.

These boys had an audience of 5,000 when they appeared on the program for the annual gymnasium demonstration held recently in the Oak Park-River Forest High school fieldhouse. A total of 2,000 students took part, showing parents and interested townspeople how a well planned physical education department can develop healthy bodies.

Petrus Play Church Organ for 66 Years

BY MAURINE MYERS.

As long as there have been organs there have been Petrus to play on them. That is the family tradition handed down to Quido Petru, third generation to serve as organist at St. Procopius church, 1641 South Allport street.

It was 66 years ago that the grandfather of Quido Petru first played the organ at St. Procopius. Thruout the intervening years since that day in 1876 there always has been a Petru at the console. The position passed to Quido Petru's father, then to him, and now a fourth Petru, Quido's son, John, is training to take over the duties some day. It is a natural succession, for long before the first Petru came to America members of the family had played the instrument in their native Bohemian village of Tabor.

Brings Family of Seven.

It was John Petru, music professor, who made the momentous decision to come to this country back in 1875, bringing with him his wife and seven children. They came directly to Chicago and within a few months the Bohemian musician had secured the post of organist, choir director, and teacher at St. Procopius. This post he held until he was 76 years old, retiring in 1901. He stepped aside then to let his son, the first Quido Petru, take over the duties of organist.

For 19 years the first Quido Petru played the St. Procopius organ. In spare moments he would engage in the real estate business and in 1920 he left the organist's post to devote his entire time to real estate.

It was then that his son, Quido, the present organist, began his duties at St. Procopius. His organ training had been under John Sengenberger at Pius IX. school south of Milwaukee, where he finished a four year course in three years. He was also a student of the violin under Joseph Halamicek at the American Conservatory of Music.

Has First Dollar.

Mr. Petru still has the first dollar he ever earned by playing a mass. Back in the summer of 1915, just after he had graduated from Pius IX., the pastor of a tiny Croatian church in the neighborhood needed an organist for a mass. Petru took the job and his payment was the dollar bill which now hangs framed in his office.

In the five years which followed the young musician worked around St. Procopius, helping his father, and understudying for the position he himself was to assume some day.

There have been as many different organs as Petrus at St. Procopius. When John Petru assumed musical leadership the church had only an old reed organ. The first pipe organ was worked by a bellows and the Rev. Augustine Studeny, now assistant pastor at St. Procopius, then only a lad in the parish, can remember working those bellows for John Petru.

Worked Behind Scenes.

Later a pipe organ with more intricate mechanism was installed, one which had a complex system of water power and belts and shafts. All went well until the temperature turned frigid. Then the water would freeze and the belts and shafts would cease working. That was young Quido's cue to get to work with the torch in an attempt to thaw out the "power." If such an attempt failed the only course left was for the boy to operate the huge crank by hand while his fa-

"Those men died for their country," Ruth said. "The American flag shall always fly as long as there are such gallant men as these."

Ruth now is serving on a merchant vessel on the inland waterways. He hopes to serve on the high seas again soon.

Houda serves the organization as president.

Pioneer in Sub Action Recalls 1909 'Tin Fish'

Submarine crews of today live in luxury as compared to those who manned Uncle Sam's "tin fish" during the early days of the submersibles. You can take the word of Fred Lindley, 3331 Clinton avenue, Berwyn, that the statement is correct.

Mr. Lindley, 58 year old teacher at Morton High school, served in the submarine crew of the United States navy from 1909 to 1913 when each dive was like an epoch from one of Jules Verne's fantastic sea stories. He received $1 a dive for plummeting small, six-man craft below the surface of the Pacific.

Serving aboard the Adder, later known as the A-2, Mr. Lindley saw submarine service in Philippine waters aboard 65-foot vessels which were among the first undersea craft commissioned by the navy. Other subs in the Pacific islands flotilla at that time were the Moccasin, Porpoise, and Shark.

Speed Was 8½ Knots.

Subs of the Adder class displaced 122 tons when submerged. The vessels were fitted with 160 horse power Otto gasoline engines for surface propulsion and 70 horse power electric motors for submerged movement. They drove a single propeller, reaching a speed of 8½ knots on the surface and seven knots when submerged.

Modern subs displace from 800 to 2,880 tons and reach top speeds of about nine knots when under water and 25 knots on the surface.

In contrast to the floating arsenal of today the offensive armament of the early models was limited to one torpedo tube and two additional torpedoes as compared to the six tubes, stores of at least six extra torpedoes and other heavy armament on medium-sized craft operating in this war.

In the early days experts in submarine warfare regarded the subs as home defense units. After spending its torpedoes in battle the sub was supposed to dash to a nearby base, freshen its ammunition supply and return to action.

Radius Limited.

Radius of action for the vessels was 300 miles when traveling awash at full speed and 49 miles at five knots, or 25 miles at seven knots when running submerged. Today's submersibles operate at radii of thousands of miles.

Lindley, a native of Jennings county, Indiana, was graduated from Purdue university with an A. B. degree a few months before enlisting in the navy as a second class machinist's mate. He desired to combine his recently acquired education with a spectacular branch of the navy and was attached to the submarine crew at Norfolk, Va.

When the navy planned to send a flotilla of submarines to the Philippines for experimental purposes and asked for volunteers, Lindley saw his chance.

Because of the short cruising range

81 CLUBS WILL HELP TO CHEER CITY'S SHUT-INS

Luncheon Meeting Is Wednesday.

When guild chairmen and presidents of 81 garden clubs thruout Chicagoland meet Wednesday noon to complete their plans for the 14th annual "Share the Lilacs" campaign, their efforts might well be compared to modern wartime production methods.

For it is their responsibility to see that fragrant lilacs by the thousands of bouquets find their way from farms, estates, and homes, large or small, in the suburbs, to the patients and shut-ins of Chicago's hospitals, homes, and orphanages. It is their task to insure that bouquets, cut fresh on Lilac days, arrive at suburban stations for swift transportation to the city. How well they have organized this work is seen in the record—more than 100,000 bouquets distributed last year among 25,000 individuals.

See Bumper Crop.

The women will represent garden clubs affiliated with the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, which coöperates each year with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in bringing a touch of spring to the city's shut-ins.

Their meeting will be held at noon at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. and working plans will be drafted to help speed the delivery of the fragrant blooms from the suburbs to the hospitals and institutions in the city. This year, with the lilac bushes promising another bumper crop, guild officials are hoping to exceed last year's record.

Gathered by Volunteers.

The flowers are gathered by volunteer workers from backyard gardens, parks, estates, and solitary bushes wherever they are found. The guild chairmen supervise the work of getting the blooms to the railroad stations, where they are delivered freight free to the city terminals. Here the lilacs are picked up by Tribune trucks and sped to the various hospitals.

Response to the lilac campaign last year was so great that 158 institutions were given bouquets of the fragrant flowers. The days on which lilacs will be distributed this year have not yet been determined. When guild officials feel that the blooms in all the suburbs have reached their peak, the distribution days will be announced.

Club presidents and chairmen of the garden clubs on the west side who will participate this year in the lilac distribution are as follows:

GALENA DIVISION.

Garden Club of Oak Park and River Forest—Mrs. O. A. Figge, president; Mrs. Dean Baker Jr., guild chairman.

LIGHT BALLOTING BRINGS WINS TO PARTY REGULARS

Church Only Nominee to Beat Organization.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

The lightest primary balloting in several years was the chief factor in bringing congress nominations to nearly all the regular organization in the 10 congressional districts of Cook and Lake counties. Not since 1930 have so few persons voted in a congressional election, according to a comparison of the nearly complete 1942 results compared with those of other years.

The one exception to the rule of regular organization victories was the G. O. P. primary in the 10th district, which includes part of Cook and all of Lake county [districts 1 to 9 are in Cook county]. Here former Congressman Ralph E. Church, in an intense personal campaign, overcame the strong organization backing given Congressman George A. Paddock to win by nearly 7,000 votes.

Regulars Win the Others.

In every other case where there were contests the regularly supported candidates won by overwhelming margins. Indorsements were given in every case but the Republican primary in the 8th district.

Here is the tabulation of the nearly complete unofficial primary returns in the county, the asterisks [*] indicating incumbents. The table shows the total number of precincts in each district and the number missing from the returns for each party.

He writes that he looks forward to the day when the men in his company will "march triumphantly down Michigan boulevard in a victory parade." His letter urged his fellow employés to "keep on buying bonds and keep on producing the war materials that are vitally needed."

Jack Genty, 5253 Van Buren street, in training as an air force cadet at Kelly field, writes: "There's a great bunch of boys here, all types and sizes, and most of them are pretty swell eggs. They're from everywhere in the United States, from all walks of life—All-Americans, Big Leaguers, stage comedians, circus clowns, office and factory workers, ranchers, farmers. For me, this is a great experience, and if I pass all my tests—and can fly—I'll be one happy lad."

WAR STEPS UP MARMION BOYS' MILITARY STUDY

Intensive Training Leads to Commissions.

In consequence of the latest order from the war department, military training in science and tactics and courses in mathematics and science are being intensified at Marmion Military academy, Aurora.

The order makes it possible for graduates of essentially military schools who complete four years of military training, fulfill the required camp training and are 18, may upon the proper recommendation, receive a commission as second lieutenants in the infantry reserve.

Additional units of military science and tactics have been introduced into each year of military study to be covered in the already allotted time. Study has been increased in offensive and defensive combat tactics, map reading, aerial photography, communications and use of fire arms.

Emphasize Use of Arms.

The use of arms is receiving particular attention with emphasis being placed on marksmanship with the Garand rifle, Browning automatic rifle and the Browning machine gun. Every cadet must acquire skill in the complete assembly of each arm, learn its fire power, know its combat uses and coördinate its use to the other arms of the squad, platoon and company.

Mastery of the minipulation of weapons is stressed to the point where every cadet must be able to give a satisfactory demonstration of his ability before he is premitted to advance to another unit of study.

In class, emphasis is placed on the increase of fire power that can be achieved by the coördinated use of the automatic rifle and machine gun. The weapons must be used to achieve the objective assigned in the manner commanded and not promiscuously. Junior classes study the three inch trench mortar and the 37 mm. anti-tank gun where the manipulation is carefully supervised by the tactical officers.

Weather Fails to Halt Drills.

Out of door drill and extended order tactics have been engaged in despite the weather. Coveralls are used by the entire cadet corps.

Fourteen members of the Marmion graduating class of 1942 will become second lieutenants in the United States army, infantry reserve corps—June 14 and will be subject to call to active duty within 10 days thereafter. They are:

Others to Be Commissioned.

Ten other seniors will receive certificates for appointment as second lieutenants in the United States infantry reserve corps which will become effective within three months after their graduation. They will not have reached the age of 18 in June, but all of them have fulfilled other requirements except the age minimum. Upon their 18th birthday they will transfer their certificates for appointments as second lieutenants in the United States infantry reserve corps. The ten are:

Cadet Capt. Warren P. Piper, 703 Naperville street, Wheaton; Cadet Capt. Hayden C. Curry, Naperville; Cadet First Lieut. Donald J. Driessen, St. Charles; Cadet First Lieut. Ralph P. DOWNERS GROVE CHURCH WILL BE DEDICATED TODAY

To Hold Three Services at Immanuel Lutheran.

At three services today, with pastors from other localities participating, the new Immanuel Lutheran church will be dedicated at Carpenter street and Grove avenue, Downers Grove. The services will be held at 10:30 a. m. and 3:30 and 7:30, p. m.

Stained glass windows portraying the six chief parts of Martin Luther's catechism are features in the new structure.

First Services in 1850.

Lutheran services were held in Downers Grove as early as 1850, but the present congregation was not organized until 1909 when the Rev. H. P. Guebert of Zion Lutheran church, Hinsdale, took charge. The building, now known as the old church or parish house, was constructed in 1924. Other early day pastors were the Rev. M. J. Nickel and the Rev. W. J. Burmeister, both of St. John's Lutheran church, Lace.

The first resident pastor, the Rev. Otto F. Arndt, now of Skokie, was succeeded in 1931 by the present pastor, the Rev. Milton A. Reinke.

Plan New Church 6 Years Ago.

Movement for the new church began in 1936. Members of the building committee who have coöperated with the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Reinke, are M. A. Specht, F. E. Henry, H. J. Krueger, M. E. Scheck, and F. C. Witt.

Wood for the buttresses came from Washington state, the windows from Philadelphia, the stone from Wisconsin, and the cement brick of variegated colors from Chicago. The building has been under construction for seven months.

Next Sunday there will be a reunion service and in the evening the Ladies' Aid society will serve a banquet in the basement of the new church.

BUILD LAST SETS APR. 22; PLAN TO REVIVE OLD ONES

Rush to Buy Portables for Armed Forces.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

By order of the War Production board all manufacturers of radio sets for civilian use will cease Wednesday night, April 22. Thereupon, all radio manufacturers will devote their full resources to building communications and related equipment for war use. Some companies are already 100 per cent converted.

The radio industry, which last year built about $500,000,000 worth of receivers, this year is committed to building two billion dollars worth of war equipment.

American homes at the end of the year were supplied with some 57 million receiving sets. There were 30 million homes with sets; some 11 million had more than one set. During 1942 the total number of sets may have been boosted to approximately 60 million.

Sales Extremely Brisk.

How many receivers will be available for distribution after April 22 is a matter of conjecture. Some dealers laid in large stocks. The supply among many more is already low. Sales have been extremely lively ever since it was made known that production was to cease.

Stocks of many models are already badly depleted. In some lines of portables the supply is completely exhausted. Many thousands of portables or other small models have been snapped up by men in the armed forces or by friends and relatives as gifts for them.

Letters in increasing numbers from soldiers and sailors stationed abroad indicate that radios represent one of the most important links with home. From distant island outposts have come urgent pleas for short wave sets. A marine on Johnston Island in the mid-Pacific recently wrote: "It is impossible to live here without a radio."

Plan to Rebuild Old Sets.

That dealers are convinced there will be no more new radios for the duration after the present stock is exhausted is indicated by the fact that all used radios taken as trade-ins are being carefully stored. Many radio men are making plans to repair and rebuild old sets and sell them later when the new sets are all gone.

Many sets in good condition are turned in for new receivers, especially for the combination models with FM and phonograph. Often the replacement of a tube or two or a minor part will put trade-in sets in condition for years more of service.

Beg Your Pardon.

In an article printed recently on the radio page of THE TRIBUNE, various suggestions for making radio receivers last longer, as relayed by the consumer division of the Office of Price Information, were included.

One of these suggestions called for connecting a ground wire to sets that are noisy. It was suggested that a wire be run from the ground post to a water or radiator pipe.

Several engineers say that this suggestion is not applicable to some types of so-called universal AC-DC sets. Persons who have these universal type receivers should follow carefully instructions received with such sets and should not proceed otherwise without consulting an expert service man. With some types of such sets serious damage may be caused to the set by linking a ground wire to the chassis, engineers say.

NATIONAL HEAD OF CUB SCOUTS TO VISIT COUNCIL

On Benefit Party Committee

Miss Betty Melvin is one of the committee working for the success of the benefit supper and card party to be held by the Trinity High School Alumnae chapter of the Dominican Tertiaries on Tuesday. The party will be at the Better Homemaking Institute, 14 East Jackson boulevard.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 20.

Pansies should be starting to bloom nicely. Altho they will do well in any rich, light soil, a sandy, loamy, deep soil is preferable. The best location is one that is not emburdened with trees or full sun. By adding leaf mold, humus, or peat moss a fine stand can be obtained.

The withered flowers must be removed to prevent seedage or the plants will cease flowering. The finest varieties can be propagated from cuttings, by layering or from seed.

It is lawn making time but a considerable number of home gardeners delay the work until hot weather at which time the weeds grow faster than grass.

Tuesday, April 21.

You can have a lawn that is free from weeds if you will take care of the lawn in such a manner that a thick mat of grass is established. Weeds cannot grow under such conditions. Notice how few there are when grass is high and thick—even the dandelions fail to develop as they do where the grass is sparse.

But the ground must be well enriched, which means applying sufficient plant food. Use a complete balanced plant food at the rate of 4 pounds per 100 square feet of area. Early preparation and early sowing of a high grade lawn mixture will give excellent results the first season, but it takes about three years for a blue grass lawn to become well established.

Wednesday, April 22.

Vegetable gardeners like to grow a new variety or two to add interest to their garden. The following are among the all-America awards for 1942, but they should be tried out before they are planted extensively on unknown soils. A silver medal was awarded for the pole snap bean "Decatur." It is said to be resistant to rust and is early and produces abundantly pods 6 to 8 inches long, and of fine quality.

The new bush bean "Medal Refugee" also is resistant to bean mosaic and yields a fine pod and is excellent for green beans; good for canning and home use, 85 days.

The Cosberg 600 lettuce is a cross between cos and iceberg and is said to be a sure heading variety under poor conditions; very early, does not bronze. The leaf lettuce, not heading, is New York PW55, very early and crisp. The new Topflight sweet hybrid corn has long ears and is a heavy yielder; yellow.

Try the Fordhook Zucchine squash as a midseason producer. Picked when small it has tender flesh and bears a long time. Plenty of nourishment is essential when growing vegetables.

Thursday, April 23.

There are few gardeners who have not had their snowball plants attacked by the aphid and wonder how to control it. Just as the buds start and again every few days spray with a delayed dormant oil spray, such as nicotine sulphate and soap or some other recommended spray. If necessary dust with nicotine or rotenone dust for it is so fine it can enter thru the openings in the curled leaves.

Dust the hollyhocks to aid in controling rust. Spray the ground around roses with Bordeaux to control black spot spores that are on the ground. Bordeaux may be sprayed on many perennials for they are sometimes attacked by blights, rusts, or other diseases.

Friday, April 24.

Prune evergreens. Stake the central stem if a new straight stem is needed. Pinch off the short terminals of the side growths to obtain a stock growth on pines and firs. Transplant magnolias, sassafras, and other trees with soft roots in spring, altho most of our native trees can be planted as well in autumn.

The short growths of the forsythias can be used as propagating materials if desired. Spade among shrubs and give them an application of plant food.

Cannas should be almost ready for potting at this time. Watch the young stock in the cold frame. Give it air by removing the sash on warm days; at other times simply lift the sash and place a stake under one end or at one side.

Saturday, April 25.

Harden off tender plants like the tomato, pepper, eggplant, geranium, and others for a period of about 10 days before planting. Watch weather reports and gauge the time accordingly. On clear nights it is likely to freeze; on cloudy nights it is not so likely to freeze; plants in low land will more likely freeze than those planted on high ground.

Cover against frost by placing a cone of newspaper over each plant; remove during the day. Pots, cans, or other things can be used. If the hardy annuals are developed enough to handle begin thinning to about 9 to 12 inches apart. After a rain, use the hoe.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

BUILDING BOARD MAKES EASY JOB OF MODERNIZING

Some Types Are Finished in the Factory.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Houses, like tires and clothes and cars and equipment, wear out in course of time and for this reason, with warring against deterioriation and waste a patriotic part of every home program, it is vitally important to keep the houses we have in as good condition as possible.

Many materials needed for home repair are available and substitutes and plastics are on the market in no small quantity for those materials needed by the goverment for war uses.

Especially worthwhile right now, if renovation and repair is necessary, is the inclusion of insulation in the repair program.

Some Are Finished.

Insulation boards are to be had in a host of types.

For the walls and ceilings of practically any room in your house there are boards which come finished and ready to install without any further decoration; there are those which come unfinished, to be painted or papered, and there are those which come primed and ready for the final coat of paint.

There are the building boards in large sheets for easy coverage of large areas. There are rectangular units or small square units called tile, especially adapted for ceilings, and there are the narrow units known as planks that come in varying widths and can be used in many combinations to make attractive wall designs.

Will Deaden Sound.

If you are converting some unused space to an extra room these insulating boards that build, insulate, and decorate are easy to install and also economical. These same boards also contribute somewhat to the lessening of sound thru walls and ceilings.

Materials are obtainable for conversion of unused attic space into living quarters and a high priority rate is given to this type of modernization. Modern panel materials do this work quickly: Those thick, rigid panels of fiber board which come as wide as 4 feet and as long as 16 feet are presized at the factory so that they require only one coat of paint.

If you have a room that might house a war worker you save and reclaim space; just as you save for munition plants when you take a "census" of your attic or basement and salvage those discarded articles now wanted by the War Production board's industrial conservation bureau.

Time to Mend Leaks.

And now is the time to stop leaks of all kinds around the house. The drip drip of leaky faucets and gas leaks are wasteful and dangerous too. Roof leaks create an unhealthy atmosphere in the house. Garden hose that leaks can be mended to save water, and save also on the garden hose.

If radiator valves have been leaking a bit this is the time to call in a heating contractor or steam fitter—before the furnishings are damaged.

Word has reached us that American manufacturers of plumbing equipment are meeting emergencies, and solving them. Research laboratories are busy developing substitute metals for faucets, traps, shower heads, and so on.

Fixtures of Plastic.

Now even faucets and drains as well as soap dishes, towel bars, and lavatory legs are being redesigned in modern plastic. All this substitution of noncritical materials into plumbing fittings and fixtures means that replacement of important sanitary fixtures will be possible, when necessary. And home owners who accept these substitutes are doing their part toward speeding war efforts—and winning the war—as well as protecting the comfort and health of their families.

Jewish Congress Women.

Members of the Logan Square district of the Chicago Women's division, American Jewish congress, will attend a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the community cultural center, 3117 Logan boulevard. Chairman of the district is Mrs. Harry Perlmutter.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Gerberding, 194 Maple avenue, Elmhurst, celebrated their golden wedding recently with an open house. Mr. Gerberding was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1863, and came to the United States July 2, 1881. Mrs. Gerberding also was from Hanover, having been born in 1870, and came to this country in 1891. For 14 years they resided on the near west side. For 16 years Mr. Gerberding was in business in Austin, and during the last 20 years they have made their home in Elmhurst.

They have three children, Mrs. M. F. Michelson of 194 Maple avenue, Elmhurst; Mrs. Elsie Boyte of 5941 North avenue, Chicago, and Mrs. Fred Wilke of 317 Ridgeland avenue, Elmhurst. There are four grandchildren.

FIRM MUSCLES ARE A HABIT AT OAK PARK HIGH

Every Student Takes Part in Daily Program.

Many students of Oak Park-River Forest Township High school will enter the armed forces of the United States during the next year. Then they will begin to realize the benefits of the intensive physical education program of their four years' schooling. The five periods of calisthenics and gym work each week, the after-school hours spent in football, basketball, tennis, and swimming—all those have served to toughen the boys. Few of them will be plagued by the muscular fatigue and short endurance common to some rookies.

"We believe that the fundamental of all success is a strong body and good health," declares Dr. Eugene Youngert, superintendent of the high school. "This is especially important, in time of war, to the young men just leaving school. Some of them will be going to college for intensive courses which require longer hours in class, and call for greater endurance. Others will go directly to the army, the navy, or the marines. Each must have muscular stamina and coördination, whether his job will be flying a plane, drilling with a bayonet, or manning a gun on shipboard."

Find Program Meets Needs.

The program at Oak Park-River Forest High school hasn't been changed since the war began—Head Coach Glenn T. Holmes and his staff discovered that wasn't necessary. The boys were learning the fundamental things which they could adapt to their advantage no matter what branch of the service they entered.

The students were learning to run with speed and ease, to hurdle so that they could clear low obstacles, to swim well enough that they might save themselves in an emergency, to tumble and fall and jump from a height in a fashion to save themselves injury. To a man they were learning each sport on the curriculum well enough so that they were past the "dub" stage.

Learn to Act Together.

The boys get lots of training in drill work. Marching, mass calisthenics, pyramid drills, demonstrations on the horizontal bars, all of these have served to train them to respond rapidly to orders, to accustom themselves to move with others.

The more rigorous exercises are given only to the boys who are physically able to take them. Before the school year begins, each boy is given an examination by a physician, and is typed according to the amount of exercise he may take. Boys with flat feet form a special class in corrective exercises.

But every student at Oak Park-River Forest High school takes some form of physical training each day. And the average boy gets a four year toughening-up which will benefit him in any activity.

CHOOSE EMBLEM OF AIR SQUADRON FROM DU PAGE

An emblem for the Du Page county naval air squadron has been selected from the design submitted by Miss Patsy Flint of Lombard in a county-wide contest. It will be worn on a pin by members of the squadron and will appear on the squadron planes.

The winning design shows three white eagles in close formation, their wings forming "V's" flying across a circular field encircled by lines of blue and gold. Miss Flint and Phil Hadley, as winners of the name and emblem contest, respectively, will receive "navy wings" bearing the emblem, and in addition will become honorary members of the squadron.

The name "White Eagle" for the squadron was selected in an earlier county-wide essay contest. Nearly 200 designs were submitted in the emblem contest. Judges were Herbert Penfield, Evanston; Ensign Robert J. Doyle, Chicago, and W. A. Homann of the Harrison Art institute, Chicago.

Follows Tradition

Quido Petru is the third generation of his family to serve as organist and choir director at St. Procopius church, 1641 Allport street. His grandfather, John Petru, founded the choir in 1876 and his son, John, is studying to take the post of organist when the time comes for his retirement.

Recalls Submarines 33 Years Ago

Fred Lindley (left) recalls with merriment his navy experience with submarines when this type of vessel was in its infancy. His nephew, John Schuster, now at Great Lakes, enjoys the yarns that have to do with the early days of undersea warfare. Mr. Lindley, a resident of Berwyn, is a teacher in Morton High school.

CHURCH HAS HAD PETRU ON ORGAN BENCH 66 YEARS

Fourth Generation Now Trains for Post.

ther played the music for the services.

The behind the scenes mechanism of this early organ was not the only thing which made it more difficult to play than modern instruments, Mr. Petru recalls. The keyboard demanded considerably more strength, with a double pressure of each key necessary before a tone could be obtained. Flexing his own strong fingers, Petru admits that he can instantly recognize an organist who has learned to play on one of the old type organs, simply by the strength in each finger.

Organ a Big Sacrifice.

The present organ, which is obviously Petru's pride and joy, was obtained in 1930 after a monumental effort by the choir, whose campaign for contributions succeeded during the most financially trying times the parish has ever known. But now the organ is a part of the church and a part of Quido Petru, who boasts of its 1,300 pipes, its 27 stops and double keyboard almost as if he had thought of them himself.

Mr. Petru has a fine scorn for any player whose skill is only technical. "It has to be born in you, that love for playing," he declares. He feels a true musician should be able to play a number of instruments instead of confining himself to one medium.

One of the greatest rôles music plays, Mr. Petru believes, is the background for worship. When he seats himself at the console he seldom has music on the rack. Instead he plays from memory or improvises music to fit the mood of the service.

Music in His Head.

After the service perhaps one of the worshipers will remark: "That was a beautiful 'Ave Maria' you played, Quido! Where did you find it?"

"In my head," Petru will reply—and hurry toward home to jot down the melody of that "Ave Maria," so he can play it again when the occasion arises.

One Petru "Ave Maria" has been published and several popular pieces are scheduled to come out soon from a Chicago house. Each year Petru composes the music for the St. Procopius minstrel shows. A widower, he makes his home in Park Ridge with his mother, his son, John, 14, and his daughter, Rosemary, 19.

AUSTIN CONCERT WILL BE GIVEN BY ORCHESTRA

The second concert of the Austin Symphony orchestra season will be given at 8:15 o'clock Friday evening in the Austin Town Hall auditorium, Central avenue and Lake street. The orchestra will be under direction of Paul Vernon.

Organized on an experimental basis as a community cultural venture three years ago by Mr. Vernon, the orchestra at first grew only gradually. Then it developed more rapidly, until there are now 65 members drawn from all occupations.

Soloist for Friday's concert will be Frederick Braucher, violinist. He will offer the Paganini Concerto. Mr. Braucher is a graduate of Austin High school, has played with the Chicago Civic Opera and National Broadcasting Company Symphony, and is now a member of the faculty of the Austin Academy of Fine Arts.

MARMION DADS ARE GUESTS AT SCHOOL TODAY

Dads of Marmion Military academy cadets will take over the Aurora campus this afternoon as the annual Marmion day is observed with special military programs, scientific demonstrations, and dramatic productions. The grounds will be open to the public at 2 o'clock.

The dads will act as guides for parents of prospective cadets who wish to inspect the classrooms, laboratories, and other service rooms where the cadets carry on their daily activities. Demonstrations will be conducted by students of chemistry and physics. Members of the Cadet Dramatic club will present a one act play.

A military inspection and parade under supervision of Lieut. Col. Lester H. Barnhill, academy superintendent, will conclude the program.

PIONEER IN SUB SERVICE RECALLS 'TIN FISH' OF 1909

of the submarines of that day the vessels were loaded with floating cranes on a collier and carried to Pacific waters thru the Suez canal. The boats were harbored at Cavite, U. S. navy base now in Japanese hands.

Once in the Philippines, Lindley saw plenty of undersea action. Because of his mathematical ability he was chosen assistant navigator of the Adder and participated in 30 or 40 dives a month. He was soon advanced to machinist's mate, first class.

His base pay was $80 a month. He received five dollars extra a month for submarine duty, one dollar for each submersion, and one dollar for helmet diving.

Altho sub devices in those days were crude, the crew of the Adder operated the vessel without mishap during the four years of Lindley's enlistment. He recalls only one occasion when he was scared. This was when an inexperienced officer came aboard and took the vessel out for an experimental dive. At the start the sub lost its buoyancy and dropped like a rock. A quick-witted chief gave the command to "blow everything" and managed to bring the vessel to the surface.

Subs of Lindley's days were frail craft, built of three-fourth inch riveted steel. Crews had standing orders not to submerge more than 80 feet because of the danger of pressure crushing the hulls of the vessels.

While Lindley considers submarines a potent force in modern warfare, he believes air power will determine the outcome of the present conflict.

Mr. D. F. McMahon
Manager
Retail Advertising
Chicago Tribune

Dear Mr. McMahon:

There is a good reason why our advertising linage in the Metropolitan sections of the Sunday Tribune reached a 9-year high of 21,077 lines last year -- and why we are currently running a new series of fashion advertisements that should make 1942 an even greater year.

Most of our advertising is for coats, dresses and smart outerwear fashions. Located in the convenient Madison and Crawford area, we serve the great West Side. That we reach practically all our market in the Sunday Tribune is shown by these figures on increases in our apparel departments:

1941 was 27.85% better than 1940
1940 was 29.51% better than 1939

-- and so far in 1942, our business is 50.63% better than 1941. The only thing that is holding us back from making larger gains is lack of space.

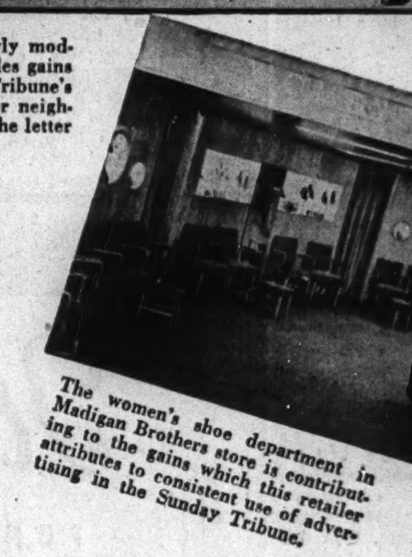
Frankly, your zoned Metropolitan Section advertising is an excellent investment for outlying merchants. We know of nothing that equals it for results and low cost.

Sincerely yours,

J. D. Madigan

MADIGAN BROTHERS

How Madigan Brothers newly modernized store is piling up sales gains with the aid of the Sunday Tribune's low-cost advertising plan for neighborhood retailers is told in the letter above.



The women's shoe department in Madigan Brothers store is contributing to the gains which this retailer attributes to consistent use of advertising in the Sunday Tribune.

WEST SIDE STORE TELLS HOW LOW COST ADVERTISING IN THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE SPURS SALES AND GROWTH

SALES up 29% in 1940; up another 27% in 1941; and for the first three months of this year, 50% better than last year . . . such is the progress reported in the accompanying letter by this well-known west side store which for many years has used the Sunday Tribune's low-cost advertising plan for neighborhood retailers.

This is the testimony of only one of the 726 retailers on all sides of Chicago who used this plan last year to go after more sales and profits.

If you want to build securely for the future, now is the time to get the facts about this low-cost, business-building plan. Chicago's greater industrial activity is widening the distribution of spendable cash in every neighborhood and suburb of Chicago. At rates scaled low enough to permit every retailer to take advantage of Tribune sales power, you can put the Sunday Tribune on the job bringing more customers right from your own trading area.

It costs you nothing to get the facts. Call SUPerior 0100 tomorrow morning and ask for the Metropolitan section advertising department. A representative will be glad to call on you at your convenience with case history evidence showing how others in your line are using this plan to build sales and profits.

LEADERS TO MAP PLANS FOR LILAC SHARING DAYS

Bouquets to Cheer City's Shut-Ins.

When guild chairmen and presidents of 81 garden clubs thruout Chicagoland meet Wednesday noon to complete their plans for the 14th annual "Share the Lilacs" campaign, their efforts might well be compared to modern wartime production methods.

For it is their responsibility to see that fragrant lilacs by the thousands of bouquets find their way from farms, estates, and homes, large or small, in the suburbs, to the patients and shut-ins of Chicago's hospitals, homes, and orphanages. It is their task to insure that bouquets, cut fresh on Lilac days, arrive at suburban stations for swift transportation to the city. How well they have organized this work is seen in the record — more than 100,000 bouquets distributed last year among 25,000 individuals.

See Bumper Crop.

The women will represent garden clubs affiliated with the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, which coöperates each year with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in bringing a touch of spring to the city's shut-ins.

Their meeting will be held at noon at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. and working plans will be drafted to help speed the delivery of the fragrant blooms from the suburbs to the hospitals and institutions in the city. This year, with the lilac bushes promising another bumper crop, guild officials are hoping to exceed last year's record.

Gathered by Volunteers.

The flowers are gathered by volunteer workers from backyard gardens, parks, estates, and solitary bushes wherever they are found. The guild chairmen supervise the work of getting the blooms to the railroad stations, where they are delivered freight free to the city terminals. Here the lilacs are picked up by Tribune trucks and sped to the various hospitals.

Response to the lilac campaign last year was so great that 158 institutions were given bouquets of the fragrant flowers. The days on which lilacs will be distributed this year have not yet been determined. When guild officials feel that the blooms in all the suburbs have reached their peak, the distribution days will be announced.

Listed below are south and southwest side garden clubs, their presidents and guild chairmen.

Jobless Mexican Indian Finds Success as Art Metal Worker

In 1933 Jesus Torres, of Aztec Indian descent, was among many Chicago unemployed, using his idle time by whimsically pounding decorative objects out of ordinary tin cans. Today he is recognized as an outstanding metal worker, and has been asked to lecture at the Art Institute. Railroads have used his grotesque, but beautiful patterns for the motif in club cars, and whole night clubs have been fashioned around his copper lamps.

Torres, having no art training, draws on instincts a thousand years old—the same that built the Mayan temple of the warriors in ancient times. Charming Miss Mary Jane Anderson, 5132 Blackstone avenue, draws on equally ancient feminine instincts in admiring a necklace and bracelets. (Story on page 2.)

"They're beautiful!" exclaim visitors to Torres workshops at 5136 Blackstone avenue. For Torres this is a worthy end to his effort, to see his painstaking work gracing the arms of an attractive woman, admired and appreciated. Mrs. Robert J. Cooper, 1105 Hyde Park boulevard, is wearing copper bracelets into which sterling silver has been worked.

"I don't know why I draw them that way," shrugs the Indian artist when questioned about typically fantastic designs. "Just because I like them, I guess," he explains. Others who like them include many of the leading artists in the city and here a neighbor, Mrs. James G. F. Coleman, 5132 Blackstone avenue, admires a plate and ash tray.

Du Sable Sends Many Sons to Armed Forces

Du Sable High school is only seven years old but few Chicago schools can equal its direct contribution of man power to the war effort. So many of its former students have joined the 184th field artillery at Camp Custer, Mich., that it is beginning to resemble a Du Sable alumni association. Three out of every four of the regiment's non-commissioned officers were ROTC cadets at Du Sable, in addition to hundreds of privates and officers.

The 184th is the old and famous 8th Illinois National Guard regiment which trained in the armory at 35th street and Giles avenue. For years it has been made up largely of volunteers from the Du Sable High School area. Many of the boys enlisted in the 8th before they finished their ROTC training. Lieut. Col. Oscar Randall, a veteran of the first World war was a captain in the 8th while he taught mathematics at Du Sable. Now he is lieutenant colonel and executive officer of the 184th.

226 Enlist a Year Ago.

When the old 8th became the 184th and was called into active service in January, 1941, a total of 226 Du Sable High school ROTC cadets left school to go with it. Nineteen of them were cadet officers. Commencement was only two weeks away, however, and most of the boys took their examinations before leaving. The unit was given a send-off at the Du Sable auditorium and the ceremonies were enlivened by the regiment's band, which was made up exclusively of Du Sable boys. "It was one of the greatest assemblies we've ever had", Chauncey Willard, Du Sable principal, recalls.

Highest ranking Du Sable boys in the 184th now are First Lieuts. James Parks and James Brooks. Both are with the 795th tank battalion. Lieut. Parks was cadet commander of the Du Sable regiment in 1939 when he also was a sergeant in the 8th regiment. Lieut. Brooks was a cadet captain in high school and later earned a degree at the University of Chicago.

Other Du Sable boys who became officers in the 184th are Second Lieutenants Otis Buchanan, Aldrich Wilson, Charles O'Kelly, Bertram Smith, John Smith, and Warren Allen. Another, Second Lieut. Byron Minor, was a history teacher at DuSable.

Commander Also Band Leader.

Staff Sergt. Ed Stovall of the 184th was Du Sable's first cadet commander in 1935 and the only cadet commander who ever doubled as band leader in the regiment. Sergeants William Deas and William Scott have been sent to the officers, training school at Fort Sill, Okla. They are expected to rejoin their ex-Du Sable classmates after they receive their commissions.

Some of the other Du Sable alumni in the 184th are Staff Sergeants Julius Frazier, Robare Edmonson, and Gar-

Dillner has been acting committeeman since four months ago when the incumbent, Frank G. Ring, was appointed postmaster of Harvey. Ring, who wielded considerable local political influence, picked Dillner for the post.

TIN CAN EMERGES AS WORK OF ART AFTER POUNDING

Indian Workman Gains Fame for Creations.

Jesus Torres, formerly a railroad workman, picked up a tin can one idle afternoon in 1933 and felt the urge to pound and beat it into a lamp shade. The results of that impetuosity started him on a career that has led to the lecture rostrum at the Art institute and into large commissions to decorate private clubs, railroad cars, and homes of art connoisseurs.

Even today, pounding in his basement workshop at 5136 Blackstone avenue, Torres clings to simple tools and simple materials. A hammer or two, a few short pieces of pipe, a handful of chisels—these are the tools he uses to take a sheet of copper and hammer it into a museum piece. Like many another artist, Torres has little interest in money. He has been known to give his work away if he thought it was appreciated.

Designs of Indian Art.

Fireplace screens, decorative dishes, bracelets, ash trays, and lamps bearing the strange, massive designs of the Indian art take shape under his intuitive punching. Sometimes he will mark the pattern ahead of time, more often he will formulate the design as he punches it in the metal. Curiously, he left his home in Silao near Mexico City when only a boy, and the traditional symbols he uses in his work come from instinct rather than memory.

"Torres' art is held in such high esteem that we invited him to display his work at the Art institute and to give a lecture here," says George Buehr, associate membership lecturer at the institute. "Many of our members have purchased his work for their homes, and I know that several large concerns have been eager to have him do work in interior design for them."

Turns to Silver.

Modest to the point of anonymity, the Indian metal worker is happy to spend the day with his hammer and his chisel, seeking new and pleasing patterns, experimenting with new effects secured by a minor change in tools. Lately he has been turning more to silver, combining it with copper to secure a two-tone result.

"People ask me if the animals and birds I use in designs are the ones I see on the street. But I don't draw them like I see them—that would not be pleasing. I draw them the way they look best to me," Torres answers questions regarding the grotesque figures he executes in the metal.

Working with an instinct for symmetry, his figures, tho in the massive style of Indian art, have both grace and balance. If the figure being pounded on a fireplace screen is a dog with bared fangs, the mouth will be huge, teeth in large, even rows, and the ears will be tremendous, curling up in fantastic corkscrews. The figure is beaten into the metal until a bas relief effect is secured.

"In the village where I lived as a boy," Torres explains, "there were weavers, pottery makers, and other craftsmen whom the children used to gather around and watch and admire. I think of them when I work now."

Problem for Torres today is the lack of copper and aluminum which he uses in his work. Apologetically, he explains that the little bit of metal he has on hand now is only scraps and that the government can't use it. He has a feeling that he should give it to the defense program, tho every one has assured him that they can't make much use of his meager supply.

"I will turn to wood and pottery until the war is over," Torres says philosophically. "I like metal best, but I enjoy carving wooden furniture and working in pottery, and I can make a living doing that."

This new song for World War II must be serious, dignified, inspiring, and preferably in march time, say the sponsors. The prize will be separated into two portions—$100 for the song and $100 for the music. Persons preferring to do so may submit only one or the other.

Entries are to be sent to The Order of Bookfellows, Patriotic Song Contest, 4917 Blackstone avenue. Manuscripts to be returned must have sufficient postage.

BETH HAMEDROSH WILL MARK 80TH YEAR TOMORROW

Congregation Beth Hamedrosh, often considered the "mother" of orthodox Jewry in Chicago, will celebrate its 80th anniversary with a banquet at the Hamilton hotel, 18 South Dearborn street, tomorrow evening. Rabbi Elazer R. Muskin is religious head of the congregation, and Benjamin Gold, 5216 Ingleside avenue, is president.

The first home of the congregation was at what was then 194 Pacific avenue. After several progressive moves, it now occupies a handsome synagogue at 5345 Greenwood avenue. Thru its effort the first Hebrew schools on the south side were initiated, and it has been active in supporting the Marks Nathan Orphan home. It was the first congregation to be inscribed in the golden book of the Jewish National fund.

The sisterhood of Congregation Rodfei Zedek, 1022 East 54th place, will meet at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow for a dessert luncheon. A lyric trio composed of Lilyan Sachs, Irene Stolofsky, and Dorothy Linder will present entertainment. Mrs. Maurice Goldblatt is president.

Officers of this congregation were recently reëlected. New directors chosen were Louis Englestein, Barney S. Berman, Arthur Feigen, and Harry Shlensky.

The women's division of the Jewish Community center of Hyde Park will meet at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow evening at the center, 5227 Blackstone avenue. Mrs. Billie Hyman will review "The Moon Is Down," by John Steinbeck.

Rabbi Jacob Weinstein of K. A. M. temple; Arthur J. Goldberg, attorney; Eli Bortnicker, and Reuben K. Zetland are among south side residents who will participate in an all-day conference on "Palestine in War and Peace," sponsored by the League for Labor Palestine next Sunday at the Skyline Athletic club, 188 West Randolph street.

A musical salute to our South American neighbors will be a feature of W-G-N's America Loves a Melody program to be aired from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Marion Claire, Attilio Baggiore, and Bruce Foote will be the singing stars.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

The good neighbor salute will be in the form of a Spanish-American medley of "Valencia" featuring the orchestra and chorus, "Hat Dance" by the orchestra, "La Golondrina" by Miss Claire and orchestra, and "Granada" by Baggiore, the chorus, and orchestra.

Miss Claire will be heard in two solo selections: "Chinese Lullaby" from Bowers' "East Is West" and Romberg's "One Kiss" from "New Moon." Mr. Baggiore will sing Tosti's "Parted." Mr. Foote's solo will be Del Riego's "Homing."

The orchestra will be heard playing "On the Trail" from Groffe's "Grand Canyon Suite" and Morton Gould's arrangement of the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers."

A highlight of the program will be a cello solo of "Liebestraum" by Adolf Hoffman. The entire company will join in Edward's "By the Bend of the River" and in a "Show Boat" medley made up of "Why Do I Love You," "Only Make Believe," and "Old Man River."

The orchestra will be under the direction of Henry Weber and the chorus will be conducted by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor is the producer.

Miss Ames will be heard in "Paris in the Spring" and "I'll See You Again." The orchestra will play "Thank Your Lucky Stars and Stripes," "Scrub Me, Mama," "It Had to Be You," and a Victor Herbert medley consisting of "Kiss in the Dark," "Indian Summer," and "On Parade."

Heather Tweed is mistress of ceremonies on the program.

'A Name for War' Topic of N. U. Reviewing Stand

GOV. GREEN WILL ACT ON W-G-N'S 'RAMPARTS' HOUR

Illinois Reserve Militia to Be Saluted.

Gov. Dwight H. Green will become a radio actor when he joins the cast of "Americans at the Ramparts" on W-G-N at 7 p. m. next Thursday. Gov. Green will be the narrator for a half hour musical dramatic salute to the Illinois Reserve Militia on this broadcast.

Gov. Green is the commander in chief of the state militia and a former World war aviator. His part in the Ramparts program will be to set the scenes for the dramatic sketches that will tell of the development of the militia which has been rated by the war department as "one of the best in the country."

Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, adjutant general of the militia, will also play an important part in the broadcast. Gen. Boyle will close the show with a short speech telling of the new enlistment plans for the militia. A full dramatic cast will be featured on the program as well as the W-G-N chorus and orchestra under the direction of Robert Trendler.

More than 500 officers and men from Illinois Reserve Militia companies all over the state will attend the broadcast. The militiamen will march up Michigan avenue to the W-G-N studios just before the program goes on the air. They will be led by band units from the various companies. Gen. Boyle and other high ranking officers of the militia will join in the parade. At 53 armories all over the state, members of the state militia and their families will gather to hear the W-G-N broadcast.

Gov. Green will salute the militia as the "fourth service" and officers of the other three fighting services will be in the audience. The program will be produced by Morrison Wood from a script by Sidney Gerson and Art Noyes.

BUILD LAST SETS APR. 22; PLAN TO REVIVE OLD ONES

Rush to Buy Portables for Armed Forces.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

By order of the War Production board all manufacturers of radio sets for civilian use will cease Wednesday night, April 22. Thereupon, all radio manufacturers will devote their full resources to building communications and related equipment for war use. Some companies are already 100 per cent converted.

The radio industry, which last year built about $500,000,000 worth of receivers, this year is committed to building two billion dollars worth of war equipment.

American homes at the end of the year were supplied with some 57 million receiving sets. There were 30 million homes with sets; some 11 million had more than one set. During 1942 the total number of sets may have been boosted to approximately 60 million.

Sales Extremely Brisk.

How many receivers will be available for distribution after April 22 is a matter of conjecture. Some dealers laid in large stocks. The supply among many more is already low. Sales have been extremely lively ever since it was made known that production was to cease.

Stocks of many models are already badly depleted. In some lines of portables the supply is completely exhausted. Many thousands of portables or other small models have been snapped up by men in the armed forces or by friends and relatives as gifts for them.

Letters in increasing numbers from soldiers and sailors stationed abroad indicate that radios represent one of the most important links with home. From distant island outposts have come urgent pleas for short wave sets. A marine on Johnston Island in the mid-Pacific recently wrote: "It is impossible to live here without a radio."

Plan to Rebuild Old Sets.

That dealers are convinced there will be no more new radios for the duration after the present stock is exhausted is indicated by the fact that all used radios taken as trade-ins are being carefully stored. Many radio men are making plans to repair and rebuild old sets and sell them later when the new sets are all gone.

Many sets in good condition are turned in for new receivers, especially for the combination models with FM and phonograph. Often the replacement of a tube or two or a minor part will put trade-in sets in condition for years more of service.

Beg Your Pardon.

In an article printed recently on the radio page of THE TRIBUNE, various suggestions for making radio receivers last longer, as relayed by the consumer division of the Office of Price Information, were included.

One of these suggestions called for connecting a ground wire to sets that are noisy. It was suggested that a wire be run from the ground post to a water or radiator pipe.

Several engineers say that this suggestion is not applicable to some types of so-called universal AC-DC sets. Persons who have these universal type receivers should follow carefully instructions received with such sets and should not proceed otherwise without consulting an expert service man. With some types of such sets serious damage may be caused to the set by linking a ground wire to the chassis, engineers say.

On Citizens of Tomorrow

When Bowen High school goes on the air at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast from W-G-N, this quartet will lead the 600 Bowen students in school cheers. The program was transcribed last Wednesday in the W-G-N studios for broadcast today.

Principal William P. Hearne of Bowen will be the principal speaker today on the Citizens of Tomorrow program, one of a series presenting Chicagoland high schools. It is sponsored by The Chicago Tribune.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 20.

Pansies should be starting to bloom nicely. Altho they will do well in any rich, light soil, a sandy, loamy, deep soil is preferable. The best location is one that is not emburdened with trees or full sun. By adding leaf mold, humus, or peat moss a fine stand can be obtained.

The withered flowers must be removed to prevent seedage or the plants will cease flowering. The finest varieties can be propagated from cuttings, by layering or from seed.

It is lawn making time but a considerable number of home gardeners delay the work until hot weather at which time the weeds grow faster than grass.

Tuesday, April 21.

You can have a lawn that is free from weeds if you will take care of the lawn in such a manner that a thick mat of grass is established. Weeds cannot grow under such conditions. Notice how few there are when grass is high and thick—even the dandelions fail to develop as they do where the grass is sparse.

But the ground must be well enriched, which means applying sufficient plant food. Use a complete balanced plant food at the rate of 4 pounds per 100 square feet of area.

Wednesday, April 22.

Vegetable gardeners like to grow a new variety or two to add interest to their garden. The following are among the all-America awards for 1942, but they should be tried out before they are planted extensively on unknown soils. A silver medal was awarded for the pole snap bean "Decatur." It is said to be resistant to rust and is early and produces abundantly pods 6 to 8 inches long, and of fine quality.

The new bush bean "Medal Refugee" also is resistant to bean mosaic and yields a fine pod and is excellent for green beans; good for canning and home use, 85 days.

Thursday, April 23.

There are few gardeners who have not had their snowball plants attacked by the aphid and wonder how to control it. Just as the buds start and again every few days spray with a delayed dormant oil spray, such as nicotine sulphate and soap or some other recommended spray. If necessary dust with nicotine or rotenone dust for it is so fine it can enter thru the openings in the curled leaves.

Friday, April 24.

Prune evergreens. Stake the central stem if a new straight stem is needed. Pinch off the short terminals of the side growths to obtain a stock growth on pines and firs. Transplant magnolias, sassafras, and other trees with soft roots in spring, altho most of our native trees can be planted as well in autumn.

The short growths of the forsythias can be used as propagating materials if desired. Spade among shrubs and give them an application of plant food. Fertilize evergreens by applying rotted stable manure or a well balanced commercial plant food.

Saturday, April 25.

Harden off tender plants like the tomato, pepper, eggplant, geranium, and others for a period of about 10 days before planting. Watch weather reports and gauge the time accordingly. On clear nights it is likely to freeze; on cloudy nights it is not so likely to freeze; plants in low land will more likely freeze than those planted on high ground.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

BUILDING BOARD MAKES EASY JOB OF MODERNIZING

Some Types Are Finished in the Factory.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Houses, like tires and clothes and cars and equipment, wear out in course of time and for this reason, with warring against deterioriation and waste a patriotic part of every home program, it is vitally important to keep the houses we have in as good condition as possible.

Many materials needed for home repair are available and substitutes and plastics are on the market in no small quantity for those materials needed by the goverment for war uses.

Especially worthwhile right now, if renovation and repair is necessary, is the inclusion of insulation in the repair program.

Some Are Finished.

Insulation boards are to be had in a host of types.

For the walls and ceilings of practically any room in your house there are boards which come finished and ready to install without any further decoration; there are those which come unfinished, to be painted or papered, and there are those which come primed and ready for the final coat of paint.

There are the building boards in large sheets for easy coverage of large areas. There are rectangular units or small square units called tile, especially adapted for ceilings, and there are the narrow units known as planks that come in varying widths and can be used in many combinations to make attractive wall designs.

Will Deaden Sound.

If you are converting some unused space to an extra room these insulating boards that build, insulate, and decorate are easy to install and also economical. These same boards also contribute somewhat to the lessening of sound thru walls and ceilings.

Materials are obtainable for conversion of unused attic space into living quarters and a high priority rate is given to this type of modernization. Modern panel materials do this work quickly: Those thick, rigid panels of fiber board which come as wide as 4 feet and as long as 16 feet are presized at the factory so that they require only one coat of paint.

And now is the time to stop leaks of all kinds around the house. The drip drip of leaky faucets and gas leaks are wasteful and dangerous too. Roof leaks create an unhealthy atmosphere in the house. Garden hose that leaks can be mended to save water, and save also on the garden hose.

War Prevents Twins' Double Wedding

Mrs. Joseph E. Fitzgerald is pictured here cutting her wedding cake while her twin sister, Elayne Crilly, looks on. Naval Lieut. and Mrs. Fitzgerald were married a week ago at St. Felicitas church in what was to have been a double wedding ceremony. Elayne will be married shortly to John A. Fitzgerald, no relation of her sister's bridegroom. Because John, who is also in the navy, was unable to get a leave, the plans were changed and Elayne's wedding postponed. Lieut. Fitzgerald is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fitzgerald of 1436 East 65th street and John Fitzgerald is the son of Mrs. Frank Fitzgerald, 6822 Cornell avenue. Rosemary and Elayne are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Crilly of 7922 Dorchester avenue.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH BOARDS WILL BE FETED AT DINNER

The Rev. J. Richard Drees.

Newly elected members of the boards of elders, deacons, and trustees of the First Presbyterian church, 64th street and Kimbark avenue, will be honored at a dinner in John Knox hall of the church Wednesday morning. The Rev. J. Richard Drees of the Hyde Park Methodist church will be the speaker. Other guests will include the retiring members of the three boards. Formal installation of the new officers will take place next Sunday morning at the regular church services.

Elim Lutheran Pageant.

Daughters of Elim of Elim Lutheran church, 131st street and Prospect avenue, will present a pageant of old pictures and styles at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. It will be entitled "The Elim Family Album." Mrs. Harold Peterson is in charge of the program.

LIGHT BALLOTING BRINGS WINS TO PARTY REGULARS

Church Only Nominee to Beat Organization.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

The lightest primary balloting in several years was the chief factor in bringing congress nominations to nearly all the regular organization in the 10 congressional districts of Cook and Lake counties. Not since 1930 have so few persons voted in a congressional election, according to a comparison of the nearly complete 1942 results compared with those of other years.

The one exception to the rule of regular organization victories was the G. O. P. primary in the 10th district, which includes part of Cook and all of Lake county [districts 1 to 9 are in Cook county]. Here former Congressman Ralph E. Church, in an intense personal campaign, overcame the strong organization backing given Congressman George A. Paddock to win by nearly 7,000 votes.

Regulars Win the Others.

In every other case where there were contests the regularly supported candidates won by overwhelming margins. Indorsements were given in every case but the Republican primary in the 8th district.

Here is the tabulation of the nearly complete unofficial primary returns in the county, the asterisks [*] indicating incumbents. The table shows the total number of precincts in each district and the number missing from the returns for each party.

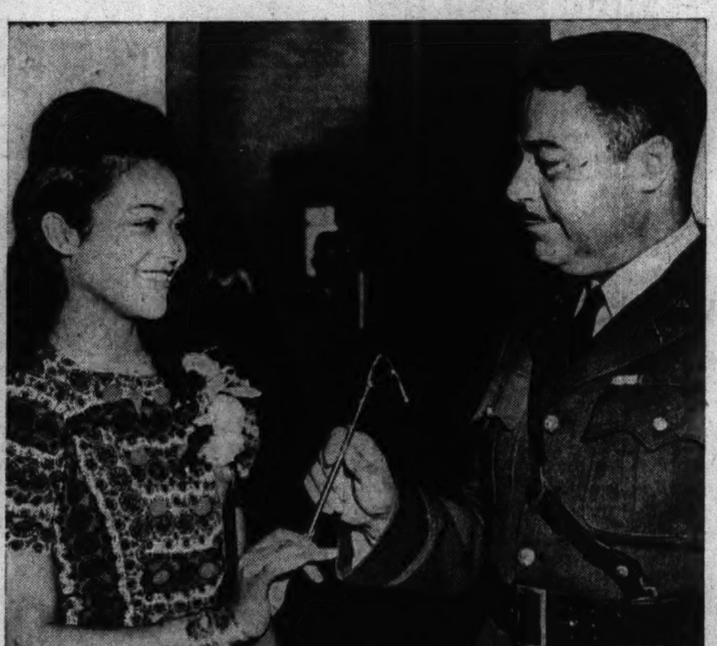
The Turners celebrated their 50th anniversary in 1940. The organization is a social and athletic group. The auxiliary is a social unit, which contributes financial support to the Turners' program. It is 40 years old.

ROTC Studies Benefit Army



When Du Sable High school's students and teachers departed with the 184th field artillery Mardelle Rogers, a student council representative, presented a letter opener in the form of a miniature sword to Lieut. Col. Oscar Randall, executive officer. Col. Randall was a mathematics teacher at Du Sable before being called into active service. Miss Rogers, who has since been graduated from Du Sable, is known as "the sweetheart of the Second Battalion" of the 184th, which is training at Camp Custer, Mich.

Like many of his fellow ROTC cadets, Lieut. Col. Leonard Beatty, present cadet commander of the Du-Sable ROTC, intends to enlist in the army after his graduation in June. He hopes to attend an officers school. Mr. Willard calls him "some of the best soldier material I've ever seen."

James W. Parks, former cadet commander at Du Sable, is a first lieutenant in the 184th field artillery at Camp Custer, Mich. He was graduated in 1939.

316 Now in ROTC Unit.

The unit currently has 316 cadets, 260 of whom are in uniform. Sergt. Claude Shelton, the corps' military instructor, says he's not surprised at the number of good soldiers the school has produced. He has taught ROTC in Chicago schools for three years.

"There's no comparison between this and other schools as far as the military viewpoint is concerned", he explains. "These boys have what it takes to make good cadets: they're always willing to accept instructions and to assume responsibility. We have no recruiting problems here, either. This semester I had to turn away 65 boys because of lack of room. Also they're prouder of their uniforms than any cadets I've ever seen."

The Du Sable ROTC band has an equally fine reputation. It was adjudged the "best marching band" in the ROTC band contest in 1936, the last time the competition was held.

CALUMET CITY GIRL, ARMY NURSE, WRITES FROM AUSTRALIA POST

An old country house has been turned into a base hospital for American expeditionary forces in Australia, according to a letter from Lieut. Olive Liesenfelt who is stationed there as a nurse. The letter was received by her mother, Mrs. Theresa Liesenfelt, 420 Wilson avenue, Calumet City, last week.

Olive Liesenfelt.

"We are living in cabins in charming gardens around the mansion," the Calumet girl wrote her mother. "It's good to be safe and sound in this beautiful Australian city." The name of the city could not be mentioned under censorship rules.

Lieut. Liesenfelt is with the ninth stationary hospital unit, having enlisted in the army nurses corps in February, 1940. She spent five months at Camp Grant, and then was on maneuvers in the south for two months before leaving for Australia. This is the first message received from Lieut. Liesenfelt since she left the country. She is a graduate of St. Anthony De Padua hospital and of St. Victor's High school in Calumet City.

EXPECT TO PAVE CENTER STRIP OF HAMMOND ROAD

Seek Signal Changes in Lake County.

Indianapolis boulevard in Hammond will have the unpaved center strip—where street car tracks have been removed—paved in the near future if war restrictions do not interfere, it was reported by the state highway commission at a meeting of the Lake county area council of the Chicago Motor club.

An island to separate opposing traffic streams will be part of the project. The portion of the boulevard concerned extends from Five Corners to the Illinois state line—a mile and a half.

Plan Signal Change.

The commission also reported plans to change the traffic signals at the intersection of State street and Calumet avenue in Hammond. The signal at the northwest corner will be placed on an island in line with State street, allowing a right turn lane in back of the signal.

A. Gordon Taylor, district traffic engineer for Indiana, told the council that plans are complete for installation of traffic actuated signals at the intersection of Ridge and Grant roads in Gary, and they had been forwarded to the Nickel Plate railroad. When the railroad gives approval, work is expected to start.

Ask 30 Mile Speed Limit.

The council's request for a 30 mile an hour speed limit on Ridge road in the vicinity of Wicker Park in Highland is being considered by the state highway commission. Hallie Myers, state traffic engineer, said difficulty at this location is caused by improper location of traffic signals at the intersection of State Route 152 and U. S. 6 and U. S. 41. Relocation of the signals at these intersections is on the state's program.

Representatives of the town of Highland reported that "slow, dangerous intersection" signs requested by the council had been erected on State Route 912 before the intersection with U. S. 6, but a relocation of one of the signs is contemplated.

Gale Roberson, 1112 Elmwood avenue, Wilmette, is president of the club.

LEADERS TO DRAFT LILAC DAY PLANS

FOREMAN HIGH HONORS ALUMNI SERVING IN WAR

Inscribe 150 Heroes' Names on Plaque.

BY RICHARD ORR.

Foreman High school alumni who serve in Uncle Sam's fighting forces are being honored with the inscription of their names on a service plaque in the foyer of the school. Dedicated "to those Foreman students who on land, on sea, and in the air, are helping to preserve democracy, freedom, and the American way of life," the plaque reminds students of the sacrifices their former classmates are making to preserve the sacred American ideal of freedom.

One hundred fifty alumni already serving their country were so honored in a recent dedication of the plaque, presented to the school by the classes of 1942.

The name of each former graduate, when he enters a branch of the service, will be placed upon a golden metal plate attached to the black walnut plaque. There are spaces for 400 names. The memory of those killed in the service of their country will be commemorated wtih the inscription of their names on a sterling silver bar.

Two Killed in Action.

Two of the 150 men whose names are now on the plaque have been reported killed in action. They are Robert Erskine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Erskine, 4825 Addison street, and Herbert Dreesbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dreesbach, 1520 North Lorel avenue. Both were serving aboard the U. S. S. Arizona which was bombed during the Jap attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7. They were reported missing after the action and later the official report of their death was received.

Many of the group were former members of the Foreman R. O. T. C. and a number were winners of the Chicago Tribune award for having displayed outstanding qualities as R. O. T. C. cadets.

One of the Chicago Tribune award winners among the group is Charles Czapar, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Czapar, 5307 Montrose avenue. He was a cadet first lieutenant in the R. O. T. C. and last July was admitted to West Point Military academy. He expects to make the army his career. He is a graduate of the class of '38.

Second Lieut. Harry Arthars, another award winner, also plans to make his career in the army. He graduated from Foreman in 1936 and from the University of Illinois last year. Having a reserve commission, he went into the army immediately. The last word his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Arthars, 5301 George street, received from him was from Iceland, where he has been appointed head of a sanitary corps.

Join Polish Air Force.

Graduating from Foreman in 1940, Thaddeus Srutwa, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter C. Srutwa, 5201 Montrose avenue, attended Wright Junior college for a year. He then tried to enlist in the United States army air force but was refused because of his age. Last May he succeeded in getting into the Polish air force in England. A letter which his folks received a few weeks ago told of his becoming a pilot and stated he is "very enthusiastic about it." He is a former R. O. T. C. cadet.

One of Foreman's alumni is now stationed with an aviation corps in Panama. He is Staff Sergt. George J. Zielinski, son of Mrs. Lillian Zielinski, 5001 George street. He was graduated in 1936. A former R. O. T. C. cadet, he enlisted in the army in 1938 and intends to make it his life work.

Sent to Iceland or Ireland.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Johnson, 4911 School street, do not know where their son, Ellsworth F. Johnson, is at present. His last letter, written in February, said he was being sent out upon the Atlantic and they suppose he is either in Iceland or Ireland. He was a Foreman graduate, class of '38, and an ROTC cadet. He has been in the field artillery since last April.

Oldest class represented on the plaque was that of 1934, with three members listed. They are Arnold A. S. Fladoos, Frank M. Giel, and Robert Morris. The six members of the class of '35 are Erwin Boettcher, Edmund R. Borowski, Theodore Lenart, William S. Litawa, Walter Skokowski, and Albert Wohlers.

Large Group from '37.

Class of '37—Robert A. Amundsen, Len Bencine, Warren Biang, Roy Biegakski, Carleton Billingham, Sheldon Carness, Harold Drane, Ralph Drews, Frank Dirckel, Edmund Fatz, Willard Foxvog, Harold Glassman, Robert Corny, Urban Henderson, Raymond Hudak, Arnold Johnson, William H. Village Smithy Regains Importance in Transportation Picture

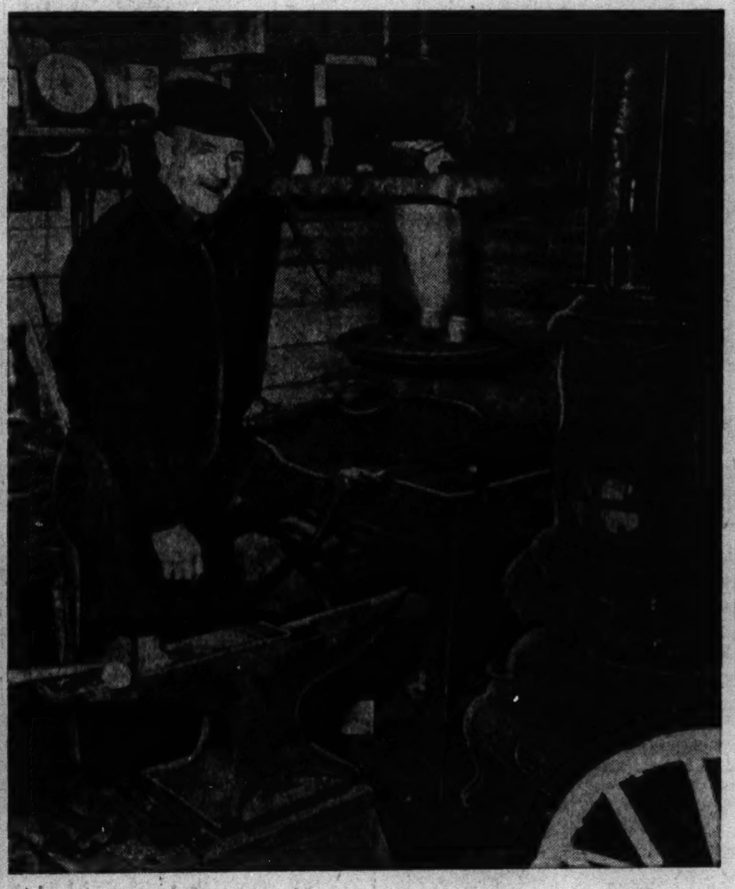
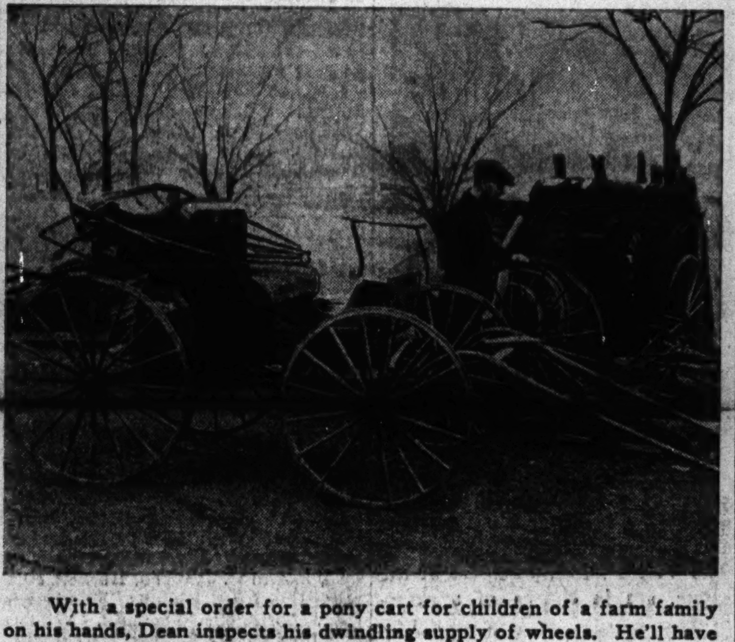
Once a graveyard for broken down carriages, Ben Dean's smithy and repair establishment just northwest of Palatine is again resounding to the incessant clang of the anvil after a 25 year business lull. Dean has discovered that the relics of the gasless '90s are again in demand. The one seated buggy in the foreground is at least 50 years old and the canopied surrey behind it probably dates back to the Civil war, says Dean, but with a little patching here and there both can be put to service.



During the Arlington Park racing meets Dean is kept busy shoeing race horses. The forge, anvil, and stove are the same he started with more than 30 years ago. He was a cavalry sergeant and instructor at Camp Grant during the first World war.



With a special order for a pony cart for children of a farm family on his hands, Dean inspects his dwindling supply of wheels. He'll have it finished before the month is out.

Surrounding Dean's small smithy are scores of buggy wheels, shafts, and axles, for which there has been increasing demand since Dec. 7. The weather beaten structure has been Dean's workshop for the last 25 years.

War Steps Up Trade in the Village Smithy

Take it from a man who should know—an old-time blacksmith, wagon maker, and horse trainer—Dobbin and the canopied surrey are on the way back. Ben Dean's small smithy has stood just outside the village of Palatine since the Northwest highway was a dirt road. He's been in the business for more than 30 years and it never looked rosier.

"They're keeping me busy all day," he says. "Right now I'm rebuilding a pony cart some kids down the road are going to use to ride to school. A lot of old buggies which haven't seen action for years are coming to me in a steady stream for repair and rebuilding."

Same Anvil for 25 years.

Ben's gray frame shop is equipped with the same anvil and bellows he used 25 years ago. Scattered about the room are long iron rods which he shapes into horse shoes, buggy wheels, spokes, shafts, axles with an overflow of paraphernalia piled in the yard outside.

His shoeing business is always pretty fair during the racing season, for the Arlington track nearby can't accommodate all its entries. Last summer he also stabled 24 race horses.

Ben comes from a long line of horse fanciers. His father, whose picture hangs in the smithy, used to train trotters at Arlington. His brother still is a trainer in the east. During the last war he was stationed at Camp Grant as a sergeant and instructor in blacksmithing.

Quick at Horse Shoeing.

He's got it down to a science and can make the shoes and have a horse shod in less than two hours. A buggy is a different story. Ben figures he could turn one out in a month if he had to.

He has a couple for sale right now if anybody's interested. One is a two wheeled one seater, vintage of 1890. The other, a surrey, which in its day cost in the neighborhood of $300, is a de luxe model about 85 years old. Its once proud canopy is tattered as its cushioned upholstery is slightly weather worn, but as Ben says, "It may be a little slow, but, by golly, it's sure and the government hasn't started to ration wagon spokes, yet."

NORTH BRANCH RIVER PROJECT TO START SOON

Continuation of the improvement and development of the north branch of the Chicago river from Lawndale to Kedvale avenues has been approved by the WPA and will be undertaken upon completion of the original project which extends from the North Shore channel to Lawndale avenue.

The work includes removal of debris and trees, grading of river banks, installation of a V shape concrete river bottom, setting piles and filling dykes, and construction of foundations under bridges and aprons. The projects will be completed by the WPA at a cost of $174,000 of which the city as sponsor will pay $44,000.

The improvement has been urged for several years by members of the North Park Property Owners' association with the coöperation of Ald. Joseph Ross [40th] and Chris Jensen, ward committeeman. Directing the association's efforts have been C. H. Taylor, past president, and Daniel R. Connell, past chairman of the group's improvement committee. The project is expected to facilitate drainage, prevent flooding, and eliminate stagnant pools during dry seasons.

Family Awaits News of Dad in Philippines

(Picture on page 5.)

In a small apartment in the rear at 2744 North Fairfield avenue a little family hopefully scans the papers each day for news of Uncle Sam's fighting forces in the Philippines. On the wall of the kitchen of the home is pinned a cablegram dated "Cebu, April 7," and reads "Happy Easter kisses yourself and children. Reply by R. C. A. Don't worry. Love, William Ellis."

Lieut. William J. Ellis Jr.
[Noblesa photo.]

The family is that of First Lieut. William J. Ellis Jr., attached to the quartermaster corps of the United States army somewhere in the Philippines. Since his Easter cablegram from Cebu, received here only a few days ago, the Japs have been reported landing at several points on the island. His wife, Evelyn, and their three daughters, Marlene, 10; Kristin, 4, and Adrienne, 2, are wondering what is happening to him.

Returned Here 2 Years Ago.

The Ellises were residents of Quezon City near Manila from 1930 until two years ago, when Mrs. Ellis returned to Chicago to visit her mother, Mrs. Alma Schulz, 4852 North Monticello avenue. Lieut. Ellis, son of an army man, was born at Fort Mills on Corregidor Island. He met his wife in Chicago in 1929, the year he was graduated from Northwestern university, and the following year they were married and made their home in Quezon City, where he became engaged in interisland shipping.

"After I arrived in the United States I received word from my husband each week until shortly after the war broke out," Mrs. Ellis related. "After that I heard no more until two weeks ago a letter arrived telling me he had been on active duty since Dec. 31."

"In the Field on Bataan."

The letter was not postmarked, but Lieut. Ellis had penned at the top of the first page, "In the field on Bataan."

"Bill was just too concerned over the situation in the Pacific to bring us back," Mrs. Ellis said, explaining why she had not returned to the Philippines. "Finally last fall I knew that things were getting worse and wanted to be with him in the event trouble started."

She booked passage on a steamer to leave San Francisco for Honolulu, where she was to take the Philippine Clipper, scheduled to arrive in Manila Dec. 8. Fortunately, her plane reservation was canceled just before she was to set sail. The plane she was to have taken was shelled by the Japs at Wake Island on the morning of Dec. 7, when it was forced to turn back after receiving news of the war.

Thought Manila Safe.

"When we civilians in Manila discussed the possibility of war with Japan," Mrs. Ellis said, "we were far more confident than was good for us. We certainly didn't expect a Jap landing or that Manila would be taken."

She expressed her belief, however, that the fortress on Corregidor Island can withstand the Jap attacks for a long time, adding that "it was common knowledge in Manila that there was a two year supply of food on Corregidor."

Anderson is consumer chairman of the center. Speakers at the rally will be Dean William H. Conley of Wright Junior college, Mrs. Anderson, 2722 North Richmond street, and Mrs. W. J. Weiss, 2953 North Richmond street.

Besides the general offices and class and exhibit room of the center, there is a lounge and gameroom for service men.

81 CLUBS WILL HELP TO CHEER CITY'S SHUT-INS

Luncheon Meeting Is Wednesday.

When guild chairmen and presidents of 81 garden clubs thruout Chicagoland meet Wednesday noon to complete their plans for the 14th annual "Share the Lilacs" campaign, their efforts might well be compared to modern wartime production methods.

For it is their responsibility to see that fragrant lilacs by the thousands of bouquets find their way from farms, estates, and homes, large or small, in the suburbs, to the patients and shut-ins of Chicago's hospitals, homes, and orphanages. It is their task to insure that bouquets, cut fresh on Lilac days, arrive at suburban stations for swift transportation to the city. How well they have organized this work is seen in the record—more than 100,000 bouquets distributed last year among 25,000 individuals.

See Bumper Crop.

The women will represent garden clubs affiliated with the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, which coöperates each year with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in bringing a touch of spring to the city's shut-ins.

Their meeting will be held at noon at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. and working plans will be drafted to help speed the delivery of the fragrant blooms from the suburbs to the hospitals and institutions in the city. This year, with the lilac bushes promising another bumper crop, guild officials are hoping to exceed last year's record.

Gathered by Volunteers.

The flowers are gathered by volunteer workers from backyard gardens, parks, estates, and solitary bushes wherever they are found. The guild chairmen supervise the work of getting the blooms to the railroad stations, where they are delivered freight free to the city terminals. Here the lilacs are picked up by Tribune trucks and sped to the various hospitals.

Response to the lilac campaign last year was so great that 158 institutions were given bouquets of the fragrant flowers. The days on which lilacs will be distributed this year have not yet been determined. When guild officials feel that the blooms in all the suburbs have reached their peak, the distribution days will be announced.

Club presidents and chairmen of the garden clubs on the northwest side who will participate this year in the lilac distribution are the following:

LIGHT BALLOTING BRINGS WINS TO PARTY REGULARS

Church Only Nominee to Beat Organization.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

The lightest primary balloting in several years was the chief factor in bringing congress nominations to nearly all the regular organization in the 10 congressional districts of Cook and Lake counties. Not since 1930 have so few persons voted in a congressional election, according to a comparison of the nearly complete 1942 results compared with those of other years.

The one exception to the rule of regular organization victories was the G. O. P. primary in the 10th district, which includes part of Cook and all of Lake county [districts 1 to 9 are in Cook county]. Here former Congressman Ralph E. Church, in an intense personal campaign, overcame the strong organization backing given Congressman George A. Paddock to win by nearly 7,000 votes.

Regulars Win the Others.

In every other case where there were contests the regularly supported candidates won by overwhelming margins. Indorsements were given in every case but the Republican primary in the 8th district.

Here is the tabulation of the nearly complete unofficial primary returns in the county, the asterisks [*] indicating incumbents. The table shows the total number of precincts in each district and the number missing from the returns for each party.

ARTHUR HAUGAN NAMED BY G. O. P. TO LEYDEN POST

Arthur N. Haugan of River Grove had little difficulty in being reëlected Republican committeeman of Leyden township in last Tuesday's balloting, according to the unofficial returns.

Results from 26 of the 29 precincts in the township showed that Haugan, a real estate man and arbitrator for the state industrial commission, was leading Adolph J. Bochte of Elmwood Park, his only opponent, by a vote of 1,649 to 1,081.

In Hanover township, the incumbent Democratic committeeman, John L. Krog, who lives on route 1 near Elgin, was reëlected. He got 97 votes as compared with 65 for James J. Scheen of Bartlett, the unofficial tally revealed.

Seven candidates have filed nomination petitions for the six posts on the board of Barrington community consolidated school district No. 1, it was announced last week by Superintendent of Schools Noble J. Puffer. The election will be held in the districts in the northwest corner of the county, Saturday, May 2.

PLAN PROGRAMS TO BOOST SALE OF WAR BONDS

Admission Is Purchase of 50 Cent Stamp.

An idea originating recently among a small group of northwest side residents has resulted in plans for a city-wide campaign to stimulate the sale of defense bonds and stamps. The group, which has organized itself into the "Pearl Harbor defense committee," will fire the opening gun in its campaign at 8 o'clock Friday evening in the Thorpe school, Grace street and Austin avenue.

John De Paul.

Says Edward Singer, 4254 Overhill avenue, chairman of the committee, "The sole purpose of our organization is to promote the sale of defense stamps and bonds. Our idea is to put on a series of attractive programs and charge the public a 50 cent defense stamp as admission. It's as simple as that, and we believe we are going to receive enthusiastic response not only on the northwest side but thruout Chicago."

Plans call for the sale of stamps and bonds by auctioning of household articles during the program, as well as thru admission. Persons who buy the admission stamps will be entitled to pocket them, Singer said. He added that a representative from the treasury department would be on hand at each of the shows to collect the money.

"We have enlisted the talents of a large number of musical groups and vaudeville acts of all kinds, both amateur and professional," Singer explained. "Every one is gladly donating his services, including members of the committee."

John De Paul, 5709 Irving Park road, is in charge of securing talent for the shows. The group expects to stage at least one show a month in various communities. Members of the committee include Albert Geis, George Taylor, Anthony Zervic, Imre Molnar, Charles Merritt, Stanley Chrop, and George Christensen.

Park District Legion Post Auxiliary to Give Party

The auxiliary of Chicago Park District American Legion post will hold a card party Friday night at Napoleon hall, 3953 Harrison street. Proceeds will be used for service work. All Legionnaires and their friends are invited. Mrs. Laura R. Baines, 4233 Jackson boulevard, is chairman.

Wed to Soldier

The wedding of Miss Gladys Watt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watt, 5141 George street, to Herbert K. Pumford took place recently in St. Stephen's Episcopal church. The bridegroom, son of Abraham Pumford of England, is serving in the United States army and is stationed in North Carolina.

RED CROSS OPENS DRIVE FOR LINEN IN ALBANY PARK

A square of linen 7 inches by 7 inches is the smallest piece the Red Cross in Albany Park will accept for its clean linens drive. Pieces of that size are welcome, however. Only clean linen will be accepted, as the pieces will be made up into babies' layettes.

The Red Cross is the only source of supply for the need for linen which exists among the allied nations, and altho plans for sorting and classifying the pieces have not been completed, it has been decided that heads of volunteer units in the area will do the sorting.

Centers at which the linen will be collected are: the VFW, 4432 North Kedzie avenue; Temple of Beth Israel, Bernard and Ainslie streets; Max Straus center, the Palmer school in Mayfair, the 4 Cohns' shoe store, Albany Park Methodist church, Haugan school Red Cross unit, Volta school, Haym Solomon B'nai B'rith, Hibbard school, and Roosevelt High.

DES PLAINES UNIT LACKS FUNDS TO PAY 4 TEACHERS

The prospect loomed last week that no funds would be available for teachers' salaries in Riverview school district 65, Des Plaines, for the remainder of the school term. Current funds have been exhausted and there are no indications of additional source of revenue at present.

Fred A. Lessing, Maine township school treasurer, said the problem was pressing and no solution was apparent at once. "The school board plans to meet shortly with County Superintendent of Schools Noble J. Puffer," he said.

Low assessed tax valuation of the district and poor tax returns were listed by Lessing as the chief reasons for lack of funds. Present operating costs, he said, have been cut to the bone so that only bare essentials can be provided, but still the amount of tax returns is not sufficient.

"Not much help can be expected from 1941 taxes now being collected," Lessing explained, "because most of that revenue must be used to redeem tax warrants now outstanding.

An estimated $4,800 in 1941 taxes will be collected but over $4,000 of this amount is necessary to redeem warrants, Lessing said. "The increase in enrollment," he added, "has not been offset by an increase in the tax valuation to produce enough funds to operate the school in the proper manner."

Riverview school district is bounded by Oakton street on the north, Mount Prospect road on the west, Touhy avenue on the south, and the Des Plaines river on the east. Population in the area is estimated at approximately 1,000. One hundred sixty-eight pupils are enrolled.

DANES TO MARK 20TH BIRTHDAY OF THEIR CLUB

Gymnastic Exhibition Will Be Held Today.

In 1922 seven young Danes who had come to the United States decided to organize recreational activity to replace that which they had left behind. Athletics had had a prominent place in their lives in the home land and they longed for it here.

Headed by one of their number, Laurits Madsen, a popular amateur wrestler, the group organized the Danish American Athletic club. This afternoon upwards of 1,000 persons are expected to attend an exhibition of gymnastics and folk dancing celebrating the anniversary of the founding of the club 20 years ago. The exhibition will be held at 5 o'clock in the Logan Square Masonic temple, 2451 North Kedzie avenue.

Prepare Members for Service.

"Our club today has to fill a dual purpose in helping guide the lives of our members," said Anker W. Jensen, president. "Not only do we try to keep the physical and educational culture of Danish life alive in the minds and hearts of our members, but we must also, thru our program, do what we can to prepare them for service to their country in this time of emergency."

"Sports for sport's sake," slogan of the club, aptly phrases the purpose for which it was founded and for which it exists today. Originally open only to persons of Danish descent, membership rules have since been relaxed to admit those of Scandinavian descent.

When the club was a year old Carl Sorensen who had studied gymnastics at the world famous Niels Bukh school in Ollerup, Denmark, joined and taught gymnastics. A short time later Anker W. Jensen, the present president, joined and introduced folk dancing.

Gets Help at Library.

"I didn't know much about folk dancing at the time," he explains, "altho I studied ballet as a boy in Denmark. So in my spare time I went to the library and read all the books I could find on the subject. The dances we learn and the costumes we wear are strictly authentic."

About 15 years ago women were admitted to membership and later special classes were started for children. Today the 350 members of the club attend regular courses in wrestling, gymnastics, basketball, bowling, folk dancing, and folk singing. Classes meet five nights a week. The seven instructors serve without compensation and average three of four nights a week at the club. Jensen, a gauge maker, works 10 hours a day, seven days a week, but still has time to conduct his classes in folk dancing.

Altho the club has produced some excellent teams and individual athletes it has refrained from entering competitions. Before the war a group of 34 youths of the gymnastic and folk dancing classes went on a two month tour of Denmark, giving 31 exhibitions. Carl Sorensen led the tour.

Present quarters at 1639 North Washtenaw avenue, were set up in 1928 when club members purchased an old Danish church and remodeled it. Instructors at the club, in addition to Jensen, Sorensen, and Madsen, who has been wrestling coach since the founding, are Miss Karen Else Andersen, Miss Sofie Fricke, Miss Elizabeth Larsen, and Robert Broch.

Bank Choral Club to Give Program in Irving Park

Married Recently

Miss Sylvia Baranowski, daughter of Mrs. Harriet Baranowski, was recently married to Kenneth Risting, son of Mrs. Inga Risting, 3447 North Nagle avenue. The ceremony was held in St. Stephen's church, 921 West Ohio street, and a wedding reception followed at the Central Plaza hotel.

Danish Folk Dancing to Be Seen at Celebration Today

Folk dancing is an important part of the program at the Danish American Athletic club, 1639 North Washtenaw avenue. This group will take part in an exhibition to be staged by the club this afternoon in observance of its 20th anniversary. The celebration will take place at the Logan Square Masonic temple, 2451 North Kedzie avenue. Left to right: Miss Sofie Fricke, instructor; Betty Fensen, Harry Sloth, Grethe Voss, Arthur Sloth, Lillian Sloth, and Doris Rosendale.

Training in gymnastics also is part of the program at the Danish American Athletic club, and exhibitions of gymnastic feats will be a feature of the celebration this afternoon. Pupils 7 years old and up receive this training. Here pupils of the junior class are going thru one of their routines. Left to right, Carl Andersen, Henry Hansen, Alfred Knudsen, and Donald Frostholm.

BOY ENLISTS AID OF SCOUT LEADER TO FIND MOTHER

Left Her in France 9 Months Ago.

Scout Executive Donald E. Kyger of Park Ridge is trying to locate the mother of one of his new scouts. The difficulty of the job is apparent since the mother is believed somewhere in France.

The new scout is Bill Goldberg, 15, a freshman at Maine Township High school, now residing with Dr. Julius Steinfeld of Des Plaines. Bill's mother sent him to this country from France nine months ago, shortly after they had been released from a concentration camp. Immigration laws would not permit her to accompany him.

Was Boy Scout in France.

Two weeks ago Bill, who was a Boy Scout in France, joined Scout Troop 25 of Des Plaines and met Kyger whom he asked to aid in the search for his mother.

As the first step Kyger says he will write to the national office of the American Boy Scout organization in New York. Thru this office he hopes to contact scout organizations in Switzerland and possibly in unoccupied France, unless the war has disrupted scout activities there. As soon as conditions permit Bill will bring his mother to this country.

Had Fill of Ice Cream.

Like all visitors to a foreign country Bill had a "first impression" of the new country shortly after arriving in the United States. It was an erroneous one about American food habits.

"When I first set foot on American soil," he recalls, laughing, "a lady handed me an ice cream cone. For several days I attended a number of parties and receptions where people always wanted to make sure that I had enough ice cream. I thought it was about the only food Americans ate."

Bill and his mother were forced to leave their home in Berlin in 1937. They moved to Italy and then to France.

POLISH WEDDING PAGEANT WILL BE GIVEN TONIGHT

Amid a setting reminiscent of a small village scene in Poland, one of the most colorful of Polish customs will be enacted by the players of the Northwestern University settlement—and re-lived in the memories of many of the spectators—with the presentation this evening of the pageant of the Poprawiny.

More than 50 players make up the cast, nearly all of them of Polish descent.

Wedding Party at Bride's Home.

The Poprawiny is a wedding party given by the parents of the bride in her new home. Attending the party are the family and relatives of the bride and all of the neighbors, attired in their very finest and most colorful dress. Among the important personages to attend the celebration are the priest, who gives his blessing to the new home, and the organist of the village.

One of the ceremonies is the removing of the bride's wreath, binding her braids, and putting on her cap and apron, signifying that she is no longer a carefree maid. The wedding dance then takes place.

During the festivities friends of the bride tease her by saying she is not a good housekeeper, and she runs to her husband for consolation. At the end of the celebration the guests depart, singing; the parents bestow their blessing on the young couple, leaving them to light their votive light and set up their new family altar.

Those Who Have Rôles.

Rôles of the bride and bridegroom will be played by Florence Biebutowski and Casimir Zurawski. Joseph Jaworski and Mrs. Ann Bugalski will have the rôles of the father and mother, while the part of the priest will be played by Walter Gorzela. Other players having prominent places in the cast are Frank Andrzejewski, organist; Joseph Dutt, grandfather; Mrs. Barbara Teska, grandmother, and Helen Arendt, Zosia.

The performance will start at 7:30 o'clock at the settlement, 1400 Augusta boulevard. It marks the fourth annual presentation of the production, sponsored by the settlement's Neighborhood guild.

Marion Claire, Baggiore, Foote to Sing.

A musical salute to our South American neighbors will be a feature of W-G-N's America Loves a Melody program to be aired from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Marion Claire, Attilio Baggiore, and Bruce Foote will be the singing stars.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

The good neighbor salute will be in the form of a Spanish-American medley of "Valencia" featuring the orchestra and chorus, "Hat Dance" by the orchestra, "La Golondrina" by Miss Claire and orchestra, and "Granada" by Baggiore, the chorus, and orchestra.

Miss Claire will be heard in two solo selections: "Chinese Lullaby" from Bowers' "East Is West" and Romberg's "One Kiss" from "New Moon." Mr. Baggiore will sing Tosti's "Parted." Mr. Foote's solo will be Del Riego's "Homing."

The orchestra will be heard playing "On the Trail" from Groffe's "Grand Canyon Suite" and Morton Gould's arrangement of the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers."

A highlight of the program will be a cello solo of "Liebestraum" by Adolf Hoffman. The entire company will join in Edward's "By the Bend of the River" and in a "Show Boat" medley made up of "Why Do I Love You," "Only Make Believe," and "Old Man River."

The orchestra will be under the direction of Henry Weber and the chorus will be conducted by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor is the producer.

Claude Pepper of Florida and Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming. Opposing will be Rep. Leroy D. Downs of Connecticut and Rep. Leon Sachs of Pennsylvania.

SALUTE BOWEN HIGH TODAY ON CITIZENS' HOUR

Sixty year old Bowen high school of south side Chicago will be honored on the 62d broadcast of "Citizens of Tomorrow" to be heard on W-G-N at 1:30 p. m. today. William P. Hearne, the school's new principal, a graduate of St. Mary's university, Baltimore, Md., will be the principal speaker, outlining the defense work of the school.

A feature of the program will be a piano solo, Tschaikowsky's "Concerto in B Flat minor," played by Harold Turner, who together with Philip Maxwell, the entertainment's master of ceremonies, started out on the first broadcast of this series in the spring of 1940.

The Bowen girls' chorus, conducted by Lillian Pope, will sing two numbers, "Babylon" by Joseph Clokey, and "America, My Own" by Noble Cain. Maxwell will name two more students to the program's "Honor Roll." They will be Miss Esther Jackson, 17 year old senior in the Crawfordsville, Ind., high school, a leading student and violinist, and Richard Green, also 17, of Bowen high, who will be interviewed.

CARLO MORELLI TO BE AMERICA SHOW'S GUEST

Carlo Morelli, noted Chilean baritone of the Metropolitan Opera, will be the guest star on the "America Preferred" program over W-G-N-Mutual Sunday from 10.30 to 11 a. m.

Morelli's opening selection will be "The Monologue" from Giordano's "Andre Chenier." Other numbers to be sung by Morelli are "Zaza Piccola Zingara" from Leoncavallo's opera, "Zaza," and three songs from his native Chile, "La Perjura" by Lerdo de Tejada; Perez Freire's "El Portillero" and "El Copihuie Rojo."

A scenic fantasy, "My Country," will be the orchestral selection under the direction of Alfred Wallenstein. Deems Taylor is the commentator on the weekly series.

BLOCK CAPTAIN CEREMONY TO BE AIRED ON W-G-N

The nation's biggest Civilian Defense ceremony to date—the official OCD induction service for 14,000 Chicago block captains—will be broadcast by W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system today. The program, originating in the coliseum, will be carried by Mutual from 3 to 3:30 and will be transcribed and aired by W-G-N from 5:30 to 6 p. m.

James M. Landis, director of the OCD, will be the principal speaker. He will be introduced by Mayor Kelly, Chicago civilian defense coördinator. Judge Otto Kerner of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will administer the oath of allegiance to the block captains.

FrankMacCormack to Read 'House by Side of the Road'

"The House by the Side of the Road" will be read by Franklyn MacCormack during the program Maid of America, to be heard on W-G-N from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Tuesday. Songs by Evelyn Ames and the music of Robert Trendler and the W-G-N orchestra provide the musical portion of the program.

Miss Ames will be heard in "Paris in the Spring" and "I'll See You Again." The orchestra will play "Thank Your Lucky Stars and Stripes," "Scrub Me, Mama," "It Had to Be You," and a Victor Herbert medley consisting of "Kiss in the Dark," "Indian Summer," and "On Parade."

Heather Tweed is mistress of ceremonies on the program.

BUILD LAST SETS APR. 22; PLAN TO REVIVE OLD ONES

Rush to Buy Portables for Armed Forces.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

By order of the War Production board all manufacturers of radio sets for civilian use will cease Wednesday night, April 22. Thereupon, all radio manufacturers will devote their full resources to building communications and related equipment for war use. Some companies are already 100 per cent converted.

The radio industry, which last year built about $500,000,000 worth of receivers, this year is committed to building two billion dollars worth of war equipment.

American homes at the end of the year were supplied with some 57 million receiving sets. There were 30 million homes with sets; some 11 million had more than one set. During 1942 the total number of sets may have been boosted to approximately 60 million.

Sales Extremely Brisk.

How many receivers will be available for distribution after April 22 is a matter of conjecture. Some dealers laid in large stocks. The supply among many more is already low. Sales have been extremely lively ever since it was made known that production was to cease.

Stocks of many models are already badly depleted. In some lines of portables the supply is completely exhausted. Many thousands of portables or other small models have been snapped up by men in the armed forces or by friends and relatives as gifts for them.

Letters in increasing numbers from soldiers and sailors stationed abroad indicate that radios represent one of the most important links with home. From distant island outposts have come urgent pleas for short wave sets. A marine on Johnston Island in the mid-Pacific recently wrote: "It is impossible to live here without a radio."

Plan to Rebuild Old Sets.

That dealers are convinced there will be no more new radios for the duration after the present stock is exhausted is indicated by the fact that all used radios taken as trade-ins are being carefully stored. Many radio men are making plans to repair and rebuild old sets and sell them later when the new sets are all gone.

Many sets in good condition are turned in for new receivers, especially for the combination models with FM and phonograph. Often the replacement of a tube or two or a minor part will put trade-in sets in condition for years more of service.

Beg Your Pardon.

In an article printed recently on the radio page of THE TRIBUNE, various suggestions for making radio receivers last longer, as relayed by the consumer division of the Office of Price Information, were included.

One of these suggestions called for connecting a ground wire to sets that are noisy. It was suggested that a wire be run from the ground post to a water or radiator pipe.

Several engineers say that this suggestion is not applicable to some types of so-called universal AC-DC sets. Persons who have these universal type receivers should follow carefully instructions received with such sets and should not proceed otherwise without consulting an expert service man. With some types of such sets serious damage may be caused to the set by linking a ground wire to the chassis, engineers say.

GOV. GREEN WILL ACT ON W-G-N'S 'RAMPARTS' HOUR

Illinois Reserve Militia to Be Saluted.

Gov. Dwight H. Green will become a radio actor when he joins the cast of "Americans at the Ramparts" on W-G-N at 7 p. m. next Thursday. Gov. Green will be the narrator for a half hour musical dramatic salute to the Illinois Reserve Militia on this broadcast.

Gov. Green is the commander in chief of the state militia and a former World war aviator. His part in the Ramparts program will be to set the scenes for the dramatic sketches that will tell of the development of the militia which has been rated by the war department as "one of the best in the country."

Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, adjutant general of the militia, will also play an important part in the broadcast. Gen. Boyle will close the show with a short speech telling of the new enlistment plans for the militia. A full dramatic cast will be featured on the program as well as the W-G-N chorus and orchestra under the direction of Robert Trendler.

More than 500 officers and men from Illinois Reserve Militia companies all over the state will attend the broadcast. The militiamen will march up Michigan avenue to the W-G-N studios just before the program goes on the air. They will be led by band units from the various companies. Gen. Boyle and other high ranking officers of the militia will join in the parade. At 53 armories all over the state, members of the state militia and their families will gather to hear the W-G-N broadcast.

Gov. Green will salute the militia as the "fourth service" and officers of the other three fighting services will be in the audience. The program will be produced by Morrison Wood from a script by Sidney Gerson and Art Noyes.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 20.

Pansies should be starting to bloom nicely. Altho they will do well in any rich, light soil, a sandy, loamy, deep soil is preferable. The best location is one that is not emburdened with trees or full sun. By adding leaf mold, humus, or peat moss a fine stand can be obtained.

The withered flowers must be removed to prevent seedage or the plants will cease flowering. The finest varieties can be propagated from cuttings, by layering or from seed.

It is lawn making time but a considerable number of home gardeners delay the work until hot weather at which time the weeds grow faster than grass.

Tuesday, April 21.

You can have a lawn that is free from weeds if you will take care of the lawn in such a manner that a thick mat of grass is established. Weeds cannot grow under such conditions. Notice how few there are when grass is high and thick—even the dandelions fail to develop as they do where the grass is sparse.

But the ground must be well enriched, which means applying sufficient plant food. Use a complete balanced plant food at the rate of 4 pounds per 100 square feet of area.

Wednesday, April 22.

Vegetable gardeners like to grow a new variety or two to add interest to their garden. The following are among the all-America awards for 1942, but they should be tried out before they are planted extensively on unknown soils. A silver medal was awarded for the pole snap bean "Decatur." It is said to be resistant to rust and is early and produces abundantly pods 6 to 8 inches long, and of fine quality.

The new bush bean "Medal Refugee" also is resistant to bean mosaic and yields a fine pod and is excellent for green beans; good for canning and home use, 85 days.

Thursday, April 23.

There are few gardeners who have not had their snowball plants attacked by the aphid and wonder how to control it. Just as the buds start and again every few days spray with a delayed dormant oil spray, such as nicotine sulphate and soap or some other recommended spray. If necessary dust with nicotine or rotenone dust for it is so fine it can enter thru the openings in the curled leaves.

Friday, April 24.

Prune evergreens. Stake the central stem if a new straight stem is needed. Pinch off the short terminals of the side growths to obtain a stock growth on pines and firs. Transplant magnolias, sassafras, and other trees with soft roots in spring, altho most of our native trees can be planted as well in autumn.

The short growths of the forsythias can be used as propagating materials if desired. Spade among shrubs and give them an application of plant food. Fertilize evergreens by applying rotted stable manure or a well balanced commercial plant food.

Saturday, April 25.

Harden off tender plants like the tomato, pepper, eggplant, geranium, and others for a period of about 10 days before planting. Watch weather reports and gauge the time accordingly. On clear nights it is likely to freeze; on cloudy nights it is not so likely to freeze; plants in low land will more likely freeze than those planted on high ground.

Cover against frost by placing a cone of newspaper over each plant; remove during the day. Pots, cans, or other things can be used. If the hardy annuals are developed enough to handle begin thinning to about 9 to 12 inches apart. After a rain, use the hoe.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

BUILDING BOARD MAKES EASY JOB OF MODERNIZING

Some Types Are Finished in the Factory.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Houses, like tires and clothes and cars and equipment, wear out in course of time and for this reason, with warring against deterioration and waste a patriotic part of every home program, it is vitally important to keep the houses we have in as good condition as possible.

Many materials needed for home repair are available and substitutes and plastics are on the market in no small quantity for those materials needed by the goverment for war uses.

Especially worthwhile right now, if renovation and repair is necessary, is the inclusion of insulation in the repair program.

Some Are Finished.

Insulation boards are to be had in a host of types.

For the walls and ceilings of practically any room in your house there are boards which come finished and ready to install without any further decoration; there are those which come unfinished, to be painted or papered, and there are those which come primed and ready for the final coat of paint.

There are the building boards in large sheets for easy coverage of large areas. There are rectangular units or small square units called tile, especially adapted for ceilings, and there are the narrow units known as planks that come in varying widths and can be used in many combinations to make attractive wall designs.

Will Deaden Sound.

If you are converting some unused space to an extra room these insulating boards that build, insulate, and decorate are easy to install and also economical. These same boards also contribute somewhat to the lessening of sound thru walls and ceilings.

Materials are obtainable for conversion of unused attic space into living quarters and a high priority rate is given to this type of modernization. Modern panel materials do this work quickly: Those thick, rigid panels of fiber board which come as wide as 4 feet and as long as 16 feet are presized at the factory so that they require only one coat of paint.

And now is the time to stop leaks of all kinds around the house. The drip drip of leaky faucets and gas leaks are wasteful and dangerous too. Roof leaks create an unhealthy atmosphere in the house. Garden hose that leaks can be mended to save water, and save also on the garden hose.

FIRST ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN NEARS DIAMOND JUBILEE

Celebration to Be Held on May 17.

Plans were announced last week for the diamond jubilee celebration on May 17 of First St. John's Lutheran church, Hoyne avenue and Walton street. In preparation for the celebration of a series of special services will be held each Sunday.

Speaker at the jubilee celebration May 17 will be the Rev. John W. Behnken, president of the Missouri synod. Other speakers who will appear on the intervening Sundays until May 17 are the Rev. William Eifert of Indianapolis, Ind.; the Rev. Paul J. Roeder of Chicago, the Rev. Carl Abel of Elmhurst, the Rev. W. G. Fechner of Northbrook, and the Rev. Otto F. Arndt of Skokie.

Moved from First Location.

Organized in 1867, the church grew from a branch of the Christian day school maintained by First St. Paul's Lutheran church, now located at 1301 North La Salle street. First St. John's church originally was located on the corner of Superior and Bickerdike streets. It was moved to its present site in 1905.

Three pastors have served the church during its 75 years of existence. The first, the Rev. August Grosse, served from 1867 to 1875, leaving to become a member of the faculty at Concordia Teachers college, then located at Addison, Ill., now at River Forest.

Pastor Served 44 Years.

The Rev. Henry Succop held the pastorate from 1875 until his death in 1919. The present pastor, the Rev. Paul Sauer, succeeded the Rev. Mr. Succop. Two teachers in the Christian day school were intimately connected with the church for a long period. Louis Selle served the school 54 years until his retirement in 1928 and G. J. Guettler served 39 years until his death in 1923.

Six members of the diamond jubilee committee are preparing the arrangements for the celebration. Frederick L. Franke is chairman, assisted by O. W. Schultz, music committee; the Rev. Raymond Fechner, service arrangements committee; the Rev. Mr. Sauer, jubilee book committee; Mrs. Raymond Fechner and Mrs. R. C. Blum, decorations.

Two Sons, Like Father, in Navy

WALDO W. HEALY.

BILL HEALY.

DAN HEALY.

Bill and Dan Healy have donned blue uniforms to follow in the footsteps of their father, Waldo W. Healy, who served with Admiral Dewey two wars ago. Bill, 22 years old, welder in civilian life, recently was assigned to a destroyer operating out of the Boston Navy yard, where his father was sworn out 43 years ago. He is a ship fitter, having had six months training in the Ford factory service school at Dearborn, Mich.

Dan, 29 years old, changed from one blue uniform to another last month. He had been a park district policeman for four years. Now he is a 3d class petty officer stationed in the master-at-arms office on Navy Pier.

The picture of the senior Healy was taken on June 1, 1899, in Hong Kong. Only 16 years old, he was a seaman on Admiral Dewey's flagship, "Olympia," in the Philippines during the Spanish-American war. After the war the fleet sailed around the world. Before his enlistment, Mr. Healy had been left end on the Notre Dame varsity football team. The family resides at 1221 Farwell avenue.

[Editor's Note—Just to make it a family affair, Paul Healy, metropolitain reporter, was assigned to write this story of his father and two brothers.]

ENDS BUSINESS DAYS, BUT PLANS TO HELP YOUTH

W. J. Goodman Hopes to Lecture in Schools.

William J. Goodman.

William J. Goodman, who retired last week as a vice president of Horder's stationery stores, plans to cultivate two life-long interests on the farm he bought recently five miles northwest of Harvard. These interests are highly divergent—one is to supplement the academic training of high school students in commercial courses with practical knowledge of modern business methods, and the other is to raise on his farm "just about everything that will grow."

Pursuing the first, Goodman hopes to continue in McHenry county the lecture program he began some time ago on modern business methods.

Cites Change in Courtesy.

It is likely that he'll also tell the students about business courtesies prevalent 30 to 40 years ago. "There was more of a social aspect to business in those days," Mr. Goodman recalls. "I can remember waiting on a customer in Cameron, Amberg & Co., a stationery concern where I first worked as an errand boy in '91, and I used to offer a chair and a glass of water to a customer who looked tired, as a matter of course."

Sales clerks often don't know what they're selling, and half of the time they don't believe in its value, Mr. Goodman says. He remembers that he had his first lesson in salesmanship when he watched a jeweler showing a necklace to a customer. "The fellow picked that necklace out of the box as if it was worth a million, and when he laid it down again, he still looked as if he thought it was worth a million. If the customer thinks you believe in the product you're selling, he's a lot more likely to buy it."

Helps Evolve Catalog.

Mr. Goodman spent 17 years with Cameron and Amberg, and joined Horder's in 1913. He is proud of his part in evolving the present type of stock catalog used by large mail order houses.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodman resided in Evanston at 2207 Grant street for 20 years, and are moving to their farm at Harvard from Crystal Lake, where they have lived for a short period.

Mr. D. F. McMahon
Manager
Retail Advertising
Chicago Tribune

Dear Mr. McMahon:

There is a good reason why our advertising linage in the Metropolitan sections of the Sunday Tribune reached a 9-year high of 21,077 lines last year -- and why we are currently running a new series of fashion advertisements that should make 1942 an even greater year.

Most of our advertising is for coats, dresses and smart outerwear fashions. Located in the convenient Madison and Crawford area, we serve the great West Side. That we reach practically all our market in the Sunday Tribune is shown by these figures on increases in our apparel departments:

1941 was 27.85% better than 1940
1940 was 29.51% better than 1939

-- and so far in 1942, our business is 50.63% better than 1941. The only thing that is holding us back from making larger gains is lack of space.

Frankly, your zoned Metropolitan Section advertising is an excellent investment for outlying merchants. We know of nothing that equals it for results and low cost.

Sincerely yours,
J. D. Madigan
MADIGAN BROTHERS

How Madigan Brothers newly modernized store is piling up sales gains with the aid of the Sunday Tribune's low-cost advertising plan for neighborhood retailers is told in the letter above.

The women's shoe department in Madigan Brothers store is contributing to the gains which this retailer attributes to consistent use of advertising in the Sunday Tribune.

WEST SIDE STORE TELLS HOW LOW COST ADVERTISING IN THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE SPURS SALES AND GROWTH

SALES up 29% in 1940; up another 27% in 1941; and for the first three months of this year, 50% better than last year . . . such is the progress reported in the accompanying letter by this well-known west side store which for many years has used the Sunday Tribune's low-cost advertising plan for neighborhood retailers.

This is the testimony of only one of the 726 retailers on all sides of Chicago who used this plan last year to go after more sales and profits.

If you want to build securely for the future, now is the time to get the facts about this low-cost, business-building plan. Chicago's greater industrial activity is widening the distribution of spendable cash in every neighborhood and suburb of Chicago. At rates scaled low enough to permit every retailer to take advantage of Tribune sales power, you can put the Sunday Tribune on the job bringing more customers right from your own trading area.

It costs you nothing to get the facts. Call SUPerior 0100 tomorrow morning and ask for the Metropolitan section advertising department. A representative will be glad to call on you at your convenience with case history evidence showing how others in your line are using this plan to build sales and profits.

LEADERS TO MAP PLANS FOR LILAC SHARING DAYS

Bouquets to Cheer City's Shut-Ins.

When guild chairmen and presidents of 81 garden clubs thruout Chicagoland meet Wednesday noon to complete their plans for the 14th annual "Share the Lilacs" campaign, their efforts might well be compared to modern wartime production methods.

For it is their responsibility to see that fragrant lilacs by the thousands of bouquets find their way from farms, estates, and homes, large or small, in the suburbs, to the patients and shut-ins of Chicago's hospitals, homes, and orphanages. It is their task to insure that bouquets, cut fresh on Lilac days, arrive at suburban stations for swift transportation to the city. How well they have organized this work is seen in the record—more than 100,000 bouquets distributed last year among 25,000 individuals.

See Bumper Crop.

The women will represent garden clubs affiliated with the Chicago Plant, Flower, and Fruit guild, which coöperates each year with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in bringing a touch of spring to the city's shut-ins.

Their meeting will be held at noon at Carson Pirie Scott & Co. and working plans will be drafted to help speed the delivery of the fragrant blooms from the suburbs to the hospitals and institutions in the city. This year, with the lilac bushes promising another bumper crop, guild officials are hoping to exceed last year's record.

Gathered by Volunteers.

The flowers are gathered by volunteer workers from backyard gardens, parks, estates, and solitary bushes wherever they are found. The guild chairmen supervise the work of getting the blooms to the railroad stations, where they are delivered freight free to the city terminals. Here the lilacs are picked up by Tribune trucks and sped to the various hospitals.

Response to the lilac campaign last year was so great that 158 institutions were given bouquets of the fragrant flowers. The days on which lilacs will be distributed this year have not yet been determined. When guild officials feel that the blooms in all the suburbs have reached their peak, the distribution days will be announced.

Listed below are south and southwest side garden clubs, their presidents and guild chairmen.

Need New Fire Truck, So the Boys Get Busy

When Flossmoor's volunteer fire brigade determined that the village needed additional fire fighting apparatus, the 16 man department got together and built a new fire truck.

They acquired a Ford Model A chassis for $10. Its equipment was either purchased or donated. The volunteer fire fighters contributed their labor. The total cost of the fire truck—$190—was accumulated thru benefits and donations from grateful Flossmoor residents whose homes had been saved by the fire brigade.

The village acquired its first fire truck, a 500 gallon pumper, in 1928. On it was a 40 gallon chemical tank, used to extinguish oil and chemical blazes. When the men were assembling the new equipment, they removed the tank from the old truck and affixed it to the new. With the addition of containers for sand, the new truck has been declared suitable for blackout use and for the suppression of incendiary bombs, as well as for ordinary fire fighting purposes.

In place of the chemical tank, a 110 gallon booster tank for water has been installed on the old truck. A month of effort resulted in the completion of the new apparatus. It has been painted a bright red, and is now ready for action. Harvey Hyde, a Flossmoor garage man, is the village's fire chief. He's had the job since 1929. Besides the 16 volunteer firemen, the department, under the civilian defense setup, has been augmented by 15 auxiliary firemen.

LIGHT BALLOTING BRINGS WINS TO PARTY REGULARS

Church Only Nominee to Beat Organization.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

The lightest primary balloting in several years was the chief factor in bringing congress nominations to nearly all the regular organization in the 10 congressional districts of Cook and Lake counties. Not since 1930 have so few persons voted in a congressional election, according to a comparison of the nearly complete 1942 results compared with those of other years.

The one exception to the rule of regular organization victories was the G. O. P. primary in the 10th district, which includes part of Cook and all of Lake county [districts 1 to 9 are in Cook county]. Here former Congressman Ralph E. Church, in an intense personal campaign, overcame the strong organization backing given Congressman George A. Paddock to win by nearly 7,000 votes.

Regulars Win the Others.

In every other case where there were contests the regularly supported candidates won by overwhelming margins. Indorsements were given in every case but the Republican primary in the 8th district.

Here is the tabulation of the nearly complete unofficial primary returns in the county, the asterisks [*] indicating incumbents. The table shows the total number of precincts in each district and the number missing from the returns for each party.

RUN NO RISKS—Soon our Scientific Controlled Storage Vaults will be taxed beyond capacity. Make your reservations NOW. Protect your Fur Loveliness against Moths, Fires, Thefts, Atmospheric Conditions. You can't afford to neglect Furs and Fine Fabrics in these times.

ROLES IN DRAMA PRELUDE TO 60 WEDDED YEARS

Roseland Couple Meet First Time on Stage.

When the leading lady in the church play became so smitten with the leading man that she was unable to give an adequate enactment of her rôle the casting director sent out a harrassed call for help. The leading man's sister persuaded Sarah C. Nicodemus to take the part. Sarah wasn't particularly interested, altho she agreed. One provision accompanied her agreement: she didn't want to meet her leading man before they encountered each other on the stage.

She eventually met him tho, and tomorrow the leading man, A. C. Pennington, and the former Sarah C. Nicodemus will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary. They expect to mark the occasion at home, 324 West 114th street, surrounded by their family and friends.

Married in Virginia.

They were married in Sacred Heart church in Winchester, Va., and came to Chicago shortly thereafter. They've made their home in Roseland for the last 53 years. Mr. Pennington is 85; his wife, 79. Both are active and in good health.

Mr. Pennington was first in the building trades. Later he abandoned that in favor of the grocery and meat business, and still later returned to the building trades. Last year he gave a neighborhood doctor quite a shock. The doctor had just recently congratulated him on his 84th birthday. A few days later he passed by a house and saw Mr. Pennington briskly affixing the shingles to the roof.

Buggy Wins Girl Friends.

Mr. Pennington said that he never had any trouble getting himself a girl friend when he was young. "I had two fine horses and a buggy," he explained. He had some trouble with Mrs. Pennington, tho, before he convinced her that she should marry him. She had another boy friend with the same idea.

The Penningtons are the parents of three children, Harry, Raymond, and Benjamin. Fourteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren complete the family circle.

SOUTH AMERICAN SALUTE ON W-G-N 'MELODY' SHOW

Marion Claire, Baggiore, Foote to Sing.

A musical salute to our South American neighbors will be a feature of W-G-N's America Loves a Melody program to be aired from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Marion Claire, Attilio Baggiore, and Bruce Foote will be the singing stars.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

The good neighbor salute will be in the form of a Spanish-American medley of "Valencia" featuring the orchestra and chorus, "Hat Dance" by the orchestra, "La Golondrina" by Miss Claire and orchestra, and "Granada" by Baggiore, the chorus, and orchestra.

Miss Claire will be heard in two solo selections: "Chinese Lullaby" from Bowers' "East Is West" and Romberg's "One Kiss" from "New Moon." Mr. Baggiore will sing Tosti's "Parted." Mr. Foote's solo will be Del Riego's "Homing."

The orchestra will be heard playing "On the Trail" from Groffe's "Grand Canyon Suite" and Morton Gould's arrangement of the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers."

A highlight of the program will be a cello solo of "Liebestraum" by Adolf Hoffman. The entire company will join in Edward's "By the Bend of the River" and in a "Show Boat" medley made up of "Why Do I Love You," "Only Make Believe," and "Old Man River."

The orchestra will be under the direction of Henry Weber and the chorus will be conducted by Robert Trendler. Kenneth MacGregor is the producer.

BLOCK CAPTAIN CEREMONY TO BE AIRED ON W-G-N

The nation's biggest Civilian Defense ceremony to date—the official OCD induction service for 14,000 Chicago block captains—will be broadcast by W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system today. The program, originating in the coliseum, will be carried by Mutual from 3 to 3:30 and will be transcribed and aired by W-G-N from 5:30 to 6 p. m.

James M. Landis, director of the OCD, will be the principal speaker. He will be introduced by Mayor Kelly, Chicago civilian defense coördinator. Judge Otto Kerner of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will administer the oath of allegiance to the block captains.

FrankMacCormack to Read 'House by Side of the Road'

"The House by the Side of the Road" will be read by Franklyn MacCormack during the program bearing his name to be heard on W-G-N from 7:30 to 8 p. m. Tuesday. Songs by Evelyn Ames and the music of Robert Trendler and the W-G-N orchestra provide the musical portion of the program.

Miss Ames will be heard in "Paris in the Spring" and "I'll See You Again." The orchestra will play "Thank Your Lucky Stars and Stripes," "Scrub Me, Mama," "It Had to Be You," and a Victor Herbert medley consisting of "Kiss in the Dark," "Indian Summer," and "On Parade."

Heather Tweed is mistress of ceremonies on the program.

GOV. GREEN WILL ACT ON W-G-N'S 'RAMPARTS' HOUR

Illinois Reserve Militia to Be Saluted.

Gov. Dwight H. Green will become a radio actor when he joins the cast of "Americans at the Ramparts" on W-G-N at 7 p. m. next Thursday. Gov. Green will be the narrator for a half hour musical dramatic salute to the Illinois Reserve Militia on this broadcast.

Gov. Green is the commander in chief of the state militia and a former World war aviator. His part in the Ramparts program will be to set the scenes for the dramatic sketches that will tell of the development of the militia which has been rated by the war department as "one of the best in the country."

Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, adjutant general of the militia, will also play an important part in the broadcast. Gen. Boyle will close the show with a short speech telling of the new enlistment plans for the militia. A full dramatic cast will be featured on the program as well as the W-G-N chorus and orchestra under the direction of Robert Trendler.

More than 500 officers and men from Illinois Reserve Militia companies all over the state will attend the broadcast. The militiamen will march up Michigan avenue to the W-G-N studios just before the program goes on the air. They will be led by band units from the various companies. Gen. Boyle and other high ranking officers of the militia will join in the parade. At 53 armories all over the state, members of the state militia and their families will gather to hear the W-G-N broadcast.

Gov. Green will salute the militia as the "fourth service" and officers of the other three fighting services will be in the audience. The program will be produced by Morrison Wood from a script by Sidney Gerson and Art Noyes.

BUILD LAST SETS APR. 22; PLAN TO REVIVE OLD ONES

Rush to Buy Portables for Armed Forces.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

By order of the War Production board all manufacturers of radio sets for civilian use will cease Wednesday night, April 22. Thereupon, all radio manufacturers will devote their full resources to building communications and related equipment for war use. Some companies are already 100 per cent converted.

The radio industry, which last year built about $500,000,000 worth of receivers, this year is committed to building two billion dollars worth of war equipment.

American homes at the end of the year were supplied with some 57 million receiving sets. There were 30 million homes with sets; some 11 million had more than one set. During 1942 the total number of sets may have been boosted to approximately 60 million.

Sales Extremely Brisk.

How many receivers will be available for distribution after April 22 is a matter of conjecture. Some dealers laid in large stocks. The supply among many more is already low. Sales have been extremely lively ever since it was made known that production was to cease.

Stocks of many models are already badly depleted. In some lines of portables the supply is completely exhausted. Many thousands of portables or other small models have been snapped up by men in the armed forces or by friends and relatives as gifts for them.

Letters in increasing numbers from soldiers and sailors stationed abroad indicate that radios represent one of the most important links with home. From distant island outposts have come urgent pleas for short wave sets. A marine on Johnston Island in the mid-Pacific recently wrote: "It is impossible to live here without a radio."

Plan to Rebuild Old Sets.

That dealers are convinced there will be no more new radios for the duration after the present stock is exhausted is indicated by the fact that all used radios taken as trade-ins are being carefully stored. Many radio men are making plans to repair and rebuild old sets and sell them later when the new sets are all gone.

Many sets in good condition are turned in for new receivers, especially for the combination models with FM and phonograph. Often the replacement of a tube or two or a minor part will put trade-in sets in condition for years more of service.

Last year more than 13,100,000 new sets were distributed. In this same period some 6,000,000 sets were junked. It is not expected that this will happen in 1942.

Beg Your Pardon.

In an article printed recently on the radio page of THE TRIBUNE, various suggestions for making radio receivers last longer, as relayed by the consumer division of the Office of Price Information, were included.

One of these suggestions called for connecting a ground wire to sets that are noisy. It was suggested that a wire be run from the ground post to a water or radiator pipe.

Several engineers say that this suggestion is not applicable to some types of so-called universal AC-DC sets. Persons who have these universal type receivers should follow carefully instructions received with such sets and should not proceed otherwise without consulting an expert service man. With some types of such sets serious damage may be caused to the set by linking a ground wire to the chassis, engineers say.

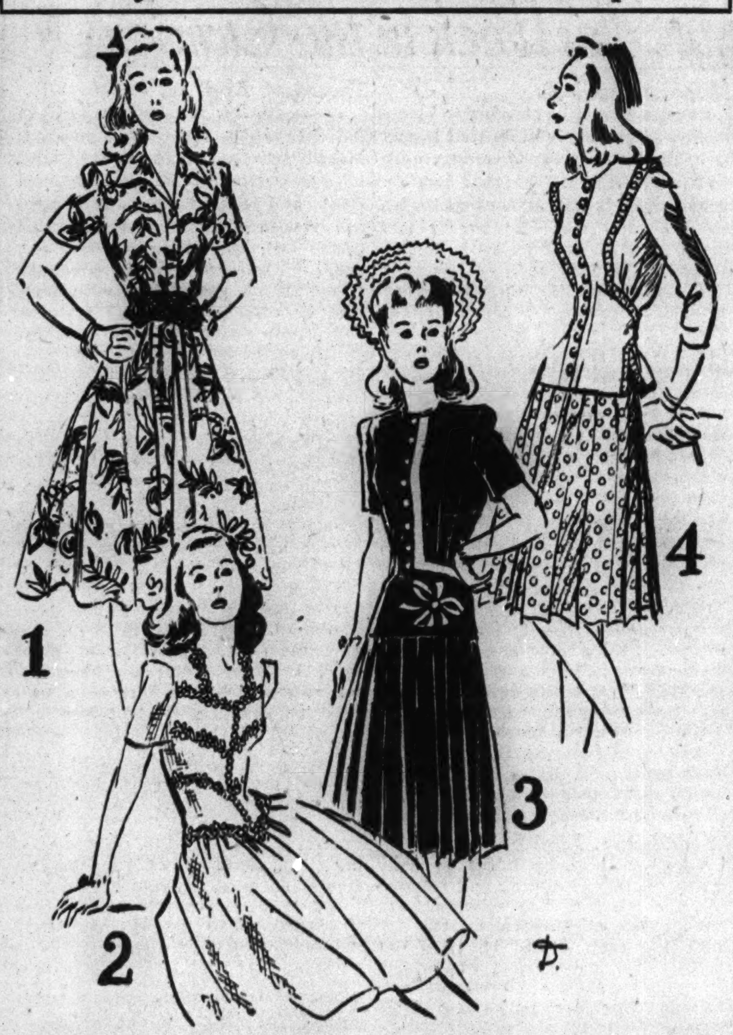
Styles from a Suburban Shop



These spring and summer clothes are described in an accompanying story.

SOUTH SIDE SHOP PUTS STRESS ON JUNIOR FIGURES

Bright Colors Shown for Summer.

BY ANGELA.

A small shop on the far southwest side makes a specialty in dressing the junior figure smartly. Blouses, dresses, sport clothes, and suits bearing the labels of nationally known dress manufacturers are there in abundance. Women's clothes are not neglected, however. Dozens of dresses in women's sizes will satisfy the spring and summer needs of the suburban woman.

Spring and summer dresses of all kinds occupy the racks now, of course. Cottons and rayons and light weight woolen suits in light or bright colors are waiting for your approval.

Some of the smart costumes have been produced in the accompanying sketch.

1. A spun rayon dress. The background of the print is white with figures of blue and fuchsia in the design. This is bright and gay but still cool looking. A wide girdle of fuchsia colored raffia criss-crosses in front.

2. An outfit in crisp white pique. The long waisted, fitted bodice is decorated with an embroidered braid stitched on in a chevronlike pattern.

3. The dress comes in luggage tan, or melon pink with an accent of white pique edging the zig-zagged closing and a white bow appliqued on the left side. It is a spun rayon material, two piece, full plaited skirt.

4. Another 2 piece dress in a rayon crepe. The plaited skirt is a pale blue-green with white polka dots. The bodice is a plain color, straight and smooth in the front but with a little ruffled peplum in the back.

[For information call Angela, Superior 0200. Mail requests should be accompanied by an addressed and stamped envelope.]

FENGER HIGH IS NEXT ON CITIZENS' HOUR BROADCAST

Program to Be Heard on W-G-N Sunday.

Fenger High school will be honored at 1:30 o'clock next Sunday afternoon on the Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast on radio station W-G-N. The program was recorded for broadcast in the W-G-N studios Friday afternoon before a group of students and guests. Among the latter were Oscar F. Fowler, district school superindent; Mrs. W. K. Wilner, president of the Fenger PTA; Mrs. Clarence Johnson, first vice president of the PTA; Roger Long, president of the Kiwanis Club of Roseland; Vernon Dahlman, president of the Roseland Lions club; Clarence McNulty, commander of Roseland American Legion post, and Albert Teninga, reproter for the Roseland Kiwanis.

The school cheer is given by Chester Kubacki, Carol Magliocco, John Espejesi, and Chester Markiewicz. The color guard is composed of Thomas Aabye, Victor Bond, Lloyd Olsen, Donald Du Laney, and William Fanizzo.

Numbers by Chorus.

The Fenger chorus, directed by Miss Irene Conner sings the Fenger pep song, "The Cheerleader," "Thanks Be to God," and "If My Songs Had Wings." Thirty-two boys and 48 girls comprise the chorus.

The principal of Fenger, James H. Smith, is interviewed by Radio Principal Phil Maxwell. Smith came to Fenger in 1939, after serving as principal at the Sherwood elementary school. He was graduated from Tilden Technical school, and the Chicago Teachers' college. He received a bachelor of science degree in engineering from the University of Illinois and a master of arts from the University of Chicago.

Interviews Honor Student.

Fenger's honor student, James Wegener, 12029 Princeton avenue, also is interviewed by Maxwell. Wegener is president of the Fenger student council, a member of the Officers' club of the ROTC, and is a major, second in command, of the Fenger battalion, ROTC.

The history of Fenger goes back to 1903. At that time the school was called the Curtis High school and was located at 115th and State streets. In 1910 Curtis High was renamed Christian Fenger High school, in honor of Dr. Fenger, surgeon. The name of Fenger was transferred to the new building at 11220 South Wallace avenue, when it was built in 1926. There are now 3,800 students enrolled.

'CONFECTIONERY' PROVES HAZARD AT SPELLING BEE

The 16 champion spellers in schools of Calumet and Thornton townships gathered last week to determine the best among them. The winners will participate Saturday in the 27th annual Cook county spelling bee in the council chambers of the city hall. Noble Puffer, county superintendent of schools, will preside.

The final "e" in confectionery proved too much for some of the contestants. The finalists, tho, skipped blithely thru words like insidious, dexterous, adolescent, and bacteria.

Dave Heffernan, assistant county superintendent of schools, conducted the contest in the Bowen school in Riverdale. Loretta Norman of Bowen, took honors for Calumet township. The winners in Thornton township schools were Anna Ruth Jansma, Thornton school, and Beatrice Vandenburg, Berger school. Betty Gurganus of the Hazel Crest school was selected as the alternate.

Other participating boys and girls were June Volbrecht, Elva Dalenberg, McKinley school, South Holland; Eleanor Ward, Berger school, Dolton; Lucille Van Der Aa, Shirley DeYoung, South Holland school; Ilene Groeneveld, Charlene Holly, Phoenix school; Frank Gurgash, Hazel Crest, and James Bethel, Thornton school. These are Thornton township schools. Representing schools in Calumet township were Richard Hess, Bowen; Martha Pavelac, and Dorothy Bojnowski, Calumet, Blue Island.

Drexel Park Church.

The Rev. Clinton C. Cox, pastor of the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue, will speak on "Golden Ignorances" at the 11 o'clock service today. His subject at 8 o'clock this evening will be "America, April 19, 1775, and April 19, 1942."

LITHUANIAN CLUB ANNUAL SHOW TO BE GIVEN TONIGHT

Their 10th annual show will be presented by the Lithuanian University club of Chicago tonight at the Lithuanian auditorium, 3133 South Halsted street. A three act comedy, "The Secret," will be given. CHORUS TO SING VERDI'S 'REQUIEM' IN MORGAN PARK

The Euterpean Oratorio chorus will sing Verdi's "Requiem" at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Morgan Park Baptist church, Oakley avenue and 110th street. Soloists will be Margaret Heywood Wood, Ruth Heizer, Ralph Niehaus, and John MacDonald. It will be under the direction of Mark Hallett, with Eldon Haase at the organ and Russell Hayton at the piano. The chorus is in its 41st season.

BUILDING BOARD MAKES EASY JOB OF MODERNIZING

Some Types Are Finished in the Factory.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Houses, like tires and clothes and cars and equipment, wear out in course of time and for this reason, with warring against deterioriation and waste a patriotic part of every home program, it is vitally important to keep the houses we have in as good condition as possible.

Many materials needed for home repair are available and substitutes and plastics are on the market in no small quantity for those materials needed by the goverment for war uses.

Especially worthwhile right now, if renovation and repair is necessary, is the inclusion of insulation in the repair program. If every building in the United States were insulated, the savings in fuel would be approximately a billion dollars.

Some Are Finished.

Insulation boards are to be had in a host of types.

For the walls and ceilings of practically any room in your house there are boards which come finished and ready to install without any further decoration; there are those which come unfinished, to be painted or papered, and there are those which come primed and ready for the final coat of paint.

There are the building boards in large sheets for easy coverage of large areas. There are rectangular units or small square units called tile, especially adapted for ceilings, and there are the narrow units known as planks that come in varying widths and can be used in many combinations to make attractive wall designs.

Will Deaden Sound.

If you are converting some unused space to an extra room these insulating boards that build, insulate, and decorate are easy to install and also economical. These same boards also contribute somewhat to the lessening of sound thru walls and ceilings.

Materials are obtainable for conversion of unused attic space into living quarters and a high priority rate is given to this type of modernization. Modern panel materials do this work quickly: Those thick, rigid panels of fiber board which come as wide as 4 feet and as long as 16 feet are presized at the factory so that they require only one coat of paint.

If you have a room that might house a war worker you save and reclaim space; just as you save for munition plants when you take a "census" of your attic or basement and salvage those discarded articles now wanted by the War Production board's industrial conservation bureau.

Time to Mend Leaks.

And now is the time to stop leaks of all kinds around the house. The drip drip of leaky faucets and gas leaks are wasteful and dangerous too. Roof leaks create an unhealthy atmosphere in the house. Garden hose that leaks can be mended to save water, and save also on the garden hose.

If radiator valves have been leaking a bit this is the time to call in a heating contractor or steam fitter—before the furnishings are damaged.

Word has reached us that American manufacturers of plumbing equipment are meeting emergencies, and solving them. Research laboratories are busy developing substitute metals for faucets, traps, shower heads, and so on.

NEW WAR SONG CONTEST OFFERS $200 IN PRIZES

A prize of $200 for the words and music of a new patriotic song is being offered by the Order of Bookfellows. The contest is open to the public and entries may be sent in until Dec. 31. Entries will be judged as they are received, and those disqualified will be returned immediately.

This new song for World War II must be serious, dignified, inspiring, and preferably in march time, say the sponsors. The prize will be separated into two portions—$100 for the song and $100 for the music. Persons preferring to do so may submit only one or the other.

Entries are to be sent to The Order of Bookfellows, Patriotic Song Contest, 4917 Blackstone avenue. Manuscripts to be returned must have sufficient postage.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 20.

Pansies should be starting to bloom nicely. Altho they will do well in any rich, light soil, a sandy, loamy, deep soil is preferable. The best location is one that is not emburdened with trees or full sun. By adding leaf mold, humus, or peat moss a fine stand can be obtained.

The withered flowers must be removed to prevent seedage or the plants will cease flowering. The finest varieties can be propagated from cuttings, by layering or from seed.

It is lawn making time, but a considerable number of home gardeners delay the work until hot weather at which time the weeds grow faster than grass.

Tuesday, April 21.

You can have a lawn that is free from weeds if you will take care of the lawn in such a manner that a thick mat of grass is established. Weeds cannot grow under such conditions. Notice how few there are when grass is high and thick—even the dandelions fail to develop as they do where the grass is sparse.

But the ground must be well enriched, which means applying sufficient plant food. Use a complete balanced plant food at the rate of 4 pounds per 100 square feet of area.

Wednesday, April 22.

Vegetable gardeners like to grow a new variety or two to add interest to their garden. The following are among the all-America awards for 1942, but they should be tried out before they are planted extensively on unknown soils. A silver medal was awarded for the pole snap bean "Decatur." It is said to be resistant to rust and is early and produces abundantly pods 6 to 8 inches long, and of fine quality.

The new bush bean "Medal Refugee" also is resistant to bean mosaic and yields a fine pod and is excellent for green beans; good for canning and home use, 85 days.

Thursday, April 23.

There are few gardeners who have not had their snowball plants attacked by the aphid and wonder how to control it. Just as the buds start and again every few days spray with a delayed dormant oil spray, such as nicotine sulphate and soap or some other recommended spray. If necessary dust with nicotine or rotenone dust for it is so fine it can enter thru the openings in the curled leaves.

Friday, April 24.

Prune evergreens. Stake the central stem if a new straight stem is needed. Pinch off the short terminals of the side growths to obtain a stock growth on pines and firs. Transplant magnolias, sassafras, and other trees with soft roots in spring, altho most of our native trees can be planted as well in autumn.

The short growths of the forsythias can be used as propagating materials if desired. Spade among shrubs and give them an application of plant food. Fertilize evergreens by applying rotted stable manure or a well balanced commercial plant food.

Saturday, April 25.

Harden off tender plants like the tomato, pepper, eggplant, geranium, and others for a period of about 10 days before planting. Watch weather reports and gauge the time accordingly. On clear nights it is likely to freeze; on cloudy nights it is not so likely to freeze; plants in low land will more likely freeze than those planted on high ground.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield Park conservatory.

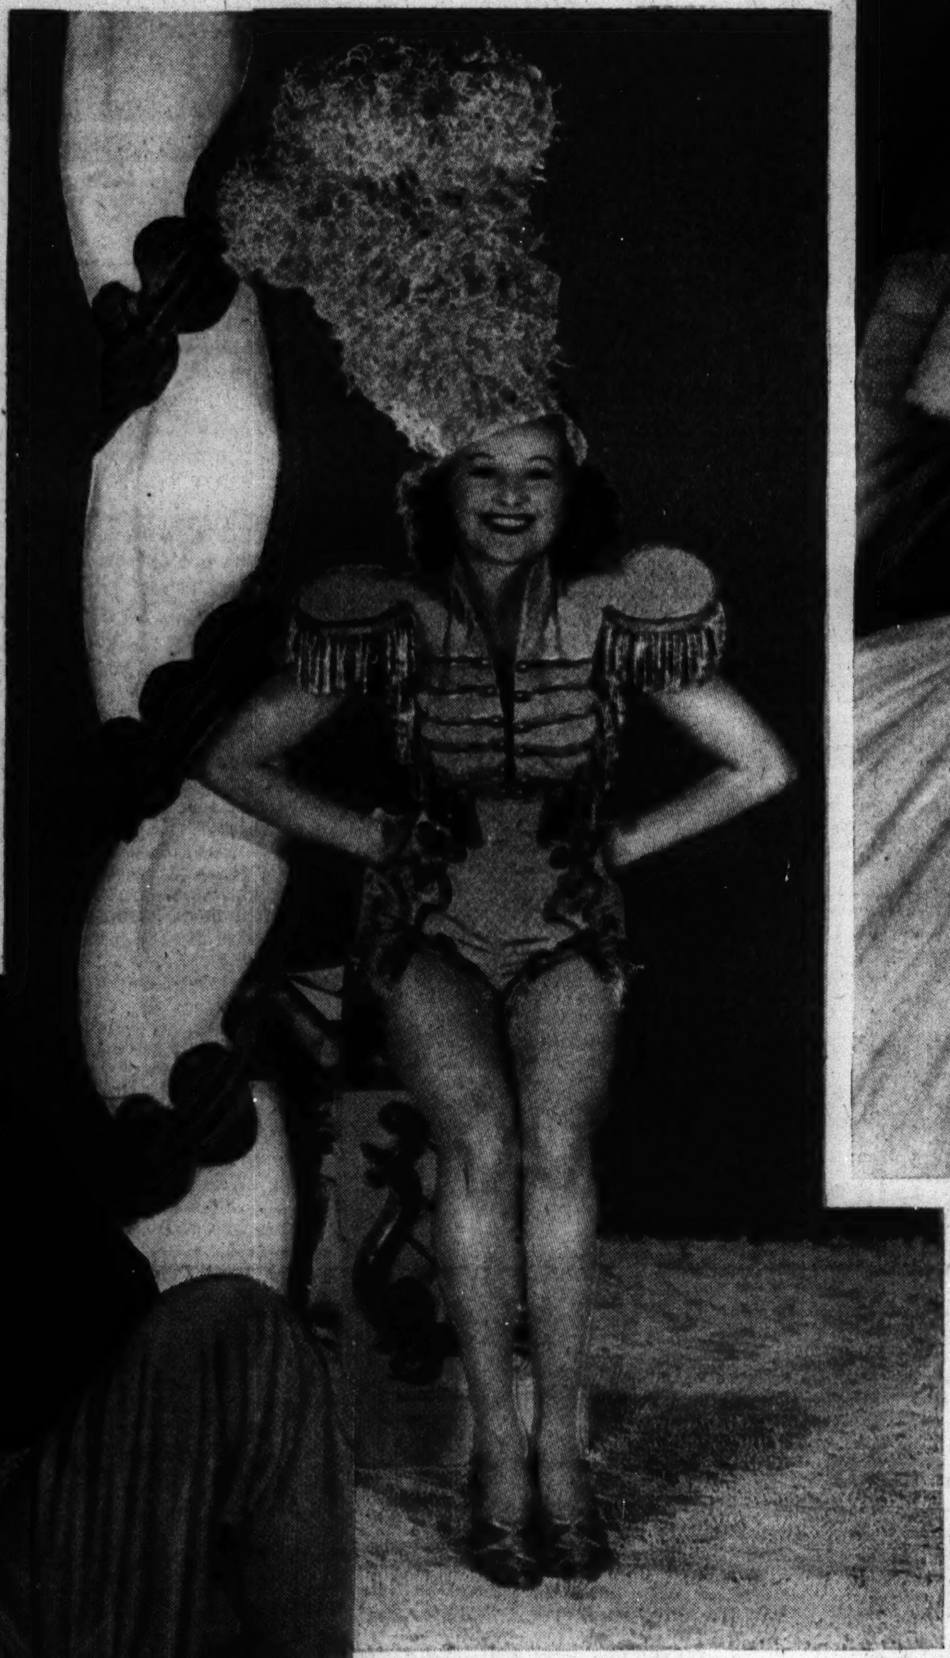
PART 6 MUSIC DRAMA MOVIES HOMEMAKERS EDUCATION

Left: Gene Tierney who has rapidly gained prominence in films is cast as the feminine lead in the Walter Wanger production "Sundown." In this film she appears opposite Bruce Cabot and George Sanders.



Lynda Grey was brought to Hollywood from the New York stage cast of "Louisiana Purchase," and is seen as one of the front-line showgirls in the film version of the musical hit.

The French comedienne, Irene Bordoni, returns to the screen to recreate the same role she portrayed in the stage production "Louisiana Purchase." She's pictured here in the costume she wears in the Mardi Gras sequence of the technicolor picturization.

Left: Eddie Albert, one of filmdom's most promising young actors, is currently appearing in "Thieves Fall Out." Joan Leslie plays the feminine lead.

These Movie Players Are to Be Seen on Chicago Screens

By Mae Tinee.

Gene Tierney who appears in "Sundown," now showing at the neighborhood theaters, doesn't look like a lady of fell determination—but she is. When they told her 14 pounds must come off—off they came, and no starvation dieting either. She walked, she rhumba-ed and she swam. Presto—"Righto!" said her director. Looks fit here, doesn't she?

"Keeping fit" is Lynda Grey's motto, too. It has to be when one's a show girl and a beauty and has hopes of becoming a great emotional actress. As for Irene Bordoni—

This charming Parisienne has been in the public eye for a good many years. She was the darling of the stage in vaudeville and musical comedy and perhaps you remember her in the films "Paris" and "Song of Songs?" Today she holds her own with any of them, as the picture you're looking at bears witness. "I am zenzible, so—I stay yoong!" she says.

Eddie Albert takes life easy, stays a boy at heart and gets along just swell. His best known films are "Brother Rat," "Four Wives," "Brother Rat and a Baby," and "On Your Toes." "Thieves Fall Out" will soon be going the rounds.

Critic Makes Predictions on Future of Chicago Stage

Several N. Y. Successes May Head This Way

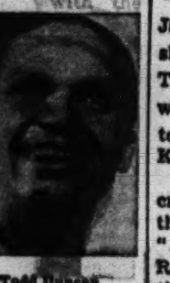
By Cecil Smith.

Neither theme nor thesis unifies these paragraphs today. A week ago my space ran out before I had finished making prattling remarks about the content and value of the current Broadway stage season. This column today consists of leftover observations, bits of snap judgment, and a few prognostications about the probable future of the Chicago stage in terms of the plays which are likely to visit us next fall and winter.

The late George Gershwin has tardily come into his own with Cheryl Crawford's revival of "Porgy and Bess," which is packing the customers into the Majestic theater on 44th street in New York. When the Theater Guild staged Gershwin's folk opera of the Charleston Negroes six years ago the score and production did not fire the public imagination, and the New York run was rather short. The road tour, if I am correct, was more of a success, but it did not break any house records.

• • •

By 1942 the American public has become fully acquainted with the "Porgy and Bess" songs by radio, records, and concert performances. Every one is attending the revival, just as tho he had been enthusiastic about the piece in the first place. And certainly this delayed attention is justified, for Todd Duncan, Ruby Elzy, and Anne Brown have returned for the revival, all of them singing better than ever, and Avon Long, a new Sportin' Life, turns his part into some wonderfully saucy bits of choregraphy.



Todd Duncan. [Talbot photo.]

The familiar songs—"Summer Time," "I've Got Plenty of Nuttin'," and all the rest—retain their full flavor. If the play has any obvious defects, they appear in the continuity between songs. In these passages Gershwin's pseudo-operatic recitative, written without too much regard for either word sense or word rhythm, becomes labored. But this is a minor deficiency in comparison with the vitality of the work as a whole, the fascinating local color, and the splendid choral singing.

• • •

The Broadway play calendar contains three rather trifling plays, all of which are worth attention for one reason or another. Grace George and C. Aubrey Smith, players of great experience and equally great charm, are making something pleasant out of "Spring Again," a featherweight comedy depicting Miss George's efforts to bear up against Mr. Smith's Tory devotion to his dead father, a Civil war general. Against stiffer competition, and without its present leading players, the comedy could easily have failed in two days, but Guthrie McClintic, the producer, was astute enough to realize that Miss George and Mr. Smith could make a successful go of it.

A poorly written psychological drama called "Guest in the House" is causing a good bit of discussion and warding the wolf away from the box office door, all because it has a good basic idea and some good acting by Louise Campbell, Leon Ames, and a newcomer, Mary Anderson. It shows how a young cousin from Cleveland, a near candidate for an asylum, is able nearly to destroy the well founded marriage of Miss Campbell and Mr. Ames by behaving like what the ads call "the all-American five letter female." The script is as full of holes as a late lamented Swiss cheese, but in spite of everything it creates both sympathy and suspense.

• • •

"Café Crown," a light farce comedy laid in a celebrated Jewish café on 2d avenue, is so blithely acted and so neatly directed that it is far more agreeable entertainment than some costlier and more pretentious plays have been. Morris Carnovsky gives a juicy satiric picture of a celebrated, if hammy, Yiddish actor, and Sam Jaffe is in his element as Hymie, the shrewd and wisecracking bus boy. The whole lampoon is carried off with a deliciously light touch, thanks to the intelligent direction of Elia Kazan, lately of the Group theater.

One Broadway attraction which created little but revulsion in me is the revival of Sir James M. Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella," with Luise Rainer of Vienna and the movies as the fantasy-ridden Miss Thing. The Barrie whimsy now seems sententious and unbelievable, and the dream sequence, conventionally choregraphed by Catherine Littlefield, is no more than a trivial patchwork. Miss Rainer works very hard—too hard, to my taste—to bring gayety, pathos, and vividness to the central character. It is a misguided revival, breeding little more than a desire to see Ralph Forbes [who appears as the policeman] in a good part once more.

The present allotment of New York plays will, of course, constitute our principal theater repertory next season. While other plays will come along in the next few months, it is already possible to anticipate a good deal about the Chicago schedule for the first part of the 1942-'43 season.

If transportation facilities permit, half a dozen musicals are likely to come our way. Both "Porgy and Bess" and "Lady in the Dark" [which is having trouble planning in terms of the limited stage dimensions in theaters on the road] are likely to start moving in September or October. "Best Foot Forward," the George Abbott musical with Rosemary Lane and a cast of youngsters, also will probably be ready to travel by then. Eddie Cantor's "Banjo Eyes" and the Olsen and Johnson "Sons o' Fun" are still enjoying such land office business that it is hard to make definite predictions, tho both are slated for ultimate Chicago engagements. Danny Kaye leaves the cast of "Let's Face It" to make a movie in June; the length of the New York run and the potentiality of a tour will depend on the replacement Vinton Freedly is able to find.

• • •

"Junior Miss" heads the list of straight plays for the fall. Its Chicago opening is already penciled in for Sept. 15 at the Harris. "Spring Again" also promises to move across the country at the beginning of the autumn. "Guest in the House," "Café Crown," and "A Kiss for Cinderella" are not now certain enough of their ultimate financial status to lay any secure plans for touring.

Sooner or later, in all probability, we shall also see the three important new spring entrants—John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down," with Otto Kruger; Paul Muni and Jessica Tandy in Emlyn Williams' "Yesterday's Magic," and Katharine Hepburn and Elliott Nugent in Philip Barry's "Without Love." The where and when of these three, so far as Chicago is concerned, are still beyond guess.

PLAYS IN 'SABATEUR'

Priscilla Lane is one reason for seeing "Sabateur," which opens Thursday at the Palace theater.

HUMAN DIVE BOMBER

Jimmy Rae, the human dive bomber, has come back to Chicago and is performing his amazing tumbling feats in the Eddy Duchin show now proving such a hit in the Empire room of the Palmer House.

[Krugimann Photo.]

Drama Notes

"Oy Is Dos a Leben," the Yiddish musical which begins a seven performance engagement at the Civic Opera house Wednesday evening, possesses more general interest than the usual Yiddish attraction, for it brings the stellar comedienne Molly Picon back to Chicago after several years' absence. The show was written by Miss Picon's husband, Jacob Kalich. The plot constitutes a biography, with some artistic license, of Miss Picon herself.

Molly Picon. [Seymour photo.]

Joseph Rumshinsky, known as the "dean of Jewish composers," wrote the score. The cast of 40 includes many personalities who have shared earlier successes with Miss Picon. Among the leading players are Isidore Cashier, Leon Gold, Betty Simonoff, Rose Greenfield, Tillie Rabinowitz, and Sam Kasten. Both Mr. Kalich and Mr. Rumshinsky are also members of the cast. The show is sponsored by Edwin A. Relkin, and presented in Chicago by Harry Zelzer.

•

Putting an end to a Shakespearean drouth of nearly a year ["Twelfth Night" last May was the last previous professional production of Shakespeare in Chicago], Maurice Evans' company in "Macbeth" comes to the Erlanger theater on Monday, April 27, for an engagement sternly limited to two weeks. Mr. Evans himself will, of course, play the title rôle with Judith Anderson as a Lady Macbeth who has won uniform critical enthusiasm wherever she has been seen. Margaret Webster, whose illuminating book, "Shakespeare Without Tears," has recently been published, directed the performance. Much of Miss Webster's renown has arisen from her expert staging of several of Mr. Evans' previous Shakespeare productions — notably "Twelfth Night" and the full length, uncut "Hamlet" which moved so much more swiftly than many a carefully scissored version.

The bloody part of Macbeth is a new one for Mr. Evans. Miss Anderson has not acted Lady Macbeth in this country before, altho she played the part with success in London in 1937. It is one of the two Shakespearean parts Miss Anderson has undertaken, the other having been the Queen in John Gielgud's production of "Hamlet."

Except for performances in Fritz Leiber's short-lived Shakespeare repertory at the Civic theater a dozen years ago, "Macbeth" has not been presented professionally in Chicago since the spring of 1929, when Florence Reed played Lady Macbeth against a background of Gordon Craig's settings.

Samuel Leve designed the settings for Mr. Evans' production, and the costumes are the work of Lemuel Ayers. Lehman Engel composed the incidental musical score. Mr. Evans' and Miss Anderson's supporting cast includes Herbert Rudley, Staats Cotsworth, Harry Irvine, William Hansen, Viola Keats, Henry Brandon, Ada McFarland, Ralph Clanton, Abby Lewis, Philip Huston, Richard Tyler, Alex Courtenay, John Ireland, John Parrish, and John McQuade.

An opportunity to see "The Children's Hour," Lillian Hellman's most successful play before "The Little Foxes" and "Watch on the Rhine," will be afforded by the Actors' Company of Chicago. The play will be given on several consecutive Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays beginning May 1, at the Little Playhouse on the fourth floor at 218 South Wabash avenue. This company, which offers its closing performance of Frank Vosper's "Love for a Stranger" tonight, is giving, under the skilled direction of Minnie Galatzer, by far the most finished and expert performances of any sub-professional theater group this department has run across in Chicago. A young actress in the company, Bette Leake by name, will bear watching, for her emotional power and intuitive skill should inevitably carry her into a distinctive career in the professional theater.

Ted Weems and Band Provide Superb Music

By Will Davidson.

If space and time permitted I could write reams about Weems. The new Blackhawk maestro has been kicking the song around for a passel of years, and being of a slightly whimsical turn of mind, has picked up enough experiences—including an antedeluvian Reo—to fill a goodly volume.

But the important thing is that Ted has brought his shining pate and his hesitant humor into this loop mecca for a sort of musical rebirth. You'd hardly recognize the band if it weren't for Elmo Tanner's puckered lips, and Perry Como's Mature good looks. The band swings and it blares, it modulates and it jumps. It entertains and it sighs over ballads. What Samuel Lesner so beautifully calls the jiveden set might not accept Ted's music as authentic groove stuff, but the less specialized public should find it a lot of fun.

Tanner, of course, whistles like no bird Audubon ever thought of, Como tremolos on those haunting low notes with the old throb, and Orme Downes beats the drums with splendid abandon. You expect that in a Weems band. But you are hardly prepared for the superbly hilarious pantomime of buxom Billy Blair, or for the exquisite trumpet harmony of Dee Palmer and George Hossfeld.

All these Weems specialties make up the major part of the Blackhawk floor show. The one outside act is a good one—the funny, dancing McKays. Their best number is a highly imaginative demonstration of how various dances were born.

Another band veteran, Henry King, is back in town, this time at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Henry has a quiet, slightly inconclusive band, but you can't help liking the dignified way in which it makes hey-hey. There is a pleasant feel of rhythm to its music, and a nice blending of instruments. Stately Mae Allen is a very attractive singer. I imagine that the Marine room crowds will be quite happy about Henry's four week run.

Dorothy Dorben has given her dancing girls a lovely and flowery routine for the finale, and a peppy little "Louisiana Hayride" turn as an opener. Inside this very pleasing framework is a practically blank space. The Singing Marines have nothing beyond the inevitable male sextet numbers to offer—with the gracious exception of the voice of Blanche Bradley—and Pritchard and Lord hardly measure up to Edgewater Beach standards in dance teams, altho the girl exhibits a remarkable workmanship in her fast spins.

As an antitdote to current talk of ideologies, give me some of Cab Calloway's hi-de-hology. The Cab is in the Panther room, and doing beautifully, thank you. When you hear him sing "Nain, Nain" you hear a new Calloway, one who has developed a dramatic touch, a flare for moods almost mystical and oriental. When you see him dance thru his baton work, you see showmanship under good control. And when you listen to his band you hear power well directed into whatever channel the mood dictates.

From Cab's band come the Cabaliers, a quartet that supplies excellent background for Cab's solos; and the Cab Jivers, consisting of Cozy Dole, dream drummer, Jonah Jones, trumpeter last seen in the room with Stuff Smith; Milt Hinton, bass, Danny Burke, guitar, Teddy McRae, tenor sax, and Tyree Glenn, vibraphone. It is fortunate that they entertain so well, because the floor show is weak. Ken Davidson and Hugh Forgie do about as well as could be expected with their badminton demonstration considering the low ceiling, and the models, like Tennyson's brook, go on forever, modeling the same styles.

Altho the current show at Harry's New Yorker carries on the title of the very successful first Music Hall revue, it has little resemblance, in form, to that most original production. That is not to intimate, however, that this is not a good show. It's swell. Once again it is a well rounded unit, neatly balanced, and swiftly paced. Lya Lys, nominally the star, provides a new note for Harry's—what is generally called continental. Svelte and sincere, she goes thru some risque patter songs that are amusing because she doesn't feel it necessary to sledge hammer the double entendre. Miss Lys is making her night club debut here and on opening night had not achieved anything sensational in the way of an act, but she found approval in a case hardened bistro crowd, and that is much to her credit.

Tung Ping Su, a very adept magician hiding behind a Chinese makeup, and Burns and White, who enjoy their fast dance turns as much as the customers do, give variety to the revue. Jackie Green, emcee, is the kingpin of the show, of course, and the Selma Marlowe starlets continue to grow in ability and attractiveness. Marjorie Lane and Shirley Avery of the line do a cute old fashioned dance, and Miss Avery stars in the line's dance impression routine, doing a clever Ray Bolger turn.

The old time movie newsreel is given a superb accompaniment by Arne Barnett, whose band plays the show. "The Three of Us," instrumental trio, join the show for a song number, and a couple of blackout skits complete the revue.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Gypsy Markoff and her accordion are now starring at the Yar . . . The new show at Helsing's Vodvil lounge includes Tony Marks, magician, Preston Lambert, singing emcee, Hank Siemon, ventriloquist, Chet Roble, pianist, Lillian Clark, singer, and The New Yorkers, featuring Dorothy Davis . . . Succinct comment on Stuff Smith's music at the Garrick stage bar, as reported by the room's boswell: "Very itchy and with a tap-tap."

Eddy Duchin has broken his own single night record in the Empire room of the Palmer House. Rates a holdover thru June 24, then plans to go into the army. . . . The Service Men's center has inaugurated Wednesday night dancing. Cab Calloway was there last week, and Duchin, the Dorseys, and Glenn Miller are scheduled. . . . José Manzanares of the La Salle's Pan-American café, likes to play familiar tunes, with Latin words. . . . Friday night finds fragile Yvette and superb John Buckmaster coming into the Mayfair room of the Blackstone. . . . Phil Regan, singer, bows into Chez Paree tomorrow, replacing the departed Jean Fábion.

Gower Champion, of Gower and Jeanne, the highly talented young dancers in the Empire room of the Palmer House, expresses sorrow over my dismissal of his "London Suite" as "too interpretive." He very logically and understandably says he wants to get away from strictly dance team numbers, and admits that perhaps he had his eye too much on the concert stage when he designed the dance. I could reverse my term to "not interpretive enough" and still be consistent. In other words, I felt that the dance, gracefully done, did not succeed, if its purpose was to create a visual impression of a specific scene or mood; and that if it were just a routine with a theme, it was shackled by a "too interpretive" treatment. But all power to a team that wants to grow and achieve. If any youngsters do, Gower and Jeanne will, for they are superb.

Spring thought: It was one of those balmy nights—with air raid wardens out in force.

CHEZ PAREE DANCERS

Superb imagination and technical skill make the dance routines of Mata and Hari one of the top features of the current show at Chez Paree.

Martha Raye, the supercharged singer and comedienne, takes the place of honor in this week's stage bill at the Oriental theater. After establishing herself as a great movie favorite, Miss Raye ventured onto the stage in Al Jolson's musical comedy, "Hold on to Your Hats," and made an enormous success. When Miss Raye romps thru her songs, she will be accompanied at the piano by Mickey Freeman. Other featured acts at the Oriental are the Condos brothers, dancers; Keaton and Arnfield, the Three Arnolds, Ted Lester, and Ray Lange and his orchestra. "The Man Who Returned to Life" is on the screen.

Kay Kyser brings his audience-participation feature, the "Kollege of Musical Knowledge," back to the Chicago theater this week, along with his celebrated orchestra. This is his first appearance in the big downtown house since March, 1938. His show features Ish Kabibble, Sully Mason, Henry Babbitt, and three girl singers, Dorothy Dunn, Julie Conway, and Trudie Erwin. The film is "Design for Scandal."

This week the Rialto theater celebrates its 25th anniversary by offering 25 units of stage and screen entertainment. An augmented chorus is enhanced by the presence of Maxine De Shon and an unusually large roster of comedians, singers, dancers, and strippeuses. A new brunette discovery, Frances O'Brien, is also starred. On the screen is the Hal Roach comedy, "All American Co-Ed."

Notes of the Theater

Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine," widely considered the most affecting of all anti-Nazi plays, is moving this way step by step. This week the company may be seen at the Cass theater in Detroit. The week of April 27 will be spent at the big American theater in St. Louis. The week of May 4 will be divided among three cities, Milwaukee, Rockford, and Madison. The Chicago opening takes place at the Grand Opera house on May 11. The play will be the sixth and final subscription item of the Theater Guild and American Theater society.

The headlong speed of "Blithe Spirit," the Noel Coward farce at the Selwyn theater, keeps everyone concerned extremely busy. No single individual connected with the play has a more crucial job, however, than Charva Chester, one of the few woman stage managers in the legitimate theater. Every evening Miss Chester must see that no fewer than 479 properties, large and small, are in place and in working order. Her technical staff includes Arthur Marlowe, assistant stage manager, and four property men who keep invisibly busy slamming the lid on the phonograph, seeing that vases and pictures fall off the walls at the appointed moments, and providing cucumber sandwiches for Estelle Winwood, who plays the rôle of Mme. Arcati, the medium. Miss Chester was an actress before becoming a stage manager for the first time with the Lunts' productions of "The Taming of the Shrew" and "There Shall Be No Night."

A glance at Vivian Austin, ingénue of the unrepressed farce, "Good Night, Ladies," at the Blackstone, explains fully her success in various beauty contests. For three successive years prior to 1940, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce bestowed upon her the title of Miss Los Angeles and Hollywood. Gene Mellott is another member of the cast who has been singled out for her beauty. James Montgomery Flagg recently included her in his series of drawings of film celebrities.

Chicago Symphony Closes 51st Season Saturday Night

Dr. Stock to Conduct Last 1942 Concert

By Edward Barry.

A little after 10 o'clock next Saturday night Frederick Stock will lay down his baton and, if he is as human as he seems to be, give a long sigh of relief. This will be the end not merely of another concert but of the whole 51st season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Dr. Stock can look back on a grueling schedule of 115 concerts, the vast majority of which he himself conducted. He can take satisfaction in the widely admitted fact that this 51st season has been at least as eventful and rewarding as the golden jubilee season which preceded it.

Saturday night's popular concert will be preceded by three others during this final week, each of them constituting a farewell to some segment of the orchestra's following. The last young people's concert is due Wednesday afternoon, the last concerts in the two principal subscription series Thursday night and Friday afternoon. Dr. Stock will direct all four of the week's sessions.

• • •

The closing Thursday-Friday program is a solemn one, built around the grave first symphony of Brahms and including also the funeral march and Brünnhilde's atonement from Wagner's "Twilight of the Gods."

The Brahms symphony is now a traditional item of the closing Thursday-Friday program, and it never fails to arouse the audience to ecstasy. We like to be reminded at least once a year that Chicago regards itself, with some reason, as the center of the best Brahms playing to be heard in this hemisphere if not in the world, and this superlative annual performance of the first symphony constitutes just such a reminder.

It is not merely that this symphony is the biggest and most stunning of the four works in this form which Brahms wrote, but that the performance of it keeps alive a stern, austerely majestic Brahms who has largely disappeared from some other major music centers. The Brahms we hear in Chicago is a Brahms without any suggestion of sugariness or mere prettiness about him. He is forthright, rugged, and uncompromising.

• • •

Saturday night's audience will hear the beautiful D minor symphony of Dvorak, a work which has been prominent on this year's subscription concerts. The fact that this is the Dvorak centennial season [the gifted Bohemian composer was born in September of 1841] may account for the number of playings this symphony has received, but no such extramusical reason for its inclusion on programs is needed. It is a warm, sincere, melodious work which deserves to be heard often for its own sake.

All of this week's concerts, like the great majority of the 111 which have preceded them, will be played in Orchestra hall. Programs for the three adult concerts follow:

Thursday at 8:15 and Friday at 2:15.

Passacaglia and Fugue, C minor.......Bach
Symphony No. 1, C Minor.........Brahms
Symphonic Waltz, Opus 8.............Stock
[By request.]

Saturday at 8:15.

Symphony No. 2, D minor............Dvorak
Overture to "The Flying Dutchman".Wagner
Moto Perpetuo............................Paganini
[Played by all the violins.]

Louise Meiszner, the 17 year old pianist who made a successful appearance with the Civic orchestra on April 4 and who has a great deal of study and concert work both in this country and Europe to her credit, will play an Orchestra hall recital this afternoon. She has scheduled Beethoven's 32 variations and Chopin's B flat minor sonata as well as a Liszt transcription of a Bach organ prelude and fugue, the Siloti transcription of Liszt's "Benediction de Dieu dans la Solitude," a Griffes scherzo, a Brockway serenade, and the Ravel toccata.

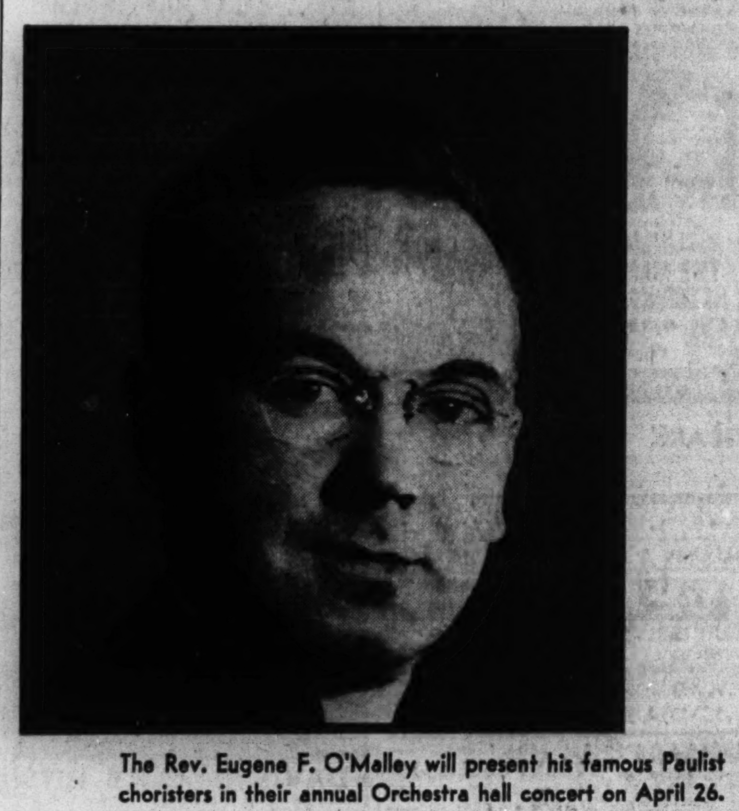
The Illinois WPA Symphony orchestra will have a guest conductor and a guest soloist at its regular Monday night concert in the Eighth Street theater tomorrow night. The former is José Echaniz, the Cuban pianist who has lately been active in the field of music education in Illinois and who has made several previous appearances as guest conductor of the Illinois orchestra. The latter is Philip Warner, Chicago pianist and composer, who is to contribute a new concerto of his own to the program. Of the purely orchestral items the most important is the Sibelius second symphony. Toch's "Pinocchio," subtitled "A Merry Overture," and a suite from "La Rebambaramba," by the Cuban composer, Amadeo Roldan, complete the program.

• • •

The free midday "Victory" concert at Fullerton hall in the Art institute next Wednesday will be given, as usual, by the Illinois WPA Symphonic ensemble. The conductor will be Albert Goldberg, state supervisor of the Illinois Music project, who has not yet appeared in this series. His program will consist of Benjamin Britten's "A Simple Symphony," which has never been performed locally, and a Handel concerto grosso in F major. Britten has recently returned to England after a two year visit to America, during which he made two appearances with the Illinois WPA Symphony orchestra in Chicago. These "Victory" concerts are sponsored by the Art institute as an aid to civilian morale.

DIRECTS NEXT SUNDAY



The Rev. Eugene F. O'Malley will present his famous Paulist choristers in their annual Orchestra hall concert on April 26.

Notes of Music and Musicians

The San Carlo Opera company concludes its eight day engagement at the Civic Opera house with performances of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Leoncavallo's "Pagliacci" tonight. The former will be sung by Bianca Saroya, Charlotte Bruno, Louise Warren, Sydney Rayner, and Stefan Kozakevich; the latter by Leola Turner, Harold Lindi, Mostyn Thomas, and Stefan Kozakevich. Carlo Peroni will conduct. This is Mme. Saroya's sole appearance with the company during its present engagement.

Vincent Geraci, the 22 year old piano-accordionist who is to give a recital in the Eighth Street theater this afternoon, is a native Chicagoan and has done all his studying here. He believes his instrument is a legitimate medium for concert music of the highest type. His program consists of works by Scarlatti, Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Wagner, Chopin, Tschaikowski, and Chabrier—some of them taken from the piano repertoire, others from the orchestral.

The Rosary College Glee club will give a concert at the college recital hall tonight. Gregory Konold will direct. The soloist is to be Rosemary Gannon, soprano.

Peter Melnikoff, pianist, promises a program of Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Chopin, Schumann, Liszt, Debussy, Scriabine, and Rachmaninoff for his Curtiss hall recital of this afternoon.

The Westervelt Vocal ensemble, Louise St. John Westervelt, director, will give a concert in the Cordon club this afternoon. Carl Strum, tenor, will be the assisting artist.

Rudolph Ganz, resident pianist, conductor and educator, will be guest speaker at the annual spring luncheon of Iota Alpha chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon, national music honor society, next Wednesday at the Cordon club. Rachel Boothroyd, president of the chapter, will preside. The musical program will be given by Ruth Slater, contralto; Florence Henline, pianist; Dorothy Stahl, soprano, and a trio consisting of Charlotte Chambers, violinist; Edith Anthony, flutist, and Martha McCormick, pianist. Dorothy Scott Mayer and Helen Morton will provide accompaniments.

The Chicago Christian High School and Alumni a cappella choirs will give their annual spring concert at Orchestra hall Friday evening. James Baar is to conduct.

Ida Hartman, Indiana born pianist who is now a resident of Chicago, will give her first local recital Wednesday night at Kimball hall. Three major Beethoven works appear on her program—the set of 32 variations in C minor, the D minor sonata from opus 31, and the C major sonata, opus 53. Chopin, Brahms, Shostakovich, Poulenc, and Toch are also represented.

Ida Hartman.

Charles Demorest will give a free organ recital at Kimball hall Friday noon under the auspices of the Illinois chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

The free concert of recorded music to be given in the assembly hall of the Chicago Public library Saturday afternoon offers music by Griffes, Sibelius [the violin concerto], Bellini, and Stravinsky [the "Fire-Bird" suite].

The American Opera company will present Verdi's "La Traviata" next Saturday evening and again on May 10, and Bizet's "Carmen" on May 3. All performances are in Kimball hall.

Musical Arts series. Unrestricted public sale of season tickets for next year's Musical Arts piano series has now begun at the offices of the Adult Education council, 224 South Michigan avenue. Old subscribers were given an opportunity to exercise their options during the first four weeks of the renewal drive. Now the council is offering all seats which remain to new subscribers. The pianists engaged for this popular priced series for the season of 1942-'43 are Claudio Arrau, Artur Schnabel, Rosalyn Tureck, Guiomar Novaes, Rudolf Serkin, and Dorothy Crost.

Northwestern university's glee clubs, symphony orchestra and dance group will present an elaborate and interesting program in Cahn auditorium of Scott hall Wednesday evening. George Howerton, George Dasch and Janet Nash direct the glee clubs, the orchestra and the dance group, respectively. Mary Ann Kaufman will be the soprano soloist. The feature of the program will be Roy Harris' Folk Song Symphony, in the performance of which all three groups will take part. Harris conducted at least one of the preparatory rehearsals.

The Paulist choristers, under the direction of the Rev. Eugene F. O'Malley, will climax their 38th season with a concert in Orchestra hall next Sunday. The program includes ancient music by Palestrina, Byrd, Gibbons, and Di Lasso, modern Russian works by Rachmaninoff and Gretchaninoff, and a motet written by Leo Sowerby, Chicago composer, especially for the Paulist choristers. This motet has never before been presented in concert.

The Glee Club of the Chicago Association of Commerce, Herbert E. Hyde, director, is to give its 30th annual concert in Orchestra hall Wednesday evening. The club is composed of 90 business men whose companies are members of the association of commerce. One evening a week is devoted to rehearsal. The guest artist at the Wednesday concert will be the distinguished Russian soprano, Maria Kurenko. The program is a varied one, including sacred music, folk songs, and at least one humorous work. Mme. Kurenko's contributions will consist of Russian folk songs, operatic excerpts, and miscellaneous pieces. She will be heard with the club in Schubert's "Omnipotence." Accompaniments will be played by William Sumner, pianist, and Robert Birch, organist, for the glee club; and by Robert Macdonald, pianist, for Mme. Kurenko.

Maria Kurenko.

The Glee Club of the School of the Art Institute will be heard in concert in Blackstone hall this afternoon and next Wednesday afternoon. Charles Fabens Kelley is the club's director.

The Medinah Ladies' Choral club will present its annual concert in the club lounge this afternoon.

Colin McPhee, an authority on exotic music, will lecture on the music of Bali at the Arts club Wednesday morning.

Chilean Music Develops Under Dr. Santa Cruz

By Cecil Smith.

Domingo Santa Cruz, as delightful and far sighted an ambassador of Pan-American good will as has ever visited Chicago, ardently desires to let the United States know that the republic of Chile is doing big things in music. Dr. Santa Cruz is in a good position to know what he is talking about, for he himself is responsible for much of Chile's exceptional musical development in the last decade. As president of the Institute of Musical Extension, which administers the government supported orchestral and chamber music of Chile, and as head of the fine arts department of the University of Chile he is a prime mover in cultural affairs down in our sister democracy.

The secret of music in Chile, he reveals, is that in spite of the fact that it exists by government subsidy the corrupting influence of politics has never been allowed to exert its destructive sway over musical institutions and policies. A tax of 2½ per cent, collected on all public recreational events, is turned over to the Institute of Musical Extension, and out of this income are supported the Orquesta Sinfonica de Chile, a notable string quartet, and a host of other musical activities.

• • •

The Orquesta Sinfonica, or symphony orchestra, has been placed upon a fully professional basis. From the evidence of phonograph records made recently its level of performance very nearly equals that of the best orchestras in the United States. Last year the orchestra played 116 concerts [about the same number as the Chicago Symphony orchestra plays, exclusive of Ravinia, Grant park, and out of town dates]. Most of these were given in Santiago, Valparaiso, and Concepcion, the principal cities of Chile. The orchestra does, however, tour to other towns, bringing good music before a considerable portion of the country's population. Armando Carvajal is the permanent conductor; European and North American guest conductors sometimes appear.

Last season the orchestra's schedule included a Beethoven festival conducted by Erich Kleiber, who now spends all his time making the rounds of South American orchestras; a special concert series giving opportunities to several domestic conductors; collaboration in 20 programs with Lincoln Kirstein's American Ballet; and a two months' season of opera. The orchestra is required by its charter to serve as the official opera orchestra, but Dr. Santa Cruz confesses that the performances at the opera house have not yet been brought up to the standard which obtains in Chile's best symphonic and chamber concerts.

• • •

Musical composition is an art of constantly expanding importance in Chile. Last week Dr. Santa Cruz and his attractive assistant, Miss Filomina Salas, were good enough to play a historical series of records of Chilean music. From his expert selection of records it was possible to see that native musical composition in Chile has moved from adolescence to adulthood within the space of a single generation.

The most prominent Chilean composer of the older generation is Humberto Allende. A symphonic poem entitled "Escenas Campesinas," composed in 1922, revealed his indebtedness to late German romanticism, to coloristic French impressionism, and to a characteristically pre-World War I musical ideology.

• • •

A unique, tho not particularly up to date, creative artist is Alfonso Leng, who divides his time between music, medicine, and scientific investigation. A Fantasia for piano and orchestra, brilliantly played by a young Chilean pianist named Hugo Fernandez [who seemingly ought to follow in the footsteps of Claudio Arrau in a North American tour], sounded amazingly like Scriabin, altho Dr. Santa Cruz assured us that Dr. Leng was not familiar with Scriabin at the time he composed the Fantasia.

Audiences in the United States would particularly enjoy Prospero Bisquertt's "Noche Buena" ["Christmas Eve"], a symphonic poem full of interesting dance rhythms, brilliant orchestral effects, and mementoes of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" and "Spanish Rhapsody." Of deeper musical value, however, were two groups of Chilean Indian songs arranged by Carlos Isamitt. These songs, some for soprano and others for baritone, are quite extraordinary. The simple figurations of the tunes have been preserved and set against an orchestral background so imaginative and evocative that each song becomes a tiny character piece or dramatic episode. This music urgently deserves performance in this part of the world.

• • •

So also does Dr. Santa Cruz's own altogether masterly Suite for String Orchestra. In the depth and sobriety of its musical ideas and in the high quality of its workmanship this fine work surpasses anything else I have ever heard from any South American composer. The thematic material is full of vigor, the contrapuntal texture of the parts is rich and natural, and the orchestration provides effective and varied sonorities. It is to be hoped that this superior work will find its way onto a Chicago Symphony orchestra program next season.

A session with Dr. Santa Cruz provides illuminating proof of the musical vitality of Chile. The good neighbor policy could provide no more agreeable by-product than a fuller knowledge of the music of this intelligent, forward looking nation.

Current Music News

Bertha Ott events scheduled for late April and May in Kimball hall include a recital by Fern Hammers, contralto, next Sunday, one by William Benes, violinist, on May 9, and a joint recital by Perry Essig Crafton, violinist, and Dorothy Korn, organist, on May 27. The recital announced by Miss Korn for April 20 has been postponed.

The Chicago Business Men's orchestra will have Frederick Stock as guest conductor when it plays its Orchestra hall concert on April 29. Soloist will be Agnes Conover, pianist. The program's two principal items are Sibelius' first symphony and Beethoven's fourth piano concerto.

Edith Montlack, pianist, gives her first Chicago recital in the Civic theater this afternoon. She is said to have many New York recitals and radio appearances to her credit. She has not confined herself to music but has been active as an artist also, winning the St. Gaudens medal and a water color award at two different stages of her career. Her program today is an imposing one, including the A flat sonata, opus 110, of Beethoven; the difficult Schütt transcription of Strauss' "Tales from the Vienna Woods"; the Liszt-Paganini "La Campanella," and a variety of smaller works.

The Civic Music association's 29th annual festival will be held in Orchestra hall the afternoon of Sunday, May 3. A 500 voice children's chorus under Marx E. Oberndorfer's direction will provide the bulk of the music.

The Catholic Casino Male chorus, Adalbert Huguelet, director, will give its 70th anniversary concert in the Civic theater next Sunday night.

Carleton Will Offer Full Air, Naval Courses

By the Rev. John Evans.

Carleton college's naval ensign and V program, described by a naval officer as the "finest thing I've heard of proposed by any educational institution for boy, school, and the service," was announced by Dr. Donald J. Cowling, president of the Northfield, Minn., college last week.

Boys interested in the army will be provided for in the new Carleton set-up which will include courses called for by the new army air force enlisted reserve.

The announcement described the courses as probably being the first completely rounded naval and aviation training opportunity offered by any liberal arts college in the country. Everything is provided on the campus for the full ensign training course except the required three months' cruise. Complete preliminary air training is to be offered at the Northfield airport where navy officers will act in an advisory capacity.

• • •

Flight instruction will be given by instructors under government contract, the announcement stated, and the five general year round programs involving specialized training will be instituted. These are:

1. Government standardized flight instruction courses and instructors' training combined with ground school courses. A similar course will be instituted which leads to the V-5 program and to a similar marine program.
2. Navy V-1 program of studies, which may include flight training, depending on scholastic and physical qualifications.
3. Navy V-7, including specialized work in mathematics, and the physical sciences, especially astronomy and navigation.
4. Navy A-V course to train specialists in photography, aerology, and naval intelligence.
5. Marine aviation, to train men for the marine air corps.

• • •

The announcements stated that approximately 300 men will be admitted to the corps, which will be under the general supervision of a board of advisors, including Lieut. Comm. Truman Penny of the United States navy, who described the Carleton set-up as being the "finest thing I've heard of." Others on the board are Lieut. Gordon Tucker of the naval reserve corps, Capt. John V. Kipp, commander of the marine corps reserve aviation unit at the naval reserve aviation base, Wold-Chamberlain field, Minneapolis, Minn., and Brig. Gen. Frederick E. Uhl, commander of the 7th corps area, United States army, Omaha, Neb.

Half the student corps personnel will be reserved for freshmen entering in September with the other 150 memberships open to men already at the college. Men may secure all the necessary training for the various service branches while continuing work toward a bachelor's degree. Negotiations are under way for the purchase of land for the Carleton flying field on which the government will build three hangars and regularly employ at least four planes for phases of flight training. Planes from the Wold-Chamberlain field also will be regularly stationed at the Carleton field beginning in September.

Courses described as especially strong in celestial navigation, camouflage, aerial photography, map information service, currents, and trade winds of the southwest Pacific were announced. The last named work will be in charge of Prof. Laurence McK. Gould, navigator and second in command of Adm. Richard E. Byrd's first Antarctic expedition.

CLASSICAL RECORDINGS

The wide and permanent appeal of Wagner's "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg" is well known to makers of concert programs and manufacturers of records. Columbia has released a new album of excerpts from the great music drama, an album which offers in compact form three strongly contrasting types of music.

There is the grave prelude to the third act, the puckish dance of the apprentices, and the lordly procession of the mastersingers. In the first named is to be found the most exalted music in the entire score of "The Mastersingers." Operagoers will remember that the principal theme of this prelude becomes the basis of the townsfolk's sublime welcome to Sachs in the following act.

The excerpts are well played by the Pittsburgh Symphony orchestra under Fritz Reiner's direction.

Columbia has re-issued Mozart's Symphony No. 25, in G Minor. It is played by the Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra of New York under John Barbirolli's direction and evidently uses a larger instrumental body than the earlier recording by Alfred Wallenstein and his Sinfonietta. This symphony is good early Mozart [it was written when the composer was still in his 'teens]. Naturally, it has little emotional force, but it is beautifully contoured and full of charming musical ideas.

"Young Man with a Horn" to Be Staged Next Fall

"Young Man with a Horn," the successful novel by Dorothy Baker and Edward A. Blatt, is due for stage presentation early next fall. The title rôle, reputedly based on the life of the late Bix Biederbecke, will employ the services of Leonard Sues, a young California trumpet player who is one of the few good aspects of the current "Johnny 2x4" in New York.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

There will soon ease into your lives, via neighborhood screens, a quiet, sparkling-eyed little man known as Mr. Redfern.

Mr. Redfern is in the bond paper business. He lives with his wife, his daughter—engaged to a youth whose eyes are too close together—and a parasitical sister-in-law and her husband, in a modest home, situated in a London suburb known as Laburnum Grove.

His hobby is gardening, and when not away on business, the little man is to be found happily puttering about in his conservatory.

The last man—and the last family—in the world, you would say, to become involved in a Scotland Yard investigation. . . . But this is just what happens.

Edmund Gwynne, who appeared on the stage in "Laburnum Grove," gives a foxy and fascinating performance. . . . I was intrigued, too, with the Sir Cedric Hardwicke of an earlier day. . . . Such—er—girth! And the mustachios, my dears! He's a slick actor now—and he was just as slick away back when this film was screened. Other players are perfectly cast.

Direction, I thought most astute. . . . As for ending, it'll startle you in a way that's rare and satisfying. [I'll let you ponder over that cryptic remark—and the picture solve its meaning.]

The most striking characteristics of "Laburnum Grove" are this finale and the casual accustomedness of all the action. Here is a touch which Hollywood seldom achieves.

See you tomorrow.

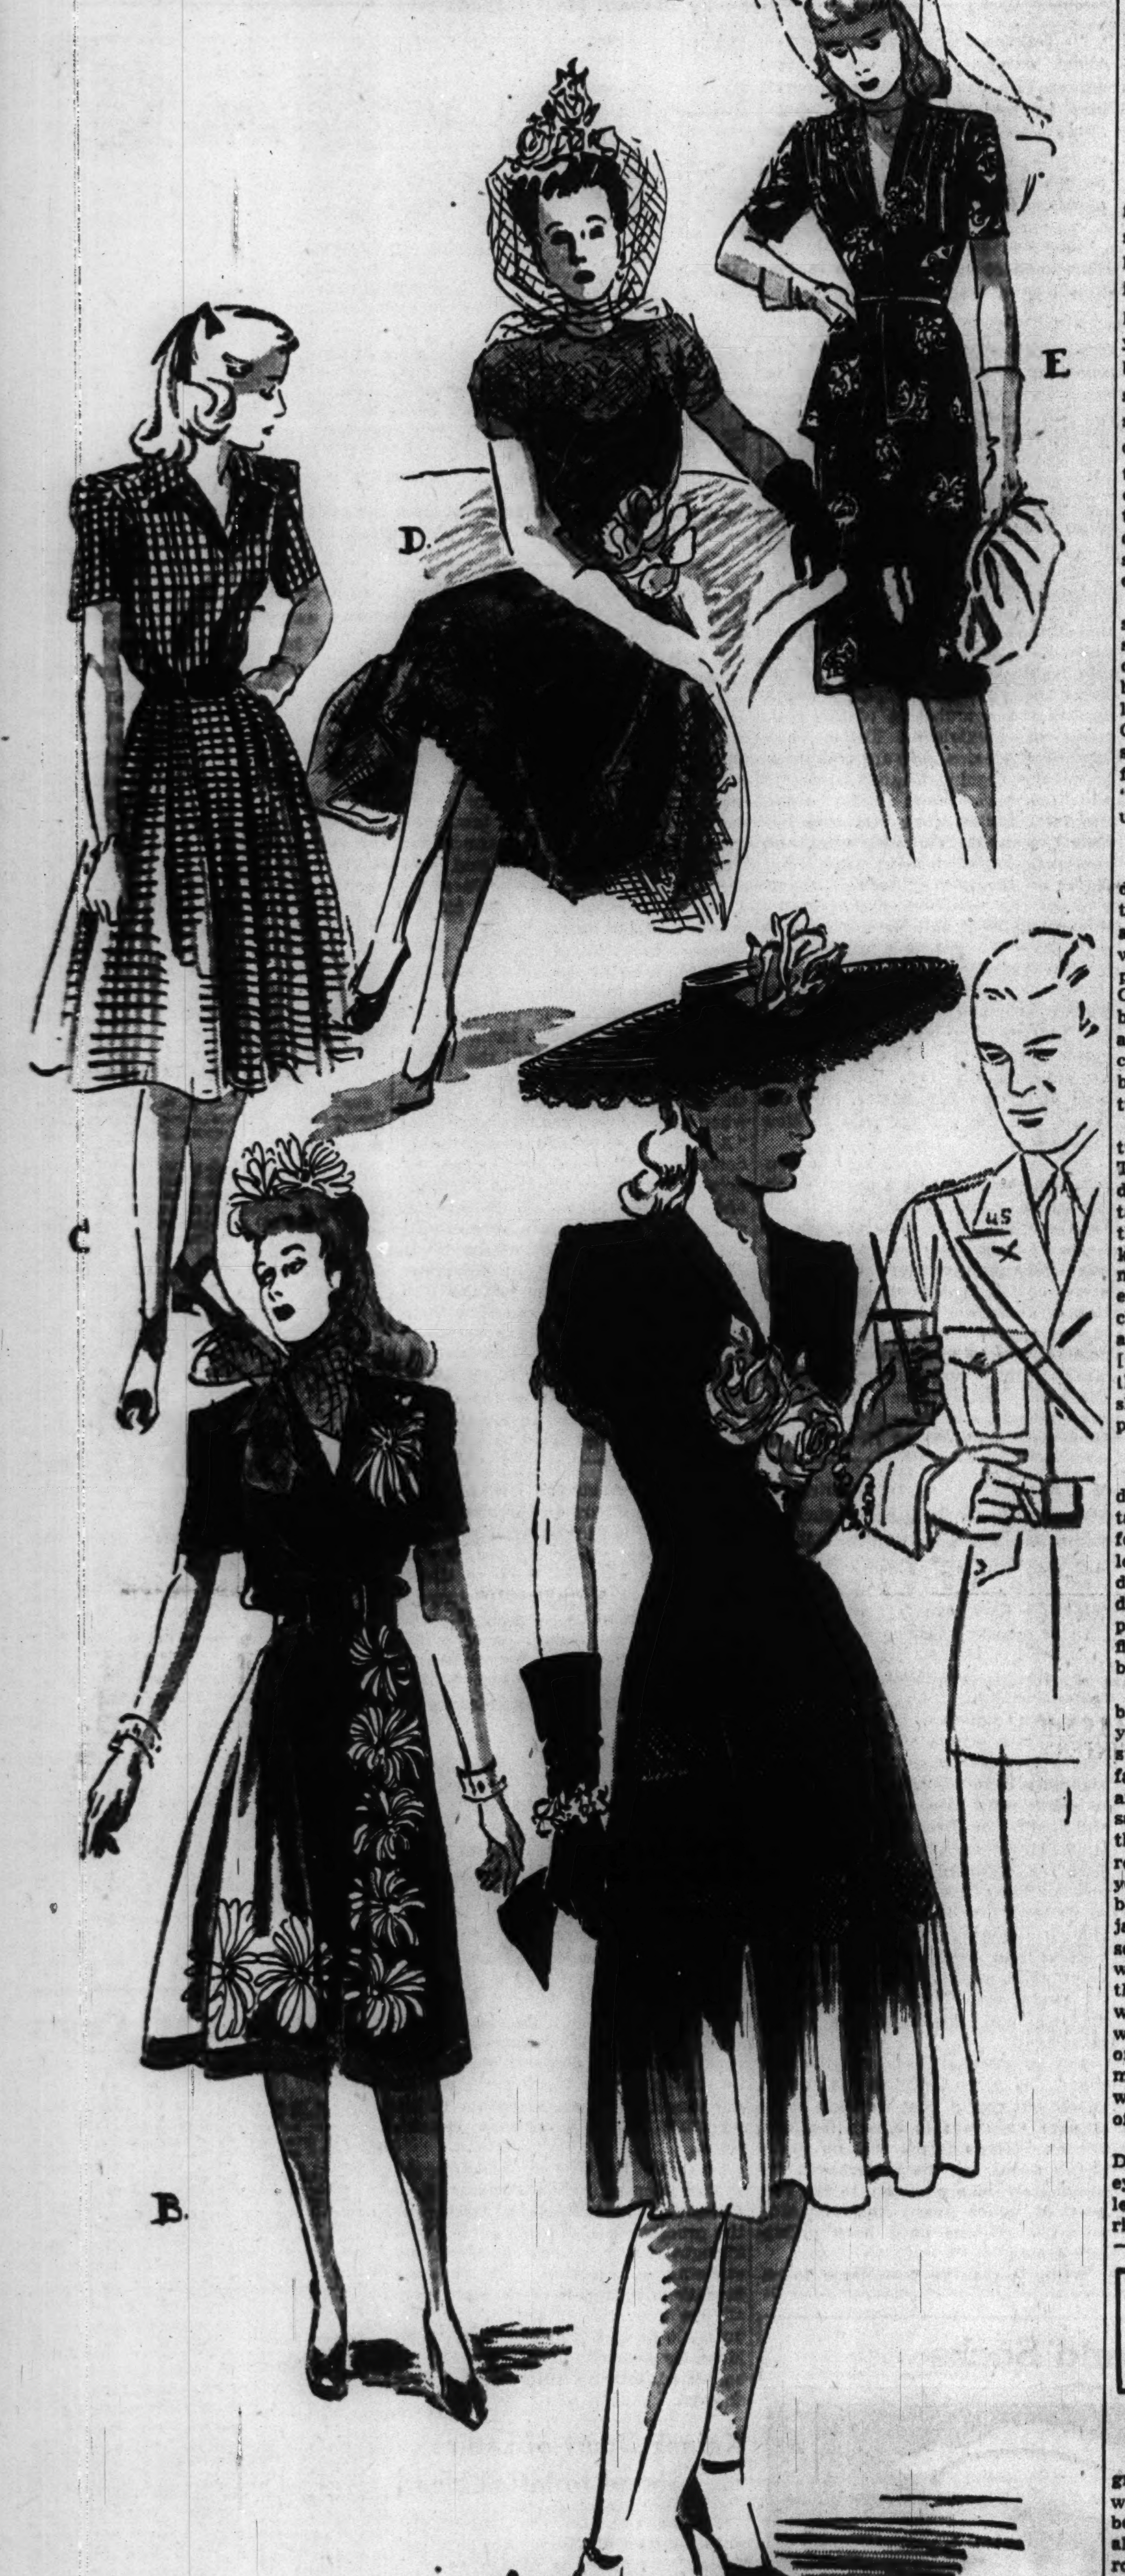
Dress Parade Frocks Are Cheering to Slim Purses

All-Occasion Spring Frocks



• A . . . Party or afternoon dress of dark sheer, featuring new gathered, full skirt with hipline smooth in slenderizing outline. Two rows of dark lace emphasize flare of skirt. • B . . . Unusual print dress, with appliqued white daisies used only sparingly along lower edge of skirt in front and up sideswept closing. Rest of dress is black magic. • C . . . Crisp, neat as a pin, ready for any daytime occasion is small-checked, taffeta daytime frock. Short skirt has unpressed plaits, and shirtwaist top with elbow length sleeves is universally becoming. White pique or sheer organdy vestees, collars, and cuffs may be added for quick change. • D . . . Sheer flattery for any party or escort in or out of uniform is this enticingly feminine frock with circular cut flared skirt of filmy sheer banded in dark lace, bodice repeating the treatment. • E . . . Unquestionably the smartest black and white printed dress of spring. Material is dull, clinging crepe dramatized with snowy white embroidery in small floral design.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer need, please let me place them with needy families. Spring fever soon will be prevalent. Everyone has an urge to shrug off the gray garb of winter, to let the sunshine and the soft green signposts of spring bring new life and hope.

To the invalid, who already has been denied so much, it is a time of wistful yearning which often must go unfulfilled. This is particularly true of those who are without means, who are dependent upon the charity of agencies or relatives for existence.

• • •

We hope some reader can supply one for Miss Z., who wrote:

"Dear Miss Brown: I read in your column in THE TRIBUNE about how you help people.

"Would you help me to get a wheel chair? I am crippled with arthritis and if I had one I could move around and help myself a great deal, and perhaps even go outdoors. I am 21 years old and have been crippled for the last eight years.

"I could pay the transportation charges if you could get one for me."

• • •

From Mrs. U., on the northwest side of the city:

"Dear Miss Brown: My husband recently had a very serious accident, and will not be able to walk again for many, many months. Our doctor told us that he would improve much more quickly if he could be out in the fresh air this coming summer.

"We have one child, 3 years old, and are expecting another soon. What money we had has been diverted to hospital and doctor bills and similar expenses. If you know any person who has a wheel chair he no longer needs, we would be very happy to have it."

Career Girls, Especially, Will Like Them

By Rea Seeger.

Penny pinching and stretching is fun! Counting every cent and then spending the money for clothes that lift your sagging morale, and keep it in that lofty position, is an accomplishment, but an easy affair when you shop these days. Some of the best looking clothes in town are the slick, smooth numbers designed for slim streamlines and equally slim cash budgets. All the clever new daytime dresses, trim little suits, and even coats are star attractions in these collections, renewed almost daily by fresh arrivals from the designers and the apparel manufacturers.

If you are fed up with suits, if your spring coat problems have been solved, and if you need dress parade dresses for the festive side of your busy life, these modestly priced collections are right down your alley. Career girls, especially, will welcome such clothes. They are devastatingly flattering and feminine models for "dates," whether your escort is in uniform or not.

• • •

They are new springtime one-piece dresses ready for any occasion, from the models to change with costume accessories, to the filmy sheers for warm weather. All of them are appealing becoming, gay, and distinctive. One model easily could become the best bet in your wardrobe. The prices are so amazingly modest for all the charm and high fashion that two may be selected without any distressing twinge of the conscience.

Both prints and plain finds are featured, and also dresses of the two. There are dozens of good foundation dresses, classics in streamline and detail, that will be good for even more than three seasons. There are all kinds of smart black and white prints, never failing finds that are always eye striking and different. There are clever, new, checked taffetas in black and white or navy blue and white [the checks are small and neat] and there are the first of the season's sheers, ready for all the impromptu parties of wartime routine.

• • •

Short sleeves, short skirts with a decided flare, neat small waistlines, tailored dresses for the background foil of unusual accesories, and the loveliest of dancing and dinner dresses [short] with black lace, even dresses fashioned and cut like a two-piece suit. Each and every find flaunts a price tag naming an unbelievably modest sum.

The dull blacks are going strong, because they are brand new, but if you crave navy blue or other dark street shades, if you shop for the fascinating new spring shades of dark and light gray, beige, and yellow, the same models are included. These are the dresses to slide under your spring reefers, your new trench model coats, your new short red jackets, your beige topcoats, or to wear with fitted jackets of bright color. Later in the season they are the dresses you'll wear with linen or silk jackets, still the costumes you'll spike with snowy white gloves and hat and bag, or with accessories of checked, dotted, or striped material, and in the summer with rough straw cartwheel hats, with black sandals, and the shortest of cool, washable, fabric gloves.

Five models have been sketched. Dozens of others, just as easy on the eye and budget, are in the same collection. For information, call Superior 0200.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

A woman who can make her own clothes and who enjoys doing it has a really worthwhile hobby right now. Those who go in for dressmaking at all seriously make it a point to have a form, for having one's own figure right there to fit simplifies the task. . . . Mrs. R. Winfield Ellis, who always is a picture of chic, studied dress designing and dressmaking, and makes all her evening gowns. She doesn't use a form, however, preferring to work from a pattern. Mrs. Ellis recently completed a tweed suit that she considers her chef d'oeuvre, and upon which she feels like resting her dressmaking laurels. Mr. Ellis bought the tweed, brown and white striped imported English material, when he was in California, and Mrs. Ellis toiled for three months to get the suit just right. And just right it is, down to the last detail; perfectly tailored and draped, and tremendously becoming. She will be able to "live in it" for a good many years. The suit made its debut at luncheon at the Arts club recently. With it Mrs. Ellis wore a pair of low-heeled brown alligator walking shoes that also will be good for several seasons' wear, and a pert brown felt turban, draped into a high bow at her forehead. Oddly enough, Mrs. Ellis dislikes sewing, she says, but she plans to go ahead making dresses for her young daughter. . . . Seated at the speakers' table at a recent luncheon meeting of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations was Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson, who was wearing a stunning outfit in beige and brown. Her wool topcoat was of a soft brown color, and the tunic dress under it was of pale beige. Mrs. Magnuson's sable scarf looked equally well with both, as did her pocketbook, which was a large envelope of brown alligator with a huge, round, gold colored ornament on one side.

At the same luncheon meeting Mrs. John L. Cochran was wearing a little black hat trimmed with three roses, one yellow, one red, and one white, and a matching bouquet, not real, of course, was pinned to the lapel of her coat. Mrs. A. Thomas Taylor was another smartly dressed woman in the room. Her silk suit was in black and white, a polka dotted skirt and a plain black top. Her hat was a little, black, forward tilted sailor trimmed with ribbons which hung down the back. . . . Mrs. John D. Ames has an attractive bit of costume jewelry she pins to her frocks, a good looking cuckoo clock, complete with pendulum and chains. She was wearing the pin at the shoulder of a pale beige dress at a cocktail party the board of directors of Emerson House gave recently at the Racquet club. One of the busiest women at the event was Mrs. Edward V. Platt, who checked the prizes with their winners. Mrs. Platt, who has beautiful titian hair, was wearing a vivid green frock with a hint of a tunic and a gold belt. The bodice was gathered on a drawstring across the square neckline, and the dress had three-quarter length sleeves. . . . Mrs. John C. Murphy was wearing a frock with a real tunic, a handsomely cut dress in gray silk, unrelieved except for a stunning brooch at the V neckline. Her hat was an unusual one, a gray beanie, lavishly trimmed with purple and gray heather. Mrs. W. Press Hodgkins at this party was wearing a dress that was slim and straight at one side and peg-topped at the other. The effect is wonderful on slim-hipped Mrs. Hodgkins.

Mrs. John D. Ames. [Tribune Photo.]

Mrs. Roger S. Vail does lots of war work, but manages to look well groomed and feminine as well as efficient. To a meeting to organize the women's committee for the Navy Relief society she wore an interesting piece of jewelry, a patriotic pin of red, white, and blue precious stones. The pin brightened a black tailored suit, which was further enlivened on that occasion by Mrs. Vail's hat, a tiny sailor made all of rose colored breast feathers and trimmed with full blown roses, also cleverly made of the feathers. . . . Mrs. John A. Middleton, who also is working for the Navy Relief society drive, was wearing brown, a shade that is particularly becoming to her dark eyes. Her hat was a brown sailor with a white piqué ruffle lining the underside of the brim and trimmed with a brown veil. Her brown wool suit was cut with interesting shoulder lines and fastened with gold buttons.

• • •

Prints of every color and design are doing much to brighten spring wardrobes. Mrs. Frank G. Osborne has a stunning print dress consisting of large palm leaves in crimson and green on a black background. Mrs. Gerald Smith, the former Virginia Ashcraft, who just has moved back to Chicago from New York, looks as pretty and slim as ever in a cleverly draped black crêpe dress printed all over in a fine figure in reds, grays, and white. She wears a white straw hat with this dress. . . . Mrs. John Merrell has a new spring hat that is a mass of mimosas, and very becoming to her. She often wears fresh mimosas pinned to her shoulder when she wears this hat. . . . Arriving for a visit with her husband, Technical Sergt. John Whiting, Mrs. Whiting looked smart and uncrumpled in a gray tweed suit. Her hat was a visored cap of the same material as the suit. . . . A vision in harmonizing blues is young Helen Studebaker when she wears her new spring outfit. It is a two-piece suit of navy, with which she wears a blouse, gloves, and anklets of light blue. Her navy felt hat has a halo effect brim of the pale blue. . . . Mrs. F. Osborne Elliott has a striking new spring bonnet. It is rather like a fez, and about a red fez color. The crown is modified into three little peaks, and from the highest one, right over her forehead, dangles a silk tassel to match. The hat is stunning with Mrs. Elliott's new spring coat of tailored gray tweed. . . . Mrs. Paul Butler, whose hats are conversation pieces wherever she goes, the other day was wearing a tiny blond straw sailor trimmed with one red rose and two green ones.

Mrs. Frank T., Aurora, Ill.—I use a little suction cup instead of a toothpick when I want to clean out clogged holes in my salt and pepper and spice shakers. I force cup up and down and it does the work.

* *

Helen H., Chicago.—I have found I can remove a good many kinds of stains from marble pieces around the house with Javelle water, diluted with about four times as much water. I rinse before applying and rinse and dry immediately afterward.

* *

Mrs. Frank P., Chicago—When I'm in a hurry and discover a piece of silver is a bit tarnished I rub it with a raw potato dipped in salt. This removes the slight tarnish and I haven't had to get out any polishing paraphernalia.

* *

Miss Irene F., Evanston—When we go away in summer we carry a few phonograph records to our summer cottage and use a portable typewriter case as housing for them. If there are any catches in the case we place cardboard in the bottom of the case to height of the hooks or catches and in this way we transport records back and forth from town to country without damage.

* *

Grace Anderson, Chicago—Why not magnetize all scissors so you can pick up pins and needles easily while sewing?

* *

Mrs. Daniel S., Oak Park—When we are doing paint jobs around the house my husband pours a little turpentine over his flat paint and enamel cans to keep scum from forming. Over outside paint, when he wants to protect it in a can, he pours a little boiled oil. These treatments, at night, keep the paint free from scum when he wants to use it in the morning.

* *

Mrs. G. Frank S., Chicago—I do quite a bit of cooking for my family of eight and my husband keeps me supplied with holders for my pans which he makes from sheet asbestos. He folds asbestos and wraps it with adhesive tape to fit pan handles and sometimes even covers this with gay colored oil cloth. I use these holders a lot and they save on burned fingers.

HOME OWNERS' QUERIES

Wheaton, Ill. [To the Home Building Editor].—What can we do for an outside door we varnished last fall and now the varnish has turned whitish? And what caused this trouble?—D. P.

Answer: The varnish may have been intended for indoor use only, or you may have used a poor grade spar varnish. Remove present varnish down to bare wood and then apply a good grade spar varnish.

Men Lose Out by Not Being Affectionate Fathers

Most Children Eager to Love Their Parents

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

A touching appeal is expressed in a letter I have before me. If it were the only one of its kind, I shouldn't feel that a whole Sunday article should be devoted to it, or even a daily column. But letters sounding a similar unhappy note appear repeatedly in my mail. Sometimes the child is a boy of 16 or a girl of 15. Sometimes there are several children instead of one. But the burden of the tale is the same.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:

"We have a son who is 4 years old. He has a sweet disposition, is healthy and, as most boys his age, full of life. I wouldn't call him a problem child, because he is easy to handle. He usually does what I tell him to, and is willing to do whatever I ask of him.

• • •

"Here is my real problem. His father pays no attention to him. He always says 'Sh, sh, to him, and 'O, keep still, will you?' He doesn't sit down and read stories to him or play games unless I beg him to do so.

"Our little boy adores his father just the same, greets him with a smile when he comes home, and wants to tell him what he's done during the day. But here is his father's answer: 'Don't bother me now. I'm tired. Wait until after supper.' But, after supper, his father buries himself in a magazine or paper, and when our little boy [let's call him Bill] asks him when he is going to play with him, well, he just says, 'O, some other night.'

"Bill may say, 'Would you show me some pictures in your magazine, Daddy?' But he manages to get out of it some way.

"In other words, it seems as if he has no use for Billy.

• • •

"This is commencing to work on me. I'm afraid his father is making a very big mistake. Now is the time the boy needs his father's love as well as his mother's, don't you think, Mrs. Bevans? As he grows older, and goes to school and learns to know other boys, and sees his father paying no attention to him, I am afraid he might lose the love he now has for his dad.

"My husband was not very young when we married, and was used to a quiet life. And I have been thinking, perhaps that's why he is so impatient with Billy. He misses his quiet evenings with his books and magazines. But then, he should take into consideration that Bill did not ask to come to us.

• • •

"When a person marries he's got to give up a few things, but not forever. It's just for a few short years, until the children get big enough to read and learn to do things by themselves.

"I will be looking for an answer in your column. Please try to solve my problem. I have talked with my husband time and time again, and he has promised to do better, but it doesn't last. I do not expect too much. I only wish he could do better. I would like to hear some father's views on this problem, and how they get along with their son, or sons."

I suppose there are men who never should have children, because that something which might make them fathers in feeling is left out of their natures. At the other extreme, and I know several, are those men who have what amounts to a veritable talent for fatherhood. They have a tremendous sense of responsibility, they enjoy their children, they know pretty well how to manage them, and are devoted to them.

How may a child be taught obedience? Should children be permitted freedom of the house? You will find answers to these and other problems in Gladys Bevans' latest booklet, on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price 15 cents; postpaid, 18 cents.

Thru the Looking Glass

A complete ensemble in a fragrance that captures the spirit of spring and lifts the wearer right out of the depressing gloom pervading these days, is the answer for the woman who is looking for just such a whimsical antidote.

[TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

As welcome as the first wood violet or lilac bud, and just as spirit lifting, is a set of bath luxuries perfectly attuned to spring. The manufacturer of these new products really deserves praise for giving us these grand mementos of the sort of days that keep us on an even keel and remind us that there is more to this earthly sphere than war and heartache.

• • •

The cologne in the series probably is the most entrancing item of the whole ensemble, as much for its unusual packaging as for its delicious fragrance. The clear glass bottle simulates a miniature umbrella, ribbed and fluting out in proper folded bumbershoot manner. The base is made of blue wood, and the stopper, also of blue wood, is the handle, complete with blue carrying ribbon. The cologne itself is really as refreshing as the spring rains after which the series is named. It's a warm scent that falls gently on the senses, as sweet to the wearer as a shower is to the winter worn earth.

It's a fragrance that you'll delight in wearing practically all of the time because it is not too matter of fact for evening hours, nor too romantic for daytime wear. There is something about the scent that makes you want to identify it with a spring flower, but you can't exactly pin it to violets or lilacs or any other bloom. It is reminiscent of all of them.

The series includes a soap, which, we believe, is something that really rounds out a line. There then is no possibility of a confusion of scents and it helps to give you that glorious feeling of being perfumed from head to toe. The soap is of good quality and is contained in a little basket, such as a gardener uses for carrying flowers or implements.

• • •

There is a bubble bath that is delightfully packaged in individual envelopes resembling those in which flower seeds are sold, and they are contained in a rack which may be tacked to the bathroom wall. Frothing about you, they fill the air with a fragrance that will make you relax and forget your worries.

To add the final touch, there is a dusting powder in a cylindrical box decorated in the motif which characterizes the line, azure blue background with puffy white clouds and little bouquets of flowers scattered about, or reposing in beribboned umbrellas. The powder may be patted on with the puff that accompanies it, or sifted thru a shaker arrangement. It is soothingly soft and the scent is quite lasting.

We're sure that, if you want to capture the spirit of spring and hold it close to you all the day, you'll want to have all, or at least one, of the items in this new fragrance.

Consider the Birds.

Whether you are planning a war garden of considerable acreage, an addition to your border, or just a bush or two about your door, it is well worth your while to include something that will help increase the bird supporting capacity of your neighborhood. Perhaps you can make it a club project in which your state conservation department will be glad to coöperate.

There is quite a list to choose from—ailanthus, mountain ash, black ash, white ash, basswood, catalpa, bittersweet, buffalo berry, buttonbush, the various wild cherries and plums, coral berry, high bush cranberry, bitternut, red osier dogwood, wild grapes, elders, hackberry, black haw, hawthorn, honeysuckle, Norway maple, Russian mulberry and Russian olive, red bud, staghorn sumac, winterberry, witch hazel. . . . You'll be surprised how many even a small yard will accommodate. Maybe you'd rather—

Adopt a Brook.

That is being suggested to women's groups, clubs, communities, as a way of promoting the cause of conservation as well as beautifying the countryside and wayside. Make it a nearby brook, if possible.

Procedure is simple and inexpensive—acquiring rights around the source and for several miles along the stream; fencing and planting back to trees and shrubs. The cattle or pig wallow comes back to what nature intended it to be. Of course, passage ways for cattle and drinking places thru the pastures and meadows must be provided for to obviate interference with farm economy, but these need not detract from the development. In many regions such a project would be important not only as a haven for song birds and the fast disappearing types of wild flowers, but also in the restoration of small game and fish to denuded water courses in regions of intensive farming.

Let's go fishin' down by the brook this evenin'!

To An Old Blue Pitcher.

[In the corner cupboard.]

When sunlight slants a polished beam
Over your loveliness I dream. . . .
Around your blueness breath of springs
Long past, romantic, softly clings.

I turn in rapture to the sky
Lucent and fresh in your own dye
Sundrenched by April. Now I see
The source of your gay witchery.

Once long ago, one April day
An old world potter mixed his clay;
He stirred in bits of blue, rain-clean,
And put on your enchanting sheen.

With spirit spring-drunk, molding you
In ecstasy his fingers flew;
He captured snow from clouds in flight
To wreathe your form in luster-white.

He set you, free from time, apart;
Perfection, to bewitch the heart.

—Beatrice Phelps.

In the Spring.

My thoughts turn to little sheep grazing in wide green pastures. . . . Old fashioned rockers and hammocks under shady trees. . . . Pink roses over a white gate and freshly ironed curtains blowing in the breeze. . . . Cold buttermilk in blue pitchers in an old springhouse . . . a baby's laugh and the perfume of honeysuckle.

Bluebells peeping up thru young grass . . . the purple of lilacs. The proud look on a mother's face when she sees her soldier in his first uniform . . . the fond handclasp of lovers saying good-by, and the soft strains of music pouring from a small cottage. Gold curls shining, new boots, and flowers in lapels . . . the aroma of fresh baked pies, and the inevitable patter of little feet.

Sundown . . . twilight . . . the rustle of spring wind in the trees. God's evening lullaby.

—Vera Hickam.

My Mansion.

Dear God, where "many mansions" be
For dwellers in eternity,
Prepare, I pray, none such for me.

But may I ask of Thee instead,
When up the golden stairs I tread,
A cottage small with roses red?

A little house please keep in store,
With flowers in bloom about its door.
Of Thee I ask this one thing more:

Pray build it not upon a street
Gold-paved; keep for more saintly feet
The angel choristers to greet.

But may there be in Thy domain
A spot upon some winding lane,
That happily might be my gain.

And there, dear God, I Thee implore
A cottage small to keep in store,
With roses red about its door.

And may that be my mansion then—
[Thou knowest, God, both where and when]
A little house with flowers. Amen!

Actors Fail to Convince in Steinbeck Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—The conclusion was reached quickly, and with considerable advertised enthusiasm by the book reviewers of the nation, that John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down" was a book of the year to be placed high in the popularity lists. The conclusion was reached as quickly, and with similar conviction, by drama critics of New York last week, that John Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down" is a good deal of a disappointment as a play.

And the divergence of opinion as regards book and play seems to be traceable in the main to the actors engaged to play "The Moon Is Down." In reading the book, it would be possible to cast the invading Nazis of a possible Norwegian town in the molds of each reader's mind. In the play they must be accepted largely in the persons of the players bringing them to stage life.

In the book it would be possible, I assume, to picture Col. Lanser, who takes over an occupied Norwegian mining town, as a typically hard and ruthless Hun dutifully fulfilling an assignment, for all he has moments of philosophic doubt and personal regret. He may secretly have abhorred his leader and his blitzkrieg brutalities, but he ordered six villagers shot at the first sign of local rebellion.

• • •

He knew in his heart that freemen never shall be slaves; that for every hostage shot, 50, or maybe 500, embittered freemen are stimulated in their determination to drive the invaders from their soil.

But he executed, in the public square, a miner who refused to work and finally sent the inoffensive little mayor to his death in a desperate effort to crush the rebellion that was gradually and persistently gaining ground in this "conquered" town.

Otto Kruger.
[Acme Photo.]

In the play we have Otto Kruger playing this Col. Lanser with fine skill but without conviction, because Kruger, however German his own remote background may have been, has absorbed the gentler virtues of the English and American people whose way of life and thought he and his immediate ancestors have adopted. With whatever force he may read Steinbeck's lines, there is nothing in his handsome presence or eloquent delivery to convince anybody that he is what he pretends to be.

This Col. Lanser may represent truthfully the German people, as no doubt Steinbeck, also of Teutonic background, intended he should, but he is not in character as a representative of the Nazi officer class.

• • •

So much is true of all, save one, of the usually realistic Steinbeck Nazis. A certain Capt. Loft is more true to the Nazi tradition, but by that very fact also suggests a subtle caricature of the rule-swallowing, heel-clicking, normally brutish Nazi.

Furthermore, we have the innately gentle Russell Collins playing a Nazi major as softly as he might play another Johnny Johnson, also no doubt by author intent and direction; and a young William Eythe playing a neurotic Lieut. Tonder, who crumpled under the lack of feminine society and the hateful glances of the villagers, as a further suggestion that the Nazi soldier is certainly not the man his masters would have him.

Again the simple human qualities of the villagers, as represented by persuasively gentle humans such as Ralph Morgan and Whitford Kane, lack that firmness of character, that iron in the blood of the natives of a cold and hard country, that would give us greater confidence and belief in the mayor of the town and the village doctor, his best friend and fellow hostage.

In statement, "The Moon Is Down" is a drama written to prove that a free people can never be permanently conquered. Liberty crushed to earth shall rise again and again and again. The flies, as Steinbeck has it, will yet conquer the fly paper. Give the occupied countries another year, or two years, and they will have so pestered the thought and lives of their conquerors that they [the invaders] will have either withdrawn voluntarily, as the result of a prayed-for peace, or will be crowding the asylums and mental clinics of the fatherland.

But in effect I very greatly fear that "The Moon Is Down" is asking, subtly but surely, that we shall begin to urge ourselves to accept Naziism, not on Hitler's terms, but on Steinbeck's terms; as the inspiration, unfortunately, of a madman, to the support of which many fine, hopeful, idealistic citizens have been unhappily drawn.

While it may be reasonable to assume that not all the Hitler armies represent butchers on the march, nor that all the boys who have grown to fighting age under his training of world hate and the urge to divide and defeat are ruthless destroyers, these happen to be the only Nazis of whom we have report, or of whose work as conquerors we have evidence. I resent their achieving even a temporary and debatable dominance of the theater.

• • •

However, there are compensations. "Herdmen win battles, but freemen always win wars" is the play's most heartening line. It is spoken by the little mayor of the little people of the village, and its truth stirs even confused audiences to some show of indorsement.

Despite the miscasting, the acting is uncommonly good. Kruger's Nazi colonel may not be true to type, but he is interestingly true to his intellectual and idealistic standards. Morgan's mayor may suggest a native New Englander more strongly than he does a sturdy Norwegian, but he is doing a good job, according to his director's and his author's instructions.

So with the others, including Joseph Sweeney, Leona Powers, E. J. Ballantine [the Quisling traitor of the proceedings], Maria Palmer [who avenges an executed husband by stabbing an amorous and lonesome invader with a pair of shears]. They all are good. Oscar Serlin, the producer, is so sure they can carry "The Moon Is Down" to success, he is boldly advertising seats eight weeks ahead.

The Stamp Collector

—By Richard McP. Cabeen—

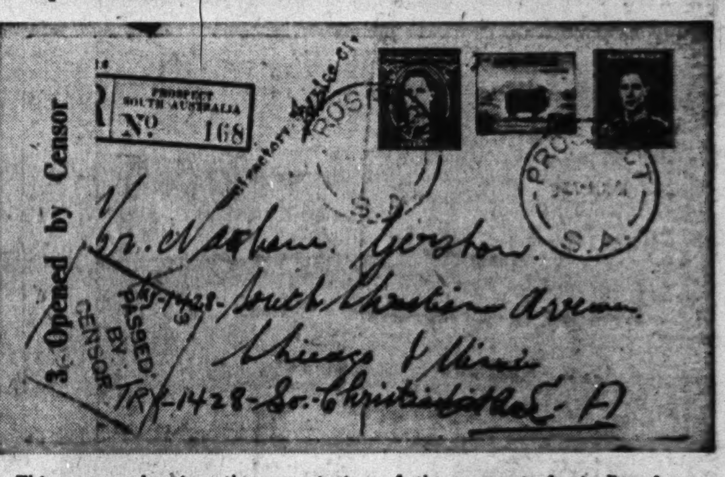
While the United States maintained a blockade of southern ports in the Civil war it was almost impossible for the confederates to continue business correspondence with Europe and especially with England. In order to keep mail matter moving between the two countries, M. Antonio Costa of New Orleans set up an unofficial post which undertook to deliver mail around the blockade.

This post of Costa's is mentioned in an item in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Nov. 3, 1861, which was clipped from the Memphis Appeal of Oct. 22, of the same year. This reads: "We learn from L'Abeille of New Orleans that M. Antonio Costa of that city has undertaken the establishment of regular monthly mail communication between that city and Europe, for which he has the approbation of the postmaster of New Orleans. The mails go by way of Mexico, and are transported in the regular English steamers which carry the mails of Mexico and the West Indies. The first boat left New Orleans on Thursday week and contained 1,233 letters; the next leaves on the 10th of November. As soon as the necessary arrangements are completed it will leave every two weeks—on the 10th and 25th of each month. Letters of half an ounce and under will be charged as follows: To Mexico, 40c; to Cuba, 75c; to Europe, $1. Letters for this mail must be inclosed with the amount of postage, in an envelope directed: 'Costa's Foreign Mail, care Postmaster, New Orleans,' and the postage paid to New Orleans."

This writer has never seen a Confederate cover bearing a postal marking which would indicate that it had been carried out of New Orleans on Costa's Foreign Mail route. The various books and catalogs on Confederate postal history make no mention of Costa nor of his post. Since it was required that letters for this post be sent to Costa under separate wrapper, it is unlikely that any of the actual letters ever bore Confederate stamps, and more probable that they were sent out of New Orleans as prepaid stampless covers. However, it is possible that they bore some written or handstamped indication that they were being forwarded by Antonio Costa.



This cover showing three varieties of the current Australian issue surcharged with new values is from the collection of Nathan Gershon of Chicago.

For a short time during the fall of 1863 the Chicago postoffice used an unusual set of handstamps unlike any in use before or after that time. In these handstamps which were of the double circle variety with town and state names between the concentric circles, the usual month, and year dates, in that order, are replaced by a letter or letters followed by the month and day dates.

Some covers found show the letter "X" followed by the date, while others have the two letters "R. A.," "G. A.," or "S. B." The earliest date noted in a small group examined by the writer was Sept. 13, the latest, Nov. 12. There is no doubt but that the limiting dates will be changed when more covers are examined. The "X" cover examined originated in downtown Chicago and were addressed to various towns in Michigan and Indiana. The "R. A." covers originated on the south side of Chicago at Camp Douglas, at the North Branch postoffice and in downtown Chicago, and were directed to Kentucky, Massachusetts, and New York. The "G. A." covers were from the downtown district and directed to Illinois towns, and the "S. B." covers which also originated in the central district were directed to towns in Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin.

In view of the limited number of covers examined it is not safe to theorize concerning the reasons for using these marks. Readers who have these postmarks on covers will confer a favor upon the collectors of Chicago material if they will send in certain information about each example. This should include the origin of the letter as shown by return card or otherwise, the name of the town and state to which it was directed, the date of mailing as shown by the postmark, and the date, if any, of receipt as indicated by receiving stamp, etc., on the back of the cover or by notation by the recipient. It is hoped that sufficient data will be received to fix the period of use and to establish the necessity for the marks.

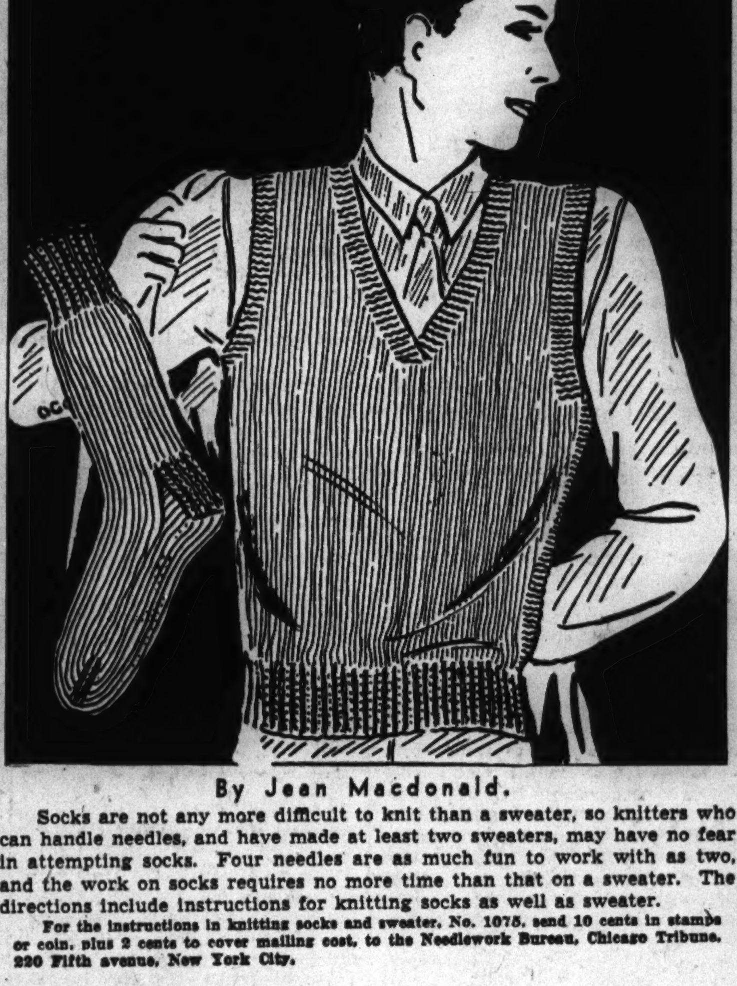
Sweater and Socks



By Jean Macdonald.

Socks are not any more difficult to knit than a sweater, so knitters who can handle needles, and have made at least two sweaters, may have no fear in attempting socks. Four needles are as much fun to work with as two, and the work on socks requires no more time than that on a sweater. The directions include instructions for knitting socks as well as sweater.

For the instructions in knitting socks and sweater, No. 1075, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Limited Food Budget Permits Reasonable Variety

Fashions

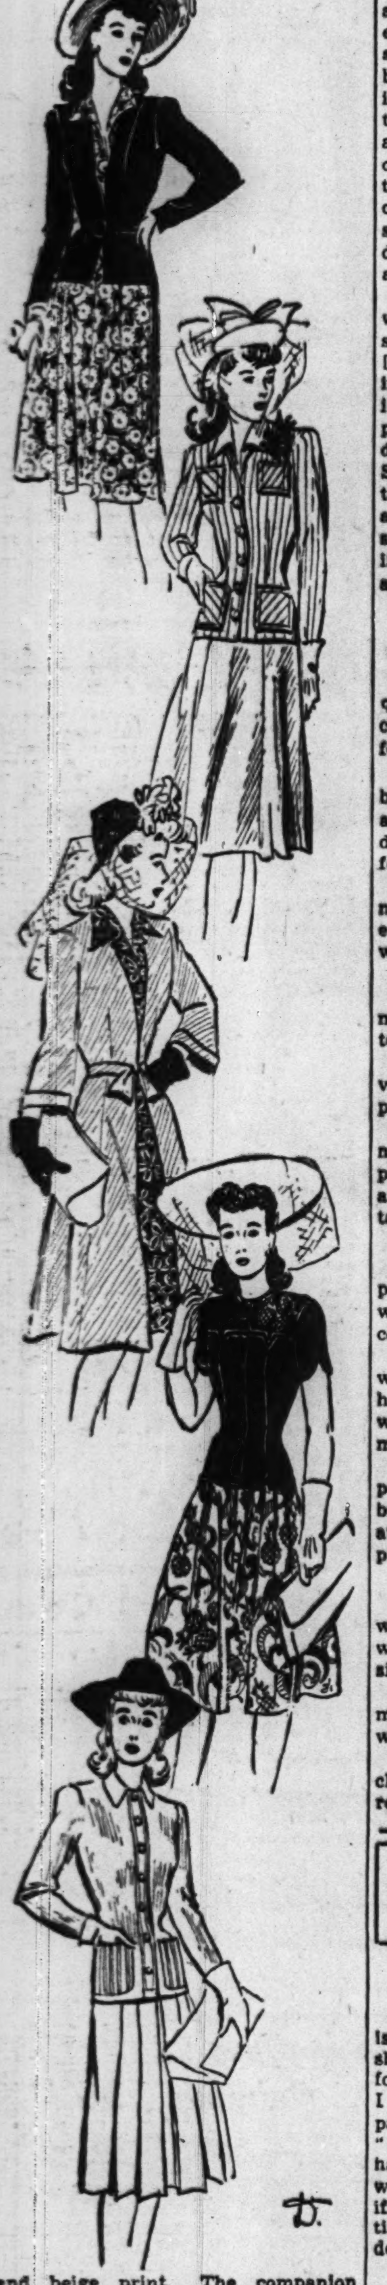
—By Angela—

A large Chicago firm which has a number of individual stores in strategic shopping centers thruout the city has recently put in a new line of merchandise in its State street store. This new center includes dresses, suits, coats, blouses, and hats, slightly more expensive than the regular type of merchandise carried by the store, but also more individual and every bit as good a buy.

In our fashion story today we have concentrated on jacket dresses. When a dress has a jacket, it becomes a double duty costume. The dress may be worn with or without the jacket, and the jacket also may be teamed with other frocks and separate skirts.

• • •

At the top of the sketch is a simple dress of rayon crêpe in a green, black and beige print. The companion jacket is Kelly green in 100 per cent virgin wool. Under $13.



A practical suit dress is the gray one sketched second. It is spun rayon, shirtwaist style, with an accompanying jacket of the same color with a white pin stripe.

Heavy material in a crash weave, probably rayon, makes the full length coat of the redingote, sketched third. It is an interesting grass green color. The tailored dress accompanying it is a green and white ribbon print.

• • •

Fourth on the docket is a two-piece dress. In this case there is just a skirt and jacket, rather than a dress and jacket. The skirt, rayon jersey, is a brilliant print of red and green in a pineapple design on a gleaming white background. Unpressed plaits give the skirt its fullness. And three of the little pineapples are padded and appliqued on the shoulder of the red, short sleeved jacket, which is made of rayon with a linen finish.

Soft rabbit's hair wool for the cardigan jacket on the fifth figure is the feature of this costume. It partly conceals a shirtwaist dress of matching light blue rayon crêpe. Under $13.

Economy and Appeal Both Attainable

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1942: By The Chicago Tribune.]

We cooks must take a practical view of that principle of good cookery which stipulates "there must be variety in the menu." Yes, there must be variety to keep meals interesting, but not so much variety that leftovers are discarded in order to keep them from appearing at a subsequent meal.

It is economy to buy many foods in large enough quantity to last for several meals. We must have enough originality to keep them from seeming monotonous on a second or third appearance. Many vegetables, for example, may be served raw or in salad at one meal, cooked and buttered at another. If we are making cake or cookies, it would be silly to make only enough for one eating, and almost as silly to space the two or three servings so far apart that the food becomes stale. In such a case, monotony may be avoided by serving the food with a completely different menu than the one which accompanied it at its first appearance.

You'll notice that, in this set of a week's economical menus, there are several repeats: Canned pineapple [or fresh, if it's reasonable] is served in a salad on Sunday, as dessert by itself on Monday; carrot sticks appear on Monday, steamed carrot pudding on Tuesday, buttered carrots on Saturday; oatmeal cookies appear three times, alone and with sauce; apples are baked, pied, cut up into salad. Yet I'm quite sure the menus include enough variety to make them appealing to the average family.

ECONOMICAL MENUS FOR A WEEK.

CHEESE FONDUE.

[Serves Six.]

5 eggs, separated
1¼ cups milk
2 cups soft bread crumbs
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
½ pound American cheese, shredded

Beat egg yolks until thick and light. Add milk, crumbs, seasonings, and cheese. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Pour into greased custard cups, place them in a pan of hot water, and bake at 325 degrees until firm. Turn out carefully and serve with tomato sauce. This Spanish style sauce is excellent: Cook ½ green pepper, shredded, and 1 small onion, chopped, in 2 tablespoons butter for 5 minutes. Add 2 cups canned tomatoes, ½ cup button mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste. Simmer until somewhat thickened.

Oatmeal Cookies.

[4 dozen or more.]

⅔ cup shortening
1 cup brown or white sugar, or part of each
2 eggs
½ cup sour milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups rolled oats
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon each nutmeg and cloves
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup raisins, dates, or chopped prunes

Cream shortening and sugar thoroly. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Add sour milk and vanilla, then stir in rolled oats. Sift remaining dry ingredients and sift a small part of mixture over raisins and nuts. Add flour mixture gradually to dough, stirring well. Add nuts and raisins. Drop dough in small balls onto a greased cookie sheet and bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes.

Try Sending a Loaf of Bread Hot to Table

A loaf of bread, going to the table piping hot, steps up meal interest. Slice the bread halfway thru the loaf, place in a paper sack, and bake 10 minutes. Serve immediately with hot soup or a salad. It also is good with cheese spreads and hot or chilled beverages.

Dutch Girl's Bonnet

By Ellen Bruce.

If any one is looking for a crocheted hat which is becoming, easy to create, and a basketful of style at the same time, why not try this Dutch Girl's bonnet. It is crocheted in a shell stitch, made in one piece, and finished with an attractive bow of grosgrain ribbon. It is economical to make and requires little time.

For instructions in crocheting the Dutch girl's bonnet, No. 1094, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1942: By Ely Culbertson.]

There is one type of signal which is not nearly as well known as it should be, considering that occasion for its use arises in every few deals. I refer to the method of playing partner's suit in such a way as to "show out." Take the following hand, for example. The defenders would have saved a vulnerable game if West had made the proper distinction between a three and a deuce.

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

NORTH
♠ 10 7 6 4
♥ 3 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 diamond	Double
Pass	1 no trump	Pass	2 hearts
Pass	2 no trump	Pass	4 hearts
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding was not too good. East's nonvulnerable third hand diamond bid was all right, as was South's takeout double. North stretched slightly to bid a no trump—such a call should be based on 1½ honor tricks with or without a stopper in the adversely bid suit. When South could bid no more than two hearts after North's shaded response, however, North should have abandoned game-going hopes. His two no trump was decidedly optimistic. South cannot be blamed for going to game, altho it is questionable whether his four heart bid was as good as three no trump would have been.

West opened his highest card of partner's suit, the diamond four. Dummy ducked, and East won with the king, declarer false carding the diamond jack. East knew that his partner, West, could not have started with four diamonds since in that case he would have led the fourth highest. Hence he could tell that South was false carding. In most cases when a declarer takes the trouble to try to fool the opponents, he is afraid of a continuation. Hence it was logical enough for East to lay down the diamond ace in the hope that West would be able to ruff a third round. On this second lead of diamonds West made a horrible play! Considering that he had only the three and deuce of diamonds left, this may appear to be an exaggerated statement, but the fact remains that there was an enormous difference in the two mentioned cards. It is a standard signal for a player who has led to his partner's bid suit, later to follow with the next highest card in that suit [always assuming, of course, that he led the highest card]. Hence when West carelessly played the diamond deuce on East's ace, it was a guarantee, from East's point of view, that West was now out of diamonds and could ruff a continuation. Since this ruff, with East's sure trump trick, would defeat the contract, it was quite normal and logical for East to play a third diamond. It also was fatal, however. Declarer saw that he had only one chance to fulfill his contract and that that chance depended on the opponents having gone astray. If declarer had to lose a club trick in addition to two diamonds and a sure heart loser, he could not fulfill his contract. Hence at this point he correctly chose to discard a club rather than to ruff. West, of course, had to follow suit with the three spot, and dummy's ten won. Two rounds of trumps were played, after which dummy was reëntered with the club ace. The established diamond queen now provided a safe discard for declarer's last club, and the contract was fulfilled.

Hearts are trump and South leads. North and South are to win four tricks against any defense.

Solution: South leads the diamond and North lets it hold. South leads the club, West covers, and North discards the spade. East also sheds a spade. West leads a small trump, which East wins. When East leads the spades, if West trumps low, North will overtrump and lead a small diamond for South to trump with the queen.

Now all East and West can make is the ace of trumps.

If North trumps the club, East overtrumps and leads the spade for West to trump with the six. Now West must make two more trump tricks against any play.

Give Your Home Washables for Summer Days

By Claire Winslow.

Brimful of clever ideas in decorating thriftily is a delightful little house we visited the other day. It has all been done over for summer and the emphasis is on colorful cotton washables.

These rooms, starting with a small, square entrance hall, are open to the public. Passing thru a dark green door with shining brass knocker, one is confronted by fresh white walls and by a large, mirrored window niche filled with ever so many pots of pink geraniums. White wooden shutters flank this window and in front of it is placed a love seat slipcovered in a cheery red and white striped chintz. [See the photograph today.] Two white end tables have compartments for phonograph records.

Nearby are two little Victorian side chairs which have been sprayed with white paint and upholstered in the striped chintz. Completing the group is an interesting coffee table made simply by spraying a rococo Victorian framed mirror with white paint and placing it on a luggage rack. The rug on which it stands also is white with a huge spray of rose red flowers, and is washable.

• • •

Now, step into the living room. Notice the walls which are painted a dark, dull red and which, therefore, contrast beautifully with the pure white of woodwork, window frames and wooden shutters. One end of this interior is made up of a large window and two built-in bookcases, and these have been all done in white. Books have been removed for the summer and the shelves ranged with a great variety of green potted plants.

In front of the window is a handsome mahogany table with drop leaves, which serves as dining table. Shaggy white washable rugs are on the polished floor, and white is the background of the flowered cretonne which fashions the full window draperies and slip covers for a Lawson sofa and two comfortable armchairs.

Interesting decorative note are four double branched, carved wooden sconces, painted white, and holding white candles in a straight row above the white fireplace. White tiles with colored fruit designs frame this fireplace, and plants instead of logs fill it for the summer.

The smart little kitchen of this house is carried out in strawberry-and-cream pink and white. Walls are enhanced by amusing murals. A very feminine touch is a round mirror above the stove. The words: "The way to a man's heart" are printed beneath this looking glass.

• • •

The master bedroom is all cool green and white. Yards and yards of ivy patterned cotton make the bedspreads, slip cover two armchairs, and run round the lower walls as a dado. Upper walls are painted white; ceiling, deep green. Ladder back side chairs are also white and are cleverly decorated with handpainted ivy leaves. A green and white washable rag rug is on the floor. Chests are of dark mahogany.

The second bedroom is in deep blue and white, with touches of rose. All these hues are in the large, oval washable rug. An economical touch and a very pretty one, too, are the flowered chintz draperies, which come ready to hang. The graceful swag which dips down over the wide window is made of two of the drapery panels which are simply joined at the heading.

The furniture is of oak and is made in a simple style reminiscent of French Provincial. It is excellent for childrens' rooms because it stands up under all sorts of wear and tear and always looks well. Also, it is most reasonably priced.

See this delightful little house, yourself, before you decide on the summer dresses your own rooms are going to wear.

On the House

—By Louise Bargelt—

There's a new scratch remover on the market in the form of a stick. . . . If a piece of wood around your house suffers from a mar or scratch you rub this stick on affected spot and it is claimed the scratches will disappear. . . . Also the same manufacturer has produced a polish which has much the same effect on scuffs and scratches. . . . Apply the polish and your wood surface will be polished at the same time that the scratches disappear. . . . All articles are very inexpensive.

* *

If you are planning to spend more time than formerly around your house this summer and planning also on an outdoor fireplace for all-round family enjoyment there are a number of sources from which you can obtain plans for different types of fireplaces.

* *

In case your house is calling for a new roof this spring by way of making it livable for some years to come you can obtain newly designed asphalt strip shingles. . . . Method of laying contributes to an attractively irregular pattern. . . . The shingles have side edges notched for easy application. They are available in nicely blended tones with wood grained textures.

This charming entrance hall is glorified with cotton. The love seat is slip covered in bright red and white striped chintz, the white Victorian side chairs have seats of the same, and the gayly flowered rug also is washable. This one of a series of five rooms open to the public.

Feet have a lot to do with our success in life. They're often responsible for the way we feel. And the way we walk often is responsible for other people's "first impressions." Because feet are getting more and more attention these days, what with the tire shortage, a nationally known foot and hand care expert has worked out a series of foot rules to help us keep "walking young."

Keeping foot and leg muscles flexible is the whole trick. Limber muscles make all the difference in the way we walk, in the spring of our step, in the way we feel after a long, hard day. But it takes a little time and attention. Muscle flexibility doesn't result from pounding city pavements in close fitting shoes. We should give our feet a complete exercise workout at least once a week, put them thru a few relaxing paces each night.

Bettina Bedwell Says:

[Copyright: 1942: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Among our customs which have suddenly changed as a result of these terrible times is the tradition of the informal bride and what she will wear to her own wedding. For the bride who marries without benefit of trailing white satin and tulle or lace is the bride of the hour, the wartime bride. It is romantic, and the folks who make wedding clothes approve enough to make special brides' suits and dresses.

What I find very much okay in lofty designing circles is the suit or jacket ensemble made of soft materials or stiff silks and rayon, in pastel colors or sparkling white. Sheer, pastel wools make enchanting "don't dress" bridal suits for weddings that come before summer sets in.

Patterns by Clotilde

In these busy times you'll want clothes which are easy to keep shipshape. They should be supercomfortable dresses, too. Today's three patterns fill the prescription to the letter.

Lower left, a jumper frock with plaitless skirt, softly shirred bodice, accompanied by a shirtmaker blouse with feminine neckline and long, full sleeves. Both woolens and crêpe, as well as rayons, may be used for the jumper, while the blouse may be of any washable material in white or a pastel to harmonize.

Center, a suit consisting of skirt, weskit, and blouse. This is something unusual in weskits because, except for the absence of sleeves, it has all the lines and swank of a suit jacket. The six button closing is smart, and the pockets snappy.

Lower right, a simple, buttoned-down-the-front frock with casual neckline and kimono shoulders. Both printed and plain fabrics will be grand.

Style No. 3190 is designed for sizes 12, 14, and 16, and 36, 38, and 40 inch bust measurements. Size 16 requires 2½ yards of 39 inch material for jumper; 2 yards for blouse.

Style No. 3301 is designed for sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 35 inch material for weskit and skirt; 1¾ yards for blouse.

Style No. 2947 is designed for sizes 14 and 16, and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inch bust measurements. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material.

Each pattern costs 10 cents, plus 2 cents to cover cost of mailing.

Mrs. Robert McIlroy, Northern Illinois state chairman, heads the large group arranging the festivities.

Tau Gamma Sigma sorority is holding a "war savings stamp" bridge tea this afternoon in the Blackstone, with Mrs. Frank Peikert, grand president, heading the hostess committee.

Miss Helen Park, a New York alumna and a nationally known designer, will speak on "Trends for Victory."

Amateur Drama on Programs of Two Club Events

Spring fancy turns to amateur theatricals at two clubs this week. The Chicago Woman's Aid players are giving an old time melodrama, "The Drunkard," at a noon breakfast meeting Tuesday in the clubrooms at 185 North Wabash avenue. The story is the tearful tale of a poor widow and her daughter about to be driven from the old homestead by an unscrupulous lawyer, who eventually is foiled in his evil designs by an upright young champion of justice.

Kurt Wohlgemuth is directing the production, which is to be presented with full accoutrements of songs, dances and olio numbers. Taking part are Mrs. Alexander Eulenberg, Mrs. M. Reese Guttman, Mrs. Emanuel H. Heimann, Mrs. Robert L. Hutton, Mrs. Jacob Myers, Mrs. Victor Pearlman, Mrs. Irving K. Russ, Mrs. Lee Teeman, and Mrs. Max Hess Weinberg.

A program of two comedies, "The Kink in the Male Animal" and "Green Eyes from Romany," will be presented by the drama group at 8 o'clock Friday night in the Central Eleanor club, 16 North Wabash avenue.

Coverlet Guild's Study Department to Have Tea

Mrs. H. C. Groman will have the double rôle of hostess and speaker at the next meeting of the Colonial Coverlet Guild of America's study department. The group has been invited to tea at 2 o'clock Wednesday at the Groman home at 7 Wildwood road, Hammond, Ind., where Mrs. Groman will talk on "Dolls from Around the World," showng her own collection and specimens from other important collections. Mrs. A. C. Dallach of La Grange will have charge of the program and a committee of Hammond members, with Mrs. L. L. Bomberger as chairman, will assist the hostess at tea.

Mountaineering Club to Climb Lemont Quarries

The Chicago Mountaineering club will scale the Lemont quarries today on its first practice climb of the season. Each spring and early summer the members hold a series of "limbering up" outings, and the first for many years has been to the quarries, which present a small scale pattern of the hazards to be presented by the loftier peaks in vacation spots. The group will meet at 10 o'clock at the intersection of the Lemont [Stephens] road and the Desplaines river.

China Friends Seek Ways to Aid Students

By Cousin Eve.

A movement to aid the Chinese students at our universities has been undertaken by Mrs. William Stanton Monroe. She heads the student committee of American Friends of China, situated in the Field museum, and their problems are many.

First of all, because of our immigration laws, alien students can't have full time jobs. Nor may they drop from school to earn a livelihood. And they can't go home, which makes it difficult for them. Thirteen Chinese students at the University of Chicago need immediate help, and the sum needed to keep these Chinese youngsters in bed, board and study during 1942 is $7,500. Or at least until China can work out something, or the United States, which seems more likely.

It was quite frigid rolling out to the Midway Sunday night. The Quadrangle players were reading a play at the Frederic Woodwards that night, and the date had been written in my book five months before. The thought then was that it would be glorious spring with buds popping, soft air, etc. But it was the same nippy, zippy April we always have, and the hospitable Woodward house with its pillared portico was already the point of convergence for neighbors going to the party.

There were two plays read that night, a curtain raiser and George Bernard Shaw's "Man of Destiny." Both were amusing and beautifully done. Dr. Woodward read Gen. Bonaparte's lines in the Shaw play with a red ribbon athwart his chest, and a jeweled belt buckle and some athletic medals for "scenery." The part of the bewitching lady spy who fascinates the equerry and steals the papers was read by Louise Wright, the handsome wife of Quincey, one of the prize beauties of that part of our town.

The Shaw play and its sardonic lines fit quite as well into the politics of our times as they seem to set forth the Napoleonic era.

• • •

Along with the neighbors who made up the audience, came breezing in William and Nina Nitze all bronzed up after three months in Mexico City. Owing to circumstances over which they have no control, members of this popular family have returned to the bosom of the Midway and are again installed in their attractive house in 56th street. William Nitze had retired from the faculty of the University of Chicago and expected to live in California, but Chicago looks better to them now. The Nitzes have many kind words for life in Mexico and its superclimate. Almost they made one feel like winging down there instanter.

Dr. Sam Harper, eminent specialist in matters Russian, was another guest at the party. He still is working on that book with the remarkable secret title, something épatant by the way, which should hold the most roving eye in the bookstores.

Dr. Harper is one of Chicago's brilliant talkers—conversationalists they called them in other days. He has the amazing gift of dramatizing things for you in picturesque language—things that would otherwise pass as commonplace. Play readings at Mrs. Woodward's house are always followed by marvelous refreshments, of a type never found elsewhere. Specialties de la maison are there in abundance, with coffee and chocolate after the French manner. Henri David, professor of French at the university, was quite the hero of the evening, after his spirited reading of Giuseppi, the innkeeper in the Shaw play.

Charming people abound in the University of Chicago sector, which has a special atmosphere of its own.

The Pan American Council dinner Tuesday night at the Stevens was large and splendorous. Since when have we had so much chichi, such a mise en scène of flowers, of music, of wandering minstrels with guitars and mandolin? Of caballeros in dinner jackets with patent leather hair —of beauteous black eyed women with much coquettish allure?

Dr. Clarence E. Parmenter of the University of Chicago, president of the council, was seated at the high table entirely surrounded by distinguished guests. Of these the most youthful was Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller, grandson of the great oil magnate, who bears the sonorous title "coördinator of inter-American affairs, Washington." At the table also were President Franklyn Snyder of Northwestern, Mayor Edward J. Kelly, Colombian Consul Fallon, Mexican Consul Ricardo Hill, Commander Wolleson and Mrs. Wolleson of Great Lakes, Col. Edward Roth, representing Gen. George Grunert, Mrs. Harold Peterson, who organized the evening, and Col. Chester Fordney of the marines.

After Dr. Parmenter's brief welcome, Dr. Snyder took over as toastmaster and the program went forward with military speed and precision. "Make it snappy" seemed to be the slogan of the hour. Mayor Kelly, following the good old Spanish custom, gave the keys of the city to our neighbors from the south, and after a few kind words soon betook himself to election headquarters.

Young Rockefeller read his speech, which was fairly long and contained nothing especially new. He is a good looking boy with thick, dark hair and nice straight features, like his mother, who was an Aldrich of Rhode Island. After awhile the speaker said he would throw away his text and just talk about things; which he did in the most engaging collegiate fashion. He said he had come to the dinner not as a Rockefeller but as a "fellow American," and we heard much about "total war." This seemed to be the watchword of his discourse, for it was repeated again and again and yet again.

Mr. Rockefeller said nothing about the oil situation in South America, but confined himself to the politics of the Inter-Americas.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Miss Nancy Keen Olson, whose engagement to Walter P. Steffen Jr. has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willard Olson Jr. of Winnetka. Miss Olson, a senior at Northwestern university, attended Fairmont Junior college in Washington, D. C. Her fiance, son of the late Judge and Mrs. Steffen of Chicago, received his degree from Northwestern, where he is completing his education in the law school. [Balfour Photo.]

Ricardo Hill, the good looking, slim Mexican official, made a heart warming discourse that had all the rat-a-tat-tat of gunfire. And then the most remarkable thing happened. Dr. Fallon, the tall, handsome young Colombian consul, was introduced by Dr. Snyder, and stole the show. With an Irish brogue and a golden tongue the tall Colombian walked away with the honors of the evening. He was witty, he was gay, he was persuasive, he was fiery, and he proposed that South Americans be allowed to fight with our North American armies. The Colombians are the handsome nobles of the southern continent—the pure Castilian stock lives again in their fine features and splendid bones.

Among the convives at this enormous banquet were many young executives in business in Argentina and Brazil. The packing house men were there in force. Mrs. Emmons Blaine had a tableful of guests, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Lawrence, the Rockefeller Prentices, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Shoemaker of Winnetka, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Col. George Langhorne, Mr. and Mrs. Carl M. Wynne.

Looking into the future, a really stirring event set for the third week in May is the Chamber of Commerce convention, which usually happens in Washington. There are 700,000 members of this organization and the delegates give each other a whirl at these annual meetings which are on the whole very interesting.

The large, handsome party of last week was the birthday celebration of Frank J. Loesch, which was given at the Drake in the vast salle to the north, the Gold Coast room. Mrs. Loesch, herself, had arranged the room, and placed at the far end the tea table where a succession of ladies assisted, among them Mrs. William H. Hubbard, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, and Mrs. William Greenlee. Groups of chairs around small tables made for informality, and the long queue of guests was formidable. On entering the long hall with its heavy rose velvet hangings and turquoise and gold pillars, the first thing one saw was a small American flag fluttering in a strong electric breeze.

Mrs. Loesch wore a delightful dress of azure silk and a becoming small hat topped by pink cabbage roses. The hero of the hour, Mr. Loesch, claimed he was having his fourscore and tenth birthday, but no one believed a word of it. His was the air of a man younger by half a lifetime—and his comment on the party was "I'd like to have it all over again."

Looking at some of the 600 guests, one saw a cross section of Chicago life, many lawyers and their wives, men prominent in civic life, women foremost in society. Here and there a banker or an editor or a somebody. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mr. and Mrs. George Carpenter, Mrs. George Payson, Ralph Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mrs. James R. Walker, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. David Cook Jr., Mrs. Robert Peck, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Taylor, Dr. and Mrs. Duncan Brown, Walter and Mrs. Cummings, and Congressman and Mrs. Charles Dewey from Washington were all milling gaily in the throng. Not to forget Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Monroe and Mrs. William J. Calhoun.

WEDS ENSIGN

Mrs. Theodore Smith Stritter has been living in Florida since her marriage on Feb. 2 to Ensign Stritter. She is the former Lillian Louise Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John William Young of East 61st street.

The Deweys stayed at the Racquet club and were widely entertained here during their 10 day absence from the national capital. Mrs. Dewey was looking charming. She has her own special way of dressing in very demure hats and rather somber clothes, such being her foreign upbringing.

It seemed to me that lots of bridge was being played last week. I had two invitations a day for private parties, and once bridged for the benefit of Greece. Mrs. Kenneth Brown, who is Greek by birth, but married to an American, has organized this means of raising money for her starving compatriots. Last Saturday Mrs. Charles Reed opened her delightful apartment at 12 Scott street for a matter of 20 table hostesses who wanted to play, and $100 was raised. It is a painless method, and winners turned in their winnings to Mrs. Brown to be sent overseas to the hungry Greek population.

Mrs. Reed's living rooms are done cheerfully after the modern way with no curtains to cut off her priceless view of the lake. At tea time Mrs. Dudley Rutter and Mrs. Edward O'Neal were asked to assist in the dining room, and Mrs. Brown made a little talk about the situation in Greece, which is dire indeed.

Among the hours of last week that had charm and color was one in the ball room of the Fortnightly of a Friday morning when the Contemporary club was in session. The room was a total blackout except for a screen on which a procession of color films of the Andes mountains was being shown. Miss Henriette Mertz, who had crossed from the west coast of South America to the eastern shore via the 3,000 mile Amazon river, gave the talk and showed the pictures which were beautiful. The Mertz safari took three months for the rough scramble over the mountains and down the head waters of the river. And strangely, they were months without accident, no savage tribes, no snakes, crocodiles, or dangerous wild beasts.

We had South America up to the neck last week. The Foreign Relations lunch featured Barclay Acheson, a roving magazine editor, whose discourse was "What Can We Do About Latin-America?"

There was a marked falling off that day in the usual large attendance. Evidently nobody cared much. But Mr. Acheson had several picturesque phrases which stick in the memory: "South America is a melting pot that hasn't melted, and as a whole is lacking in political stability because of intense regionalism. They have but few statesmen, and they, like ours, are entirely surrounded by politicians.

"There is no certainty that the present South America state of mind will endure until the end of the war. Germany has a propaganda there, not a violent one, but aimed at destroying our commerce."

A very tragic finale to Mrs. Jefferson Caffery's charming trousseau, selected in February for the coming winter months at Rio. And also for the following spring and summer! What choosings, what fittings, what packings in tissue paper and cellophane. The wife of the American ambassador to Brazil has wonderful taste in dress, everything very quiet and simple, but the simplicity that costs. All this was stowed in packing trunks and the whole shipped to Rio de Janeiro by boat, while Mrs. Caffery went by plane. She carried only what could be taken in a canvas bag. The boat was sunk on her southward way. Mrs. Caffery's finery is now in a Davy Jones locker in the South Atlantic.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letter from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

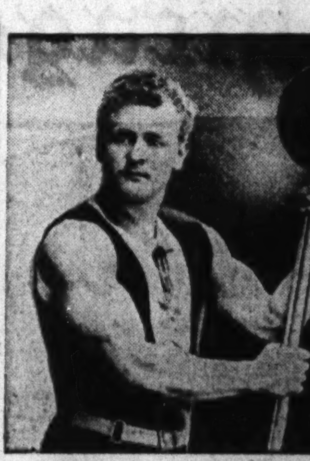
Chicago, April 14, 1894.

Dear Julia: Your letter telling of having met Mr. Thomas A. Edison came today while we were reading of the new invention just announced by the great man. Did he speak to you of the kinetoscope? I presume not, as it isn't his habit to talk of inventions before he has announced them publicly. Will has just finished reading aloud a column about it in the Chicago Inter-Ocean, and we have been talking of its probable value to the world. Edison seems to think it will have no commercial importance, but he says that as he owns no yachts or fast horses, he may as well sink a little money in the kinetoscope. Will thinks Mr. Edison is dismissing it too lightly, that many people will be glad to pay for a look at the scenes in the pictures by way of amusement.

Already there is one of the kinetoscopes being shown, a sort of oak cabinet in which there is a place to deposit a nickel, upon which one may look in the top and see a "moving picture." The one described in the newspaper article is that of a barber shop, in which one may see a man being shaved and his hair being cut, while a companion reads from a comic paper. Will laughed over that idea a good deal, saying it would doubtless be very humorous, if well done.

I remember that years ago there was a child's toy called the "zeotrop," which could be whirled so that four pictures passed before the beholder's vision, giving something the effect of motion. But it was just amusing, not especially interesting. Next I knew of some one's having got together a battery of cameras by means of which a much greater number of impressions in a second was made. But even this was not satisfactory. Mr. Edison discovered that in order to create the illusion of a stationary, or rather, continuous picture, 46 views would have to be presented every second. This has been accomplished now, and it is said to be a really impressive presentation of people walking or performing some other action. What a wonderful age we're living in!

I was interested in the announcement that Sandow, the strong man, has been thus photographed in his entire series of demonstrations.



Sandow, the Strong Man.

I wish you might have seen our little twin grandchildren as they visited us today on the occasion of their third birthday. They were much excited and a trifle boisterous and their Scotch nurse, Janet, was obliged to check them frequently in their headlong flights up and down stairs. They love sliding down the curved mahogany banister rail of our house. Their own home hasn't such a nice one, for the stairs are not arranged as ours are but are "chopped up," as Esmond says. Little Sandra was dressed in a pretty pink lawn gown with wide bretelles over the shoulders. Her twin brother, Alec, a sturdy youngster, wore a velveteen suit with an Eton jacket and a lawn collar edged with lace. A wide sailor tie finished it at the neck. He still has his curls. Sandy threatens to cut them off, but Martha can't bear to have it done yet. And now, with much love, your old friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

Edison's opinion of the value of his invention of the kinetoscope proved to be unfounded, but no one could have foreseen to what a great business the movies would grow.

The Rose of Tralee.

Fellow Tribunite Jack Flynn tells us that this well known Anglo-Irish song was not written by William Pembroke, but by C. Mordaunt Spencer, the music being composed by J. W. Glover. Of the writer of the words, Mr. Flynn can give no information at all, but Glover, the composer of the music, died in 1899. From 1848 to 1885 he had been organist of the Roman Catholic procathedral in Dublin.

Another reader, Ehu Ghbert, sends the following: "I first heard this song sometime after 1910. Next, when Dick Little returned from a vacation in Ireland he gave some broadcasts telling of his trip. On one of these he talked about a couple of beautiful Irish songs he had brought home and he had the W-G-N ensemble play two of them. One was 'The Rose of Tralee,' and he chanted the words to a musical accompaniment."

But we still have no information about the author of the words.

The Old Haven School.

Mrs. Mary E. Rodgers, 7526 Philips avenue, writes of this old public school, which still stands at 15th and Wabash avenue, at one time the center of a fashionable neighborhood. "The teachers in 1882," says Mrs. Rodgers, "were Miss Sarah Brooks in seventh grade, Miss Rebecca Farson in eighth grade, and Mr. George C. Bannan, principal. Largely due to the instruction and kindness I received there, I became a Chicago teacher and held a principal's position for several years. Miss Farson [now Mrs. McKay] lives at 1403 North Pacific avenue, Glendale, Cal. She would be very glad to hear from former pupils."

Mrs. Rodgers herself would like to hear from any of the class of 1882.

An Old Cook Book.

Miss Frances Swain, director of home economics in the Chicago public schools, has loaned us an interesting old volume, "The Home Cook Book," published in 1874 for the benefit of the Home for the Friendless.

Many Chicago women interested in the home contributed recipes. Among names of contributors to the cook book, well known in Chicago in the '70s, we find those of Blair, Chetlain, Farlin, Scammon, Wicker, Smith [Perry H.], Nixon [W. P], and Ludlam.

DEFENSE WORKERS AND GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES NEED

Rooms
Apartments
Houses!

BECAUSE Washington is overcrowded, a number of government departments are being transferred to Chicago. In addition, thousands of defense workers and executives are coming to Chicago to work in the war materials plants. All are looking for places to live.

If you have a room, house or apartment to rent, describe it in the Tribune want ad section. It is Chicago's long established rental guide which is consulted by far more prospective tenants of all kinds because it prints far more rental want advertising than all other Chicago newspapers combined.

To offer your living quarters to the people now looking for them, call SUPerior 0100 and ask for a Tribune Want Ad-Viser. You can dictate your want ad or the Want Ad-Viser will be glad to write it up for you, if you wish, so as to get best results at lowest cost. If you are a telephone subscriber, you may charge your Tribune want ad.

Chicago's most widely consulted rental medium

Because they get better results, landlords and rental agents place in the Tribune far more rental want advertising than they place in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

Seven Leading Clubs Looking to Conventions

By Irene Steyskal.

The year's at the spring, and if the birds and buds and Pied Piper breezes haven't proclaimed it convincingly, the fact is established beyond doubt by the beehive activity of clubwomen preparing for their April and May conventions.

Seven state and national meetings of major importance in the women's sphere are pending. This is the schedule, with Chicago drawing the lion's share:

Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, 43d annual convention, April 22-24, Stevens hotel, Chicago.

National League of Women Voters, biennial Victory convention, April 27-May 1, Palmer House, Chicago.

Illinois League of Women Voters, annual state convention, May 1 and 2, Palmer House, Chicago.

General Federation of Women's Clubs, annual convention, April 27-May 2, Will Rogers Memorial auditorium, Fort Worth, Tex., with a 10 day good will tour of Mexico following.

National Congress of Parents and Teachers, 46th annual convention, May 3 to 7, San Antonio, Tex.

National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, 51st Continental congress, May 4 to 7, with preliminary meetings opening May 1, Stevens hotel, Chicago.

Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, May 11-14, Hotel Sherman, Chicago.

Mrs. R. V. Thornton. [Nelidoff photo.]

This week will see a three day assembly of delegates from Illinois' 200 PEO chapters in the Palmer House, with Mrs. R. V. Thornton presiding. PEO, originally a college society, was founded at Iowa Wesleyan, Mount Pleasant, Ia., in 1869. Records of the organization show that more than $1,000,000 has been spent in support of education, and 8,000 young women have been aided in the pursuit of their college training. PEO owns and supports Cottey college in Nevada, Mo., a junior boarding school for girls.

At the state convention, opening Thursday, Illinois members will study the full program of patriotic service which the society has added to its educational projects. The supreme chapter has invested $50,000, the maximum that any organization can buy, in war bonds.

Mrs. E. Clarke Ziesel of La Grange has the responsible job of convention chairman for the state meeting.

• • •

Mrs. F. Russell Lyon.

Presiding at all the general sessions of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers' convention will be Mrs. F. Russell Lyon, whose term in office expires with the convention meeting.

Mrs. William Kletzer of Portland, Ore., national president, is to be here to deliver the keynote address on the afternoon of the opening day. Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of Chicago public schools, and Nobel J. Puffer, superintendent of Cook county schools, also will be heard. Among other speakers to appear before the convention at its various sessions will be Miss Maria Leonard, dean of women at the University of Illinois; Rabbi Morton M. Berman; Ernest G. Osborn of Columbia university, and, as speaker at the banquet culminating the convention, Everett R. Clinchy, chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Mrs. Herbert H. Siddall heads the large convention committee.

"America Strong, with Spirit Free" is the theme adopted for the national parent-teacher convention in San Antonio. It is anticipated that 3,000 delegates, representing the congress' 2½ million members, will attend the five day session. Miss Margaret Mead, assistant curator of the American Museum of Natural History in New York, is to be the keynote speaker.

An Inter-American night is to be observed at the convention, at which the delegates will hear George I. Sanchez, professor of Latin American education at the University of Texas; L. A. De Wolfe, president of the Canadian Federation of Home and School, and Prof. Rafael Ramirez, specialist in rural education in Mexico. Bonaro Overstreet, author, is to address the convention on "Courage for Crisis," and Paul Kellogg, editor of Survey Graphic, will give another talk tuned to war times, "Our Job in the Community."

• • •

The National League of Women Voters announced last week that the Chinese ambassador to the United States, Dr. Hu Shih, would head its roster of convention speakers. Dr. Hu will appear at a league sponsored public meeting at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night, April 29, to tell of his country's high purposes in waging war. He will share the platform with Richard Tawney, British author, who will give England's view.

The Illinois League for Planned Parenthood, headed by Mrs. Stanley G. Harris, has set Thursday and Friday for its annual meeting in the Palmer House. Dr. C. Anderson Aldrich, chief of the medical staff at Children's Memorial hospital, will deliver an address on "The Importance of Planned Parenthood in Wartime" at a dinner meeting Thursday night.

LIVING IN ST. LOUIS

Mrs. Daniel J. Murphy, the former Katherine Lynch, has gone to St. Louis, Mo., to make her home. The daughter of Mrs. John P. Lynch of Norwood street and Mr. Murphy, son of Mrs. Helen C. Murphy of Arthur avenue, were married on April 11 in St. Gertrude's church.

[Koehne Photo.]

Mrs. Nellie Burns and Joseph Williams Married

The marriage of Mrs. Nellie Burns of North Lincoln avenue to Joseph T. Williams of North Newcastle street took place on April 11 in the Gethsemane Evangelical church. A reception followed at the Belmont hotel. Mr. Williams and his bride will live in Chicago.

Catholic Club Party Proceeds for Milk Fund

Mrs. Frank J. Lewis.

Several years ago the Illinois Club of Catholic Women established a milk fund which was to operate on a city-wide, nonsectarian basis for the tubercular poor, and named it for Mrs. Frank J. Lewis. Next Friday night the club will give its sixth annual card party in the Morrison hotel, and the money derived from the benefit will go into the Lewis milk fund.

Serving as general chairman of the party is Mrs. John L. Kellogg, 2952 Lake Shore drive. Mrs. Kellogg's report on the fund shows that the club's project last year provided 40,000 quarts of milk and 1,000 pints of cod liver oil for destitute tubercular patients being treated in their homes. The fund, Mrs. Kellogg explains, operates thru the free city dispensaries of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, which supplies the names of needy patients for the special milk service. In each case the recommendations of the physicians in charge of the various dispensaries are carried out by volunteer workers.

Benefits Are Prominent in Jewish Circles

Mrs. Harry Chernin. [Burke photo.]

The senior and junior divisions of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Chicago will unite next Sunday to give their annual "earning fund" dinner-dance at the Palmer House. Mrs. Harry Chernin and Mrs. George Chazanow are serving as junior chairmen of the arrangements committee, and Mrs. David Daskal and Mrs. Adolph Lipman as the senior chairmen.

Winfield sanitarium receives a substantial part of its operating funds from the society. The junior group sustains the Sachs grant, a special surgical department at Michael Reese hospital for advanced tubercular patients, and also helps to maintain the Craft shop at 2636 South Michigan avenue, where sheltered employment is given to men and women partly incapacitated by tuberculosis.

A breakfast in compliment to Mrs. Archibald Silverman of New York, leader in the Zionist movement, will be given at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday in the Hotel Sherman by the Chicago women's division of the American Jewish congress. Mrs. Silverman has given several years to the study of conditions and refugee work in Palestine. She has been in South America recently to establish contact with Jewish communities.

The presidents of more than 100 constituent organizations have been invited by Mrs. Philip T. Rashman, chairman of the affiliations committee, to attend.

Mrs. Silverman will speak at a regular division meeting at 2 o'clock. In the order of business, the annual election of officers is scheduled.

• • •

Chicago Junior American Ort is gathering at 3:30 o'clock today in the Morrison hotel to dedicate its new service flag at a special program of recognition for its soldiers, sailors, and flyers. Members of the families of the men in military service have been invited to attend.

Hadassah's annual fund raising effort for its comprehensive medical organization in Palestine will culminate for Chicago chapter of the Zionist society Friday in the 15th annual "give and get" luncheon, which is to be held in the Stevens hotel. Rabbi Israel Goldstein of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun in New York, one of the oldest of Jewish theological seminaries in America, will be the guest speaker. A special guest at the benefit will be the actress, Sylvia Sidney, star of "Angel Street." Directing arrangements for the party are Mrs. S. H. Soboroff, chapter president, and Mrs. James H. Olshan, tithe chairman.

• • •

Chicago Junior Hadassah members who have completed a specified unit in their annual earning fund endeavor will hold a dancing party tonight in the Congress hotel. Chicago D. A. R. to Cover 51st Congress Plans

Miss Florence Deneen. Monfort photo.

The Chicago chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will open its spring meeting on Thursday in the North ballroom of the Stevens hotel at 1:30 o'clock, a half hour earlier than usual, in order to cover plans for the 51st Continental Congress. For the first time in 51 years, the congress will meet this year in Chicago from May 4 thru May 7, with the Stevens hotel as its headquarters.

Miss Florence Deneen, regent of the Chicago chapter, will preside at the Thursday meeting. Guest speaker will be Col. Harry D. Abells, superintendent of the Morgan Park Military academy and Junior college. Miss Sarah Orndorff, soprano, will sing.

Protestant Woman's Group Will Observe 25th Anniversary

Mrs. F. W. Waterman.

Middle aged and elderly women who, after busy and absorbing years of rearing their families in the security of their own homes, suddenly find their lives altered by unforeseen circumstances, can find the industrial world in which they must make a place for themselves harsh and bewildering. Twenty-five years ago, at the suggestion of the Travelers' Aid society, the problems of such women were taken up for adjustment by a sympathetic group, which was organized under the Woman's department of the Chicago Church federation as the Protestant Woman's Protectorate.

Members of this social service agency, headed by Mrs. Fred W. Waterman, now in her fourth year as president, will gather at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow in the Marine dining room [a pleasant spring bower, now, of blossoming cherry trees and singing birds] of the Edgewater Beach hotel for a silver anniversary luncheon.

• • •

Seated as special guests at the speakers' table will be Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological seminary; Mrs. Palmer, who heads the Women's department of the Chicago Church federation; Mrs. C. D. Eulette, president of the Chicago Woman's club; Mrs. Thomas Clyne, president of the First district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Charles Clark, president of the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen, and Mrs. Lulu C. Hunter and Mrs. A. R. Krause, past presidents of the protectorate.

Mark Love, baritone, will sing, and J. Bradley-Griffin will give dramatic readings.

• • •

Mrs. Lloyd Hoover is chairman for the celebration, and her committee includes Mrs. Reid M. Bennett, Mrs. W. H. Walker, Mrs. G. F. Gerk, Mrs. Charles Palmquist, Mrs. John Gustafson, Mrs. C. A. Bloomquist, Mrs. August Burkhartsmeier, Mrs. Blair Latshaw, and Mrs. Robert L. Holmes.

It is estimated by Mrs. Henry T. Paulson, the director, that within a month some 250 women seek aid from the protectorate. They are given advice, food, clothing, shelter and carfare to visit prospective employers. In emergency cases, the protectorate provides for small loans. Coöperating with the agency are several psychiatrists and physicians. Women under the care of the protectorate are watched over until they have found satisfactory employment or are otherwise happily located.

SUCCESS-STYLES IN THE BEST OF FORSTMANN'S PURE WOOL FABRICS

$45

See the coat at the left? It hangs perfectly straight from your shoulders to your knees . . . in front. But there's a riot of ripples when you turn your back! See the coat at the right? It's a dead ringer for an officer's trench coat — with wonderfully contrived shoulders and a cinched-in waist. They're both carved out of princely Forstmann woolens — and every-inch hand tailored so that their good looks will never leave them. They both sell as fast as we can show them. Runners-up in favor are the loose-sleeved reefer with buttons like silver dollars — the button-front coat that buttons below the waist — the coat with a collar like your sports shirt. All in a wide range of colors, sizes 12 to 20. All spectacular at this price.

Journey Down Amazon River Takes Its Time

[This is the 38th article of a series on South America. The next will appear in an early issue.]

By Mason Warner.

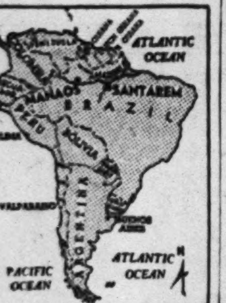
ON THE AMAZON RIVER

The Victoria got under way from Manaos at 10 o'clock Saturday evening. Sunday, our seventh day on the boat, was quiet, with religious services conducted by two priests.

We stopped at Itacoatiara. It is a town of only 1,000 population, but it has a paved street. The jungle in the background appeared denser than usual, and we were told by a ship's officer that 20,000 varieties of trees were growing in a 100,000 square mile territory north of the river.

We made little mileage on Monday—not more than 60 miles in 12 hours. We made stops at seven hamlets, and stopped twice for wood. We met a sister ship of the Amazonia Navigation company and again moored alongside in midstream for an hour, while the pilots exchanged information as to the stage of the river and changes in the channel.

• • •



Apparently, as a result of the pilots' conference, the Victoria that night steamed thru a new-made cutoff channel not more than 50 yards wide, and saved 20 miles by not going around a sharp bend in the river.

The river was so high that trees were submerged to a depth of 6 to 8 feet. Thick foliage above cast strange, opaque shadows to obscure the crooked channel. The Victoria seemed to be landlocked at times and only by right angle, letter S, Z, and even U turns, did she make her way back to the river.

• • •

Tuesday we were passing thru a country with more open jungle and less heavy underbrush. Thatched huts were more frequently seen, now appearing every mile or two. Here and there the high water had wrecked a home built too near the river's edge. A new hut higher up housed the family.

Cattle appeared on the scene. There was a herd of 10 to 20 cows in every clearing. The country was getting better with every hour's travel toward the sea. High water and swift currents had sent all the alligators, monkeys, and mosquitoes back to the still waters of swamps and marshes.

At 3 p. m. we stopped at Oriximini, a town with one street and 20 stores facing the river. At 4:30 we moored at the best kept woodyard we had seen, for the wood was neatly corded. Men and boys worked for five hours at a dog trot, and at 9:30 we got under way with 50 cords piled on the lower deck. Owing to the long stops, we made only 50 miles that day.

• • •

Wednesday found the Victoria in a cattle raising country. At 2 a. m., we anchored 50 feet from shore, adjacent to a crowded corral in which were 200 steers. Cowboys were shouting and yelling while they lassoed the cattle. The noose was thrown over the steer's horns, tightly adjusted, and the struggling creature was dragged and pushed to the water and compelled to swim alongside the boat.

Then the winch was put to work and the ungainly creature was hauled up, neck far stretched, suspended by the rope around its horns, over the boat's rail, and dropped to the deck while frantically squirming and struggling.

The steers hit the deck with a hard bump, all straddled out in a daze, but quickly regained their feet and were driven to the aft deck, where they stood subdued and quiet.

Next came 50 head of horses. To get them on board, slings were placed under their bellies, and the winch hauled them up and over the rail with much less ado than the loading of the cattle.

These additions to our cargo of rubber, Brazil nuts, dried hides, a few goats, and five turtles, pigs, chickens and turkeys, and an abundant supply of wood for fuel gave our boat a full cargo.

• • •

Perhaps because she was heavily laden, the Victoria experienced a slight mishap at Obidos, the next stop. The town boasted of a pier, a flimsy wooden structure. Except the docks at Manaos, it was the only man-made landing stage so far on the river.

A stiff head wind was blowing against the strong down current as the Victoria circled to make a landing. The big boat was caught by the wind in full force side on and blown against the pier, which shuddered at the impact, and the platform was put in a leaning position as the supporting piles were slanted from the perpendicular by the pushing strain of the vessel. The townspeople gathered on shore took the accident in good spirit and no attempt was made to delay the boat to collect damages.

From Obidos we sailed directly across the broad river to pick up more cattle—only five head—that ranged free in unfenced pasture. The cowhands could not efficiently handle a lasso. We were delayed two hours while three men raced up and down on horseback to rope the steers.

While waiting, passengers rejoiced that the 200 head at the big ranch farther back on the river had been rounded up in a corral before the Victoria arrived.

We arrived at Santarem at 8 o'clock Thursday morning. We were disappointed when we looked at the map, for we had sailed a winding course south all night long and were apparently no nearer Belem [Para], the end of our river trip, than we were the evening before at Alemquer.

Santarem is an up to date, clean, and progressive town at the confluence of the Tapajox river and the Amazon. The huge Ford rubber plantation is situated 150 miles up the Tapajoz, and the 2,500 inhabitants of Santarem are already reaping some commercial benefit from the activities at Fordlandia.

This Is a Tip to Tourist Seeking a Place to Eat

We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience, and live without heart;
We may live without friends; we may live without books;
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.

He may live without books—what is knowledge but grieving?
He may live without hope—what is hope but deceiving?
He may live without love—what is passion but pining?
But where is the man who can live without dining?
—Lord Lytton.

By Frederic Babcock.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Any one believing as Lord Lytton does can satisfy his craving in this city's French quarter. The Vieux Carré, encompassing the oldest, and therefore the most interesting, part of New Orleans, probably has more good restaurants per square foot than has any other district in America.

Elsewhere in this country cafés and night clubs rely on name bands, fancy decor, and sparkling entertainment as the means of drawing patronage. Here the eating places rely on only one thing—food. In this modern age, where noise and braggadocio are the accepted ways of attracting attention, the throwback to quiet and serenity is almost startling.

• • •

The best known of these places is, of course, the one founded more than a hundred years ago by Antoine Alciatore and run ever since under his first name.

M. Alciatore came over from France in 1840. He had been chef at the Château d'If, and he decided to carry out a few of the old world ideas in the new world. He succeeded in transplanting a bit of France to America. Today his place is known to gourmets all over the world. The owner and operator is Roy Alciatore, grandson of the founder. It is said to be the only American restaurant owned continuously by one family in one location for a full century. The present M. Alciatore has only one regret in life. He has no son to carry on the family name.

French customs of a hundred years ago still prevail in this restaurant. Each of the French waiters has served a 10 year apprenticeship as bus boy. He never writes a patron's order; instead, he memorizes each request. A recipe book has never been used. The claim is made that the ingredients of each dish are known only to the chefs. No music has ever been permitted.

• • •

Both the exterior and interior are about as plain and commonplace as you could find anywhere. But not so the food. When you wrap yourself around such specialties as Pompano en Papillotte, Pomme Souffle, Huitres en Coquille au Rockefeller, and Café Brulot Diabolique, you readily agree with the poet that civilized man cannot live without cooks.

This correspondent, laying no claims to being an epicure, was especially intrigued with the Pompano en Papillotte [which proved to be a fish baked in a paper bag] and the Huitres en Coquille [oysters to you] au Rockefeller. The latter, we were told, contained 26 ingredients.

"But why the name Rockefeller?" we asked.

"Because the dish is so rich," was the answer.

• • •

It might be added that this hangout of rich dishes is no place for a poor man, or for a man in a hurry. Any one wishing to enjoy his dinner the way it should be enjoyed should figure on at least a couple of hours for the ceremony. And more than a couple of dollars.

Occasionally the visitor will be shown the relics accumulated thru the years—glass, plates, antique silver, napkins, lamps, and the like. Or there will be trotted out for his perusal the words written by famous authors and journalists after these notables have wined and dined there. Under the circumstances, it is not surprising to find that all these words are laudatory.

"Unauthorized Entry."

The first attempt to colonize New Mexico was made in 1590 by Gaspar Castano de Sosa, a Spaniard, who was arrested and returned to Mexico a year later on charges of unauthorized entry.

"I am," he said. "I found a mob of your lovers outside, and I killed two of 'em."

"Good work!" she said. "But if the police arrest you, I'll swear you were with me at the time and we both commented on the shot. I'll be your little alibi."

"I'll do as much for you some time," Gregg was saying when Blake returned, ashen and shaken.

"One of the dead men is Mr. Hosmer! I recognized him. The police called him Jabbard, but it was Mr. Hosmer."

Tony was overwhelmed. Grongo knew who Hosmer was, but he asked:

"And who's Mr. Hosmer—or Jabbard?"

"He is—he was—one of my father's most trusted men," said Tony. "O, Blake, you'd better telephone my father. But don't tell mother. She's having one of her bad nights anyway."

The [illegible] servants could be heard talking together in a cluster at the back of the hall as Blake told them what he knew. Tony heard Norah give a shriek of horror, then run away sobbing.

"That's my maid," said Tony. "I'd better go see what is the matter." When at last she returned she was bewildered. "That's funny! When I went into Norah's room she stared at me, choked, gasped, and then hid her face in her hands, and wouldn't say anything."

At last Tony's father came in, and shortly afterward her brother. Tony told them that Greg was with her when the shot was fired, but he evaded their invitations to go outside and talk with the police. He said he had no information to contribute. They did not press him. But Tony kept studying him with increasing interest.

The homicide squad had arrived and flashlight photographs were being taken, measurements of every sort, finger prints sought for everywhere, not ignoring the automobile. Finally the two bodies were carried off and the crowds dispersed.

By now it was so late that Grongo had to tell Tony good night and good-by. He still insisted that he was leaving for California the next day. Her farewell was frigid.

As he went down the steps, he was poised to make a run for it if anybody accosted him. But no one noticed him. He saw a little knot of people standing by the scene of the double death, staring at the spot as if it were haunted, and questioning the night watchman.

On the way to his lodgings, Grongo made a careful search for a possible ambush. There was not a policeman in sight. He went up to his apartment, and let himself in with his key.

A policeman in uniform was helping two police detectives go over all his belongings, including his papers. One of them said:

"Is every other place closed that you finally hadda come home? I'm Detective Sergt. Healey. You're Grongo Zivotti. Don't be taking off your overcoat, for we're going right down to the station house. The skipper wants a word with you. And you might bring along your pajamas and your extra shirt and a toothbrush; for you'll probably be there over the week-end."

"What are you talking about, sergeant?" said Grongo.

"Well, in case you wouldn't know—tho, of course, you do—Mr. Jabbard, who'd been tailing you for some time, was killed tonight by a cheap little crook named Sandy McGarvin. He's been working for you these last weeks."

"That's right, but where is he now?"

"In the morgue. You left him on the pavement, but we put him on ice."

"You must be crazy," said Grongo lamely.

"I might be at that; for nobody would ever doubt the word of a Zivotti. Just take the opposite of it and you have the truth. And there's one thing I'll tell you and it's not two: Jabbard came back to life long enough to say to the first patrolman to reach him, 'Grongo—get Grongo,' he said, and then died entirely. But the skipper will tell it to you. So come along quiet."

Grongo went along quietly enough, but there was no peace in his wild soul.

The Brute had been really eager of late for his meeting with Wolf Jaegel, who would soon come out of Sing Sing expecting Zivotti to put up a poor mouth and say that he could not give him the money he had pledged. The Brute laughed in advance at the fool he would make of Jaegel. He just had to take Wheely into his confidence. He had to rehearse the imagined scene, and he made Wheely play the rôle of Jaegel:

"Now, Wheely, you go out and come in like you was Jaegel."

Wheely backed out and came rolling into the room with a great burst of speed and a sharp stop. The Brute said:

"Why, Mr. Jaegel, how do? I ain't seen you in a long w'ile. Been away? Well, I'm glad seeing you. I been tired keepin' your money. Here's those hunner' t'ousan' dollars like I promise you. If you need any more lea' me know. Remember those Regal chains you couldn' bring in w'en the bringin' in was so easy? Well, our business ain't so hot now; but my boy Gregory, he takes 'em like nobody's business. I ain't surprise if he marries in the family, and some day he owns the whole chain."

The Brute rubbed his padded hands together. The fall of Jaegel's jaw and his pride would be almost worth he hundred thousand dollars it would cost.

He had given Wheely no lines to say, but Wheely said:

"I hope to God it comes out like you say it."

"It will," said the Brute. "Ain't I got the money?"

It had been none too easy to pile up all that cash and he had had to borrow part of it. But he had it. He brought the last of it in after a long drive out on Long Island to the palatial home of Burps Maxon, whom he had more or less scared into "lending" him the last of the needed money, and then only after he had sworn on his mother's grave that he would return it. The Brute felt that he was rather overworking his mother's grave and his soul was in mortal terror.

Son Informs Brute That He's in Jail

He had hardly finished the preview of his Jaegel drama when the telephone rang—not the apartment house telephone, but the one whose number he gave only to the chosen few. Wheely picked up the instrument and, hearing a familiar voice, handed the receiver to the Brute.

"Babboo?"

"My boy! How glad to hear you! You coming see me soon?"

"I can't very well. You come see me. I'm in jail."

"Di'n' I told you that car you drive he goes too fast? You di'n' get hurt, are you? You ain't hit-and-run nobody, did you?"

"You come on down to the East 67th street station."

"How much bail I bring?"

"Just bring along the best lawyer you've got."

"I'm coming—presto possibile!"

The Brute held his hand over his leaping heart as he told Wheely all he knew. Wheely cowered in his chair but the Brute felt a kind of grandeur in the thought that he could still be the one his son had to run to for help. He cursed his lawyer for not being at home when he telephoned. He sped to the police station in a taxicab. The sight of his son, Beatrice's son, partly hidden by the rigid crossbars staggered him.

He was not admitted to Grongo's cell, and had to cling to the bars for support while Grongo spoke:

"Don't ask me why I'm here. Don't ask the cops. They don't know. They found Sandy McGarvin shot to death by a lug named Jabbard or Hosmer or something. Sandy had knifed him to death. Sandy ran some errands for me once, so, of course, they're trying to hang it on me. I've got a perfect alibi, but the cops have to tell the reporters something."

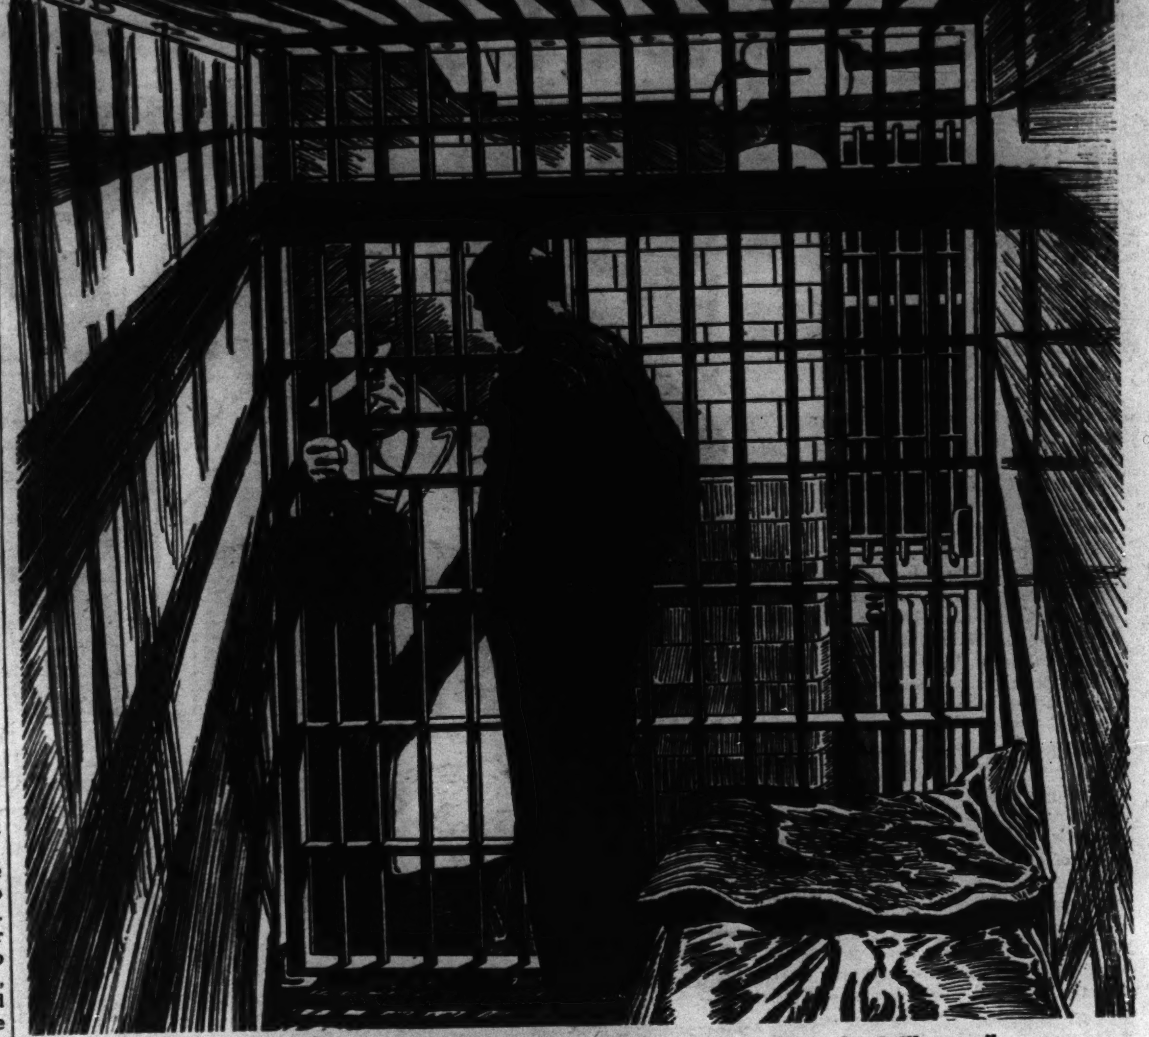
"I get you out," the Brute blustered, "if I got to pull down the jailhouse."

He tried to cheer his son and his son tried to cheer him. They parted smiling, but when the Brute sank back again into a taxicab, he was more frightened than he had been since that last night when his wife whispered her last good-by to him. He went to the home of the lawyer who had been most skilful in getting Zivotti out of his scrapes, a burly chunk of a man with no neck and a shaggy head that somehow justified his nickname, "the Buffalo," which was really taken from his real name, Bufale.

Bufale had just come in from a late banquet to Charlie Poshler, a crooked judge, who had not yet been overtaken by the justice he mishandled. Several notorious criminals had assisted at the love feast to Charlie.

"Get my boy out that jail," said the Brute to Bufale.

"If I can, of course," said Bufale.



"I get you out," the Brute blustered, "if I got to pull down the jailhouse."

"No 'can'; 'of course.' Out is w'at I want. Out I will have. W'at I pay you for all these years?"

Bufale promised everything.

The morning papers gave the story only moderate space and that more for its picturesqueness than for the prominence of the persons involved. After all, the war in Europe was more exciting and on a larger scale than a minor incident in New York's unending game of "cops and robbers," especially as Zivotti was obsolescent and his son had yet to make a reputation. There was no allusion to Tony Rever or her family.

Bufale called on Grongo and had a long talk with him in a conference room. Grongo, believing that a man should tell all to his lawyer and his doctor, told all. He added:

"I insist on one thing, Buffalo. The name of Miss Rever must be kept out of it."

"That's gallantry for you!"

"Gallantry, hell," said Grongo. "I hope I'm above any such rot. But once her family is dragged into the papers, they're just so much spent ammunition. If we can keep the Revers guessing and scared, they'll work like the devil to get me out of it."

"You have a head on your shoulders," said Bufale. "But the good old days are gone. The district attorney has vowed special severity to anybody who kills or even harms a police officer. Jabbard was not exactly that, but he was working with the force. The D. A.'s office will do all it can. I'll do all I can."

The D. A.'s office had assigned Assistant District Attorney Alfred Lucas of the homicide bureau to handle the case. He questioned the Rever family and learned about Gregory Williams' devotion to Tony. Tony tried half-heartedly to give Grongo an alibi, but was confused into an admission that Gregory came in after she heard the pistol shot. The butler, Blake, separately questioned, remembered saying to the cook: "That don't sound like a backfire; it sounds like a pistol." The servants' dining room was right close to the sound.

Norah loved Tony, and hated Gregory Williams as a menace to her mistress. She was positive that Jabbard had been killed by Grongo and his chauffeur for interfering with their plans. Lucas was impressed by Norah's story, convinced that Grongo had a share in the murder. He had Grongo held on information, and Jabbard's brother, who was also a detective, swore out a complaint charging that the murder was committed with the connivance and at the orders of Gregory Zivotti.

There was nothing Bufale could do until the arraignment. This took place in the court of Bufale's friend, Judge Poshler. Grongo was asked:

"How do you plead?"

"Not guilty," he answered.

Judge Poshler set the preliminary hearing for two weeks later, whereupon Bufale justified his name by bellowing:

"My client is held on the most outrageously flimsy evidence in the history of the courts of this alleged land of the free. I demand a prompt trial."

Judge Poshler set the date forward a week. It was a long week for Grongo, but not a dull one for his father. In a week Jaegel would be released in a murderous humor. Still the Brute threatened Bufale with death if any harm befell Grongo. This may have spurred the lawyer to extra zeal, for he came to the Brute with a hint.

"The D. A.'s office is out to get your son, since it can't get you. But I've found Judge Poshler—a great pal of mine, Charlie—but, well, he and I put our heads together and—well, the judge is in a jam. He's half crazy with money trouble and woman trouble. He needs—hang on to yourself, Brute—Charlie needs $50,000 mighty bad. Could you lend it to him?"

"Fif-fity-t'ou" the Brute sputtered. "Me lend that crook 50 grand? I never would get one penny back."

"No, you wouldn't."

"Then for w'y——" Then in slow illumination, "I see! I don't get back my money but I get back my boy?"

"Exactly."

"For 50 t'ousan' I buy Grongo out?"

"My fee would be extra, of course. It wasn't easy to win Charlie over. I should think that 25——"

"Are you as big a crook as Poshler?"

"Well, $20,000 would be a fair charge for my influence and hard work."

"It would be a fair holdup, a robbery."

"All right. Keep your money and let the D. A. keep your boy."

"I pay! I pay!" the Brute groaned, thinking of how Wolf Jaegel would look when he was asked to take less than half of his expectation. But that was for a future worry. Grongo was in jail.

Judge Dismisses All Charges Against Grongo

The Brute made Bufale swear that he would never tell Grongo where the money came from. He put $70,000 of his hoard into Bufale's hands, and waited for Grongo to come out and Jaegel to come in.

When the preliminary hearing was held before Judge Poshler, Attorney Lucas presented only the skeleton of a case. He had two reasons for this: in the first place, he did not want to betray his evidence to the defense so that they could forestall it; in the second, he had only the skeleton of a case. He was hoping that Grongo could be held long enough for him to pick up enough evidence to convict.

When Bufale demanded a dismissal of the flimsy charges against Grongo, Judge Poshler earned his hire. He said with a majestic, a Rhadamanthine sternness:

"The court sees not the faintest proven connection between the defendant and the crime alleged. Conceding that young Mr. Zivotti employed the deceased Sandy McGarvin, conceding even that the defendant was present when the double murder took place, there is no shred of proof that he was more than a helpless witness of the crime. I must, therefore, refuse to issue holding orders, and I hereby announce that Gregory Zivotti, alias Williams, is at liberty to walk out of this court."

So Grongo walked out, a free man. His father was waiting to receive him with solemn tenderness. Grongo shook him with a short-arm question:

"Babbo, did you put up a lot of money to buy me out?"

"Me? Where I get a lot of money?"

"Have you got the money to pay Jaegel?"

"Sure, sure!"

Bufale intervened:

"Gregory, my boy, I think you'd better get out of New York and stay out till I give you the word. You're an eyesore to the D. A.'s office and a blot on its nearly perfect record of convictions. When Judge Poshler released you, I heard Lucas muttering to his associates something about going to the grand jury and asking an indictment for you for being an accomplice in the removal of Jabbard.

"Furthermore, I've heard rumors that the D. A. is planning to indict Judge Poshler for accepting bribes right and left, as God knows he has. He promised to hold one of the pet public enemies on a high bail and then let him off for next to nothing. He hasn't been seen since. They've been looking into Poshler's bank accounts and they're mighty hefty for a judge on a small salary. I shouldn't be surprised if they charged the judge with releasing you for a nice piece of money.

"Get out of the state, Grongo. New Jersey is a good handy place; but you may have to go further west."

While Grongo was packing his things for departure, he thought much of Tony Rever. It was not his way to be driven from a goal at the first try. He felt a certain kinship with Tony. She was as wild and lawless as he was, except for a certain flaw of old fashioned idealism. Perhaps he could play on that to get her back within his reach. It was worth trying. On a sudden impulse he went to his telephone and called her. Luck was with him. She was at home. He murmured into her ear:

"Tony, you're first and last a good sport, with a sense of fair play. That's one thing you've got that the police haven't got. If I could have a word or two with you, I could prove that I'm innocent of anything but bad luck. I'm leaving town."

"So am I," said Tony dismally. "There's a lot of information-please I'd like to get straight about you before we part forever."

"Don't say that!"

"Well, 'forever' is only a word. Anyway, let's have a conference. Where? When?"

"I'll drive by your house slowly at—say, 8 o'clock tonight, and you. . . ."

"I'll be on the front steps."

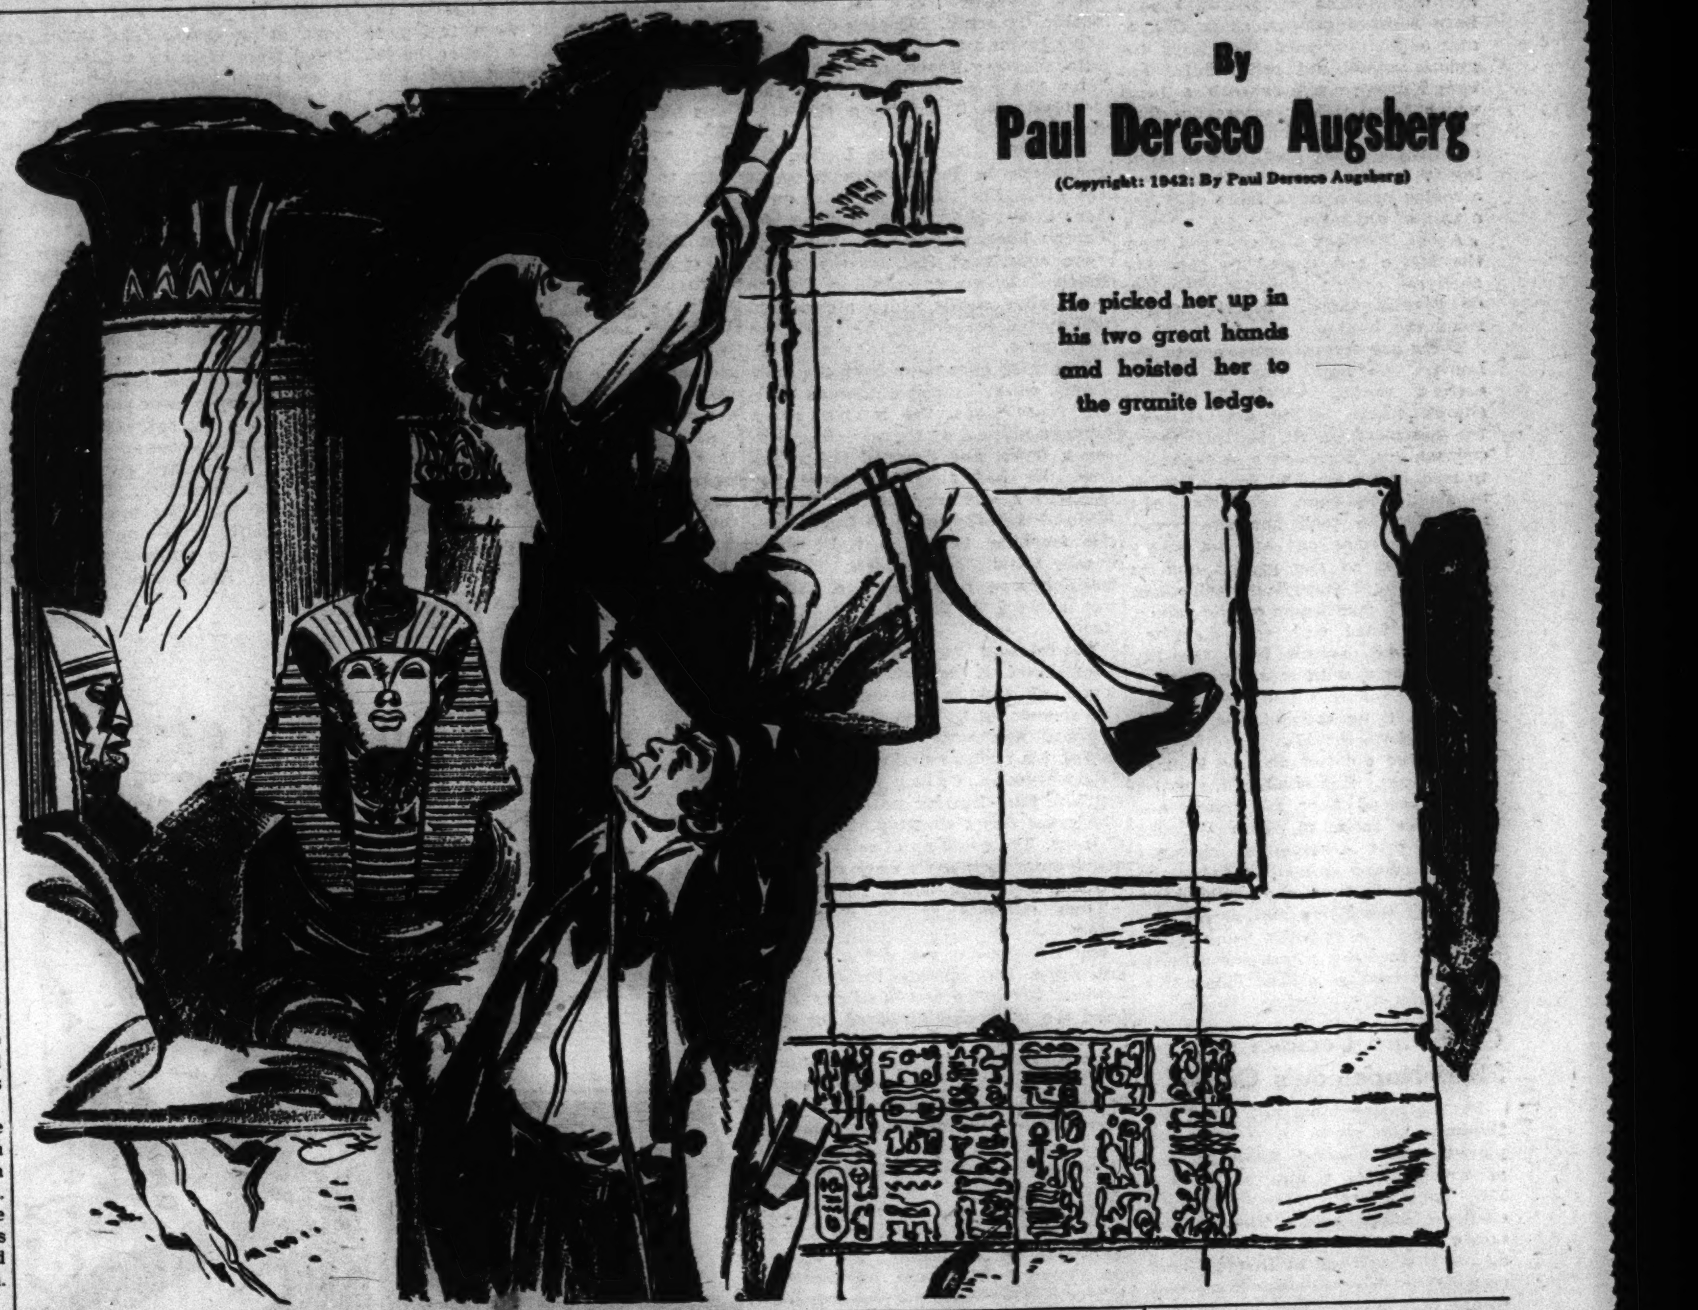
THE STOLEN LADY



By

Paul Deresco Augsberg

He picked her up in his two great hands and hoisted her to the granite ledge.

As OUR CLIPPER gained altitude over the water and the roofs of Lisbon faded astern, even the air we breathed seemed changed. The atmosphere of hate and terror which poisoned Europe was dropping behind.

My seat companion relaxed with a sigh that said, "Thank God!" more eloquently than any number of spoken words. He had been hugging a large leather briefcase tightly secured by embassy seals. Now he placed it in front of him on the floor and grinned at me.

His name was Haines. All correspondents assigned to Paris had been as certain to meet this man as to eat pressed duck at the Tour d'Argent or to drink a fine a l'eau at the Dome. An entrepreneur in works of art, particularly distinguished paintings, he had made it his business to get around and know every one, both exalted and low. For a while he had helped our embassy staff after the government moved to Vichy, and now that his time had come to go home, he was serving as diplomatic courier.

It soon became apparent to me that Haines had something big on his mind. Like a boy who has been in an escapade, he must brag or bust. Yet he was discreet. Not until we quit the Azores and our Clipper was beelining straight for New York did he even hint at what consumed him. Then he slapped my knee.

"Here's a story for you. I have my reasons for telling it now. Because, you see, it's not yet finished—even tho chapter one began when Columbus was sailing the ocean down there."

Germaine Benoit Belonged Peculiarly to Paris

Having thus scrambled his metaphors, Haines asked if I knew Germaine Benoit. No, I had never met the lady nor heard of her even. By the time my paper sent me to France, Germaine, it seems, was walking the streets, her head still high, her eyes clear, her hoydenish hair still clipped in the bangs which had punctuated her conquering youth.

She belonged peculiarly to Paris. The daughter of a laborer in the Batignolles quarter, with nothing except her native wits and exuberant charm to carry her up, she began in her teens as an artist's model. She lived with half a dozen painters before being seen by the Duc de Moret—faithful in turn to each.

She was small, barely more than five feet three, with a wild thing's grace and, indeed, its nature. Her kaleidoscopic play of expression, forever changing from smiles to a pout, come-and-get-it allure or innocent trust, one moment a child, in the next, a woman who knew, and she knew, the answers, gave to a face which was merely pretty the disturbing illusion of vivid beauty.

The duke marked the highest point in her fortunes. For seven years she remained his mistress, a dazzling creature, all youth and delight, as known in season at Deauville, the Lido and Biarritz, as home in Paris.

"But she was never completely happy," Haines assured me, "away from Paris. Germaine was Paris personified, beautiful and tolerant and sinful. If a client of mine were to say, 'See here, I want a picture that stands for Paris, the city that was, before this war,' I would tell him it's all there, everything, in her portrait done by Jean Dugat when little Germaine was riding the crest. It was characteristic, by the way, that she should have given that job to Dugat, a brilliant failure who muffed his promise and came at last to the bitter business of copying masters that hang in the Louvre. Germaine's first lover had been Dugat.

"And if this client wanted a picture which stood for Paris as it is now, its spirit crushed by the Nazi invader, I would say, 'What a shame! The perfect model for that was Germaine — Germaine Benoit as she looked on the day, five weeks ago, when she sent for me.'"

Had the summons, he said, not come in her name, he would certainly not have recognized her. Her bangs were gone and her French blonde hair, which had been as alive in its way as her mouth, was dead to look at and streaked with gray. She was ill. All luster had left her eyes. A little old woman was what he saw, and yet she had just turned 39.

Haines was as shocked, almost, by the place where he found Germaine as he was by her. Not even the poorest of struggling artists had ever lived in quite such squalor. There were just that brokendown bed and a chair—not even a washstand with pitcher and bowl.

She got down to business without delay. Her friend remembered La Belle Lucrece, the fabulous portrait by Leonardo? It was like asking Toscanini if he were acquainted, perhaps, with Wagner. There have been greater works of art, but none which touches Lucrece for glamor. She is small, roughly 20 inches by 30, and done on wood instead of canvas. The Fine Arts ministry's valuation was upwards of 20 million francs, altho of course, she was never for sale.

For sale or not, La Belle Lucrece had been ferreted out by Nazi agents and, with other priceless loot from the Louvre, was now in Berlin as a trophy of war.

"But she's not," said Germaine. "That one is Dugat's. Bien sur, a copy, a duplication painted on walnut like Leonardo's. Even the cracks and flyspecks are there, the latter done with coffee grounds."

Haines humored the woman. What else could he do? Obviously she was out of her mind. Dugat made flawless reproductions — no question of that, for his sense of color and manual skill were beyond reproach—but the rule at the Louvre had been strictly enforced, that no painting might ever be copied to size.

"I know what you're thinking," Germaine accused him. "The work was done by Dugat at home. From a copy! He had the exact proportions measurements taken when none was watching. The man has eyes like a camera lens. I tell you the one in Berlin is his."

That being the case, the natural question was what had become of the Leonardo? For answer Germaine drew out from the blanket an oblong board which was swathed in old silk.

Haines smiled. He knew what was coming now. He would be asked to purchase this fraud. But Haines was wrong. She did not want to sell! "Again you fool yourself," she told him, guessing his thoughts. "When we stole this picture——"

"Stole?" gasped Haines.

"But, naturally. A lady so old, 400 years, could not be expected to leave of herself! When we stole her I had a customer ready, an American millionaire.

"My need for money was great," she sighed, "and $150,000 make many, many francs, my friend. I was in love. Ce n'est pas la blague. I wanted to marry and settle down. His name was Christophe." Again she sighed. "Between American men and the French there is a notable difference, bien? He loved me enough. I do not complain. But first there would need to be a dowry to make the alliance worth his while. To get it I stole the Leonardo."

And this was the truth! That rectangular panel of wood wrapped in silk which she took from the covers and handed to Haines was the selfsame panel the Florentine master had placed on his easel and covered with paint. Poets had struggled to put it in words—and here it was now in a stinking hovel close to the harborside of Marseilles.

And all because a small Parisian had fallen head over heels in love! Germaine had reached an age when to have a hearth and a man of her own was her heart's desire. Besides, she had never really loved—never until she met Christophe. There was nothing, rien du tout, she told Haines, she would not have done to secure her man.

A decent dowry would do it? Good; she would get a sum which would make him blink. She was smart, Germaine, a practical girl who had always taken notice of things. This American millionaire, for instance; she knew of his lust for acquiring treasures which only the few could hope to possess—famous tapestries, rare old masters.

Now his yacht lay at Cannes while he was in Paris. Germaine sought an interview and got it.

"I knew the old pirate well," grinned Haines, "and I can just see his eyes light up when she frankly disclosed how she meant to proceed. He even offered her the suggestion of stealing something else besides, to divert the police from the major crime."

One-third of the cash would go to her, with equal amounts for Jean Dugat and another man named Ferenc Vaszi. This latter contributed the brawn, with Germaine as the brains of the expedition. Haines, who had met the fellow once, remembered him as a powerful brute with sullen black eyes under jungle growth brows. Hungarian. Vaszi had come to Paris to make a name and a fortune in art. But Fame merely glanced at his pictures and shrugged, and because of that he was steeped in bile.

Girl Plans Attack Like Spring Offensive

Like a general planning a spring offensive Germaine prepared for the hour of attack. Her American patron left for Athens, but he was back again in Paris by the time Dugat had completed the copy. He even took a look at the picture, paying a surreptitious visit to view the panel and, fox that he was, to make a small but distinctive mark on the edge of the board as identification. He met Ferenc Vaszi. He jollied Germaine.

It is a matter of real regret that the inspiration of this adventure must be just a name and little more. For as Helen's face launched a thousand ships when the Greeks invaded the plains of Troy, so did Christophe's steal the Leonardo.

He was a clerk at the national mint. He would have been about 40 years old. He had a surname, of course—but what? He was Christophe, the man she loved.

She met him that day at the Deux Magots after he had finished his lunch. Germaine, herself, was unable to eat. A brandy only, to steady her nerves.

It was raining. The sky was growing more gray. This was exactly the weather ordered for carrying out her expedition. The month was August and peace lay dying.

Germaine's great concern in this hour of crisis derived from the rumor that soon—even now—the most valuable art works kept in the Louvre were to be removed to greater safety. La Belle Lucrece would leave with the first. Delay might ruin her hopes. She must hurry.

Having dressed in her most attractive outfit, her sauciest hat, and highest heels to keep this rendezvous with her lover, she was a picture to kindle desire. Excitement, too, would have rouged her cheeks and brought a reckless light to her eyes. The effect was not lost upon Christophe, and his words were still treasured by her and repeated in that house in the Street of the Winds in Marseilles:

"What a woman you are! Were it not for the fact that I must return to my desk at the mint——"

"Tais-toi," she smiled. "This is afternoon!"

"But there is tonight."

She shook her head.

"Tomorrow evening, my pet," she told him. "Tonight I dine with my uncle's attorney. He has had a cablegram from New York. My uncle is not expected to live; even now, in fact, the poor man's dying; and his lawyer here is making an effort to win my esteem, since he knows that so soon I shall be an heiress."

Her fiance nodded. "Yes, you are correct in playing up to this attorney. Till the money is safe in your name at the bank, assuredly you must exercise caution not to antagonize the fellow. How—ah—much does he think you will get?"

She told him $40,000. It was only four-fifths of her share in the spoils, the fortune "her uncle who lived in New York" was about to confer on her by his "death"; but Christophe would hardly love her the less when she showed him a greater amount in cash!

She walked out with him, hugging his arm, dreading the moment of saying good-by. Perhaps—who could tell?—this luncheon hour might be the last she would ever see him.

Near La Monnaie, overlooking the Seine, they came to a halt in the rain and embraced. She left him then to hurry home and prepare herself for the work at hand.

Germaine made up as tho for a part to be played on the stage. She tried to look plain. No lipstick nor rouge, no high heeled slippers. Today she would be just a student of art who peered at paintings thru horn rimmed glasses, so lacking in any appeal for men that later the guards would not recall her. The bangs disappeared beneath a beret which fitted tightly across her forehead. Around her waist she coiled a stout rope, taking great care in securing the ends. To conceal it she wore a raglan coat with no more chic than a pair of old sacks.

NEXT SUNDAY—"THE TRAVELING MAN'S WIFE," A SHORT STORY BY OLGA L. ROSMANITH

THE STOLEN LADY

About 3 o'clock she emerged from the Metro and darted to gain the sheltered arcade protecting the Rue de Rivoli's shops. Directly across stood the Louvre.

There are several entrances to the Louvre. Germaine went in by the eastern portal, which faces the church whose tolling bell signaled the massacre on St. Bartholomew's crimson eve. Heretofore in her visits to reconnoiter she had been at pains to avoid this door. The man, she recalled, who took her ticket was talking to some one and he barely noticed her as she passed him to enter the large and gloomy hall which had been a guardroom of the palace.

It was filled with cold Egyptian relics, stone capitals from the Bubastis temple, with mummy cases, a few small sphinxes, and there in the center, a thing colossal, the granite tomb of Rameses III.

Germaine did not stay to look at these things. She climbed the stairs to the second floor and made her way from room to room till she reached that ornamented chamber with the ceiling painted by Delacroix. From its windows she could have looked at the Seine and across the stream on the opposite bank, have seen the building where her Christophe was bent at a desk doing tiresome sums.

Germaine Decides to Steal Napoleon's Crown

But Germaine must not slight the things in this room. Here were displayed such historic items as the golden spurs of a king of France, 15th century reliquaries, enameled chalices, silver ewers, the chaplet crown which Bonaparte had placed on his balding head at Reims. That crown, she decided, was what they would take when Vaszi had broken the glass on the case; Napoleon's crown and a few small treasures, merely enough to confuse the police.

Turning right, she crossed the Salon Carre, which opened into the Grande Galerie. The latter was long and severely plain, with here and there just a simple bench confronting the pictures which hung on its walls. As she entered, Germaine cast a prayerful glance toward the central space, far down the room, where La Belle Lucrece should be. She was there! The usual little group of visitors stood before her, searching her face, trying to read the age old riddle that Leonardo, so long ago, had managed to put in her cozening eyes.

Germaine moved along the opposite wall, pretending to look with reverent awe at masterpieces which thru those glasses, a cheap pair purchased out of a bin, were merely a blur that hurt her eyes.

The strain made her jumpy. Nor did it help her to see that Dugat and his easel stand were no longer in front of the Holy Family, where he had been copying the canvas two days ago, when she was last here. For she knew he had crossed the Swiss frontier; he would wait in Lausanne to receive his money. Dugat had performed his part and escaped, but for her the great ordeal impended! Small wonder that when a man brushed her hip and a voice said tensely, "You have the rope?" little Germaine almost broke and screamed.

"Yes," she answered.

Vaszi planted himself within a few steps and made a great show of absorbing the Titian which she was pretending to look at, too. She left him still eying the canvas, obviously a lunk of an artist come to study the masterpieces.

By a roundabout course Germaine made her way to regain the stairs she had first ascended.

At the foot of the steps is a small corner room, the Salle d'Apis. Vaszi was waiting when she appeared. There would have been no need of words, for they had rehearsed each move to be made. Germaine put the glasses into her bag and drew on a pair of loose silk gloves. They listened. Silence. They tiptoed quickly into the hall of Egyptian relics.

Vaszi slipped the coat from her shoulders and dropped it into the pharaoh's tomb. She uncoiled the rope encircling her waist. With practiced speed he tied it about her. Then he picked her up in his two great hands, one cupped around the back of her neck, the other clutching her under a knee, and, while she held rigid as tho in a trance, he hoisted her to the granite ledge. For a time she lay in precarious balance, Vaszi still reaching up to hold her. When she felt the rope tighten she knew he was ready to lower her within the tomb. Hanging on desperately by an arm, she let her feet fall into shadowy space, and a moment later the rope went slack as they touched the floor. Then she drew it in.

Germaine admitted to feeling terror, alone in that somber home of the dead. She clung to the image of her Christophe while waiting for Ferenc Vaszi to join her. But there were sounds of feet on the stairs, followed by voices speaking English—inaudible words which approached and passed, receded quickly, and then were gone.

Emerging once more from the Salle d'Apis, where he had hidden on hearing those steps, the Hungarian chinned himself up the wall, like scaling a fence, and dropped lightly inside. He had already lowered her bag with a cord, as yesterday he had lowered the copy made by Dugat and, the morning before, a tight little bundle containing his tools. The expedition was now complete. There was nothing to do but wait in the tomb.

The closing hour was 5 o'clock. They knew it had come from the sound of visitors passing to reach the eastern exit. Then the drone of a guard like some weary shepherd calling his flock as night draws near. "Fermeture—closing time. A-a-all out." A final hurried patter of feet. The great doors shutting. The clack of locks. The scuffling of soles as two attendants, their day's work done, recrossed the great hall.

Then stillness settled over the palace.

Outside, the day was dying at last, but night had already invaded the Louvre. Germaine and Vaszi emerged from the tomb and prepared for the step to be taken next. Oddly enough, it was Haines himself, something which he had said years before, when he and the Duc de Moret and others were talking lightly around a table, who inspired Germaine to attempt her coup. He had forgotten. But she had not.

He had said that no thief would tackle the Louvre. Most of its treasures were far too bulky; the priceless Venus de Milo, say, was not to be taken under one's arm or dropped in the pocket like somebody's watch. But suppose that a picture, not too large, were slashed from its frame and stolen—what, then? No art collector would dare to purchase a masterpiece which every one knew.

This was the reason, Haines had said, that the Louvre looked so deserted at night. Your French, to be sure, were a thrifty folk who hated the thought of wasting current. But here they were not being merely frugal. The fewer the lights in the palace the better, since the thing to be feared was fire, not theft, and flames could be sooner seen in the dark as the watchmen plodded upon their rounds.

One of those lights was burning dimly at the foot of the steps by the Salle d'Apis. In this corner room Germaine made ready the picture wire and adhesive tape which she took from her bag. And then they waited. It must have seemed hours before the watchman was heard on the stairs, descending slowly. For a moment his shadow, thrown by the light, appeared before him. He followed after.

Vaszi sprang at the man from behind, hooking one arm across his throat so he could not call. While he held him helpless, little Germaine came up with her tape and plastered a strip across his eyes. A longer length went around his head, twice around it, to gag his mouth. Then Vaszi tripped him and sat on his back as he bound the fellow's wrists and legs with picture wire and searched for his keys.

"Nun, jetzt," he grunted in throaty German, a stratagem used to mislead the police, "we shall bury our friend in the royal tomb."

By means of the rope the big Hungarian hauled him up that granite face like the side of a ship and, clearing the edge, lowered him into the Stygian hold.

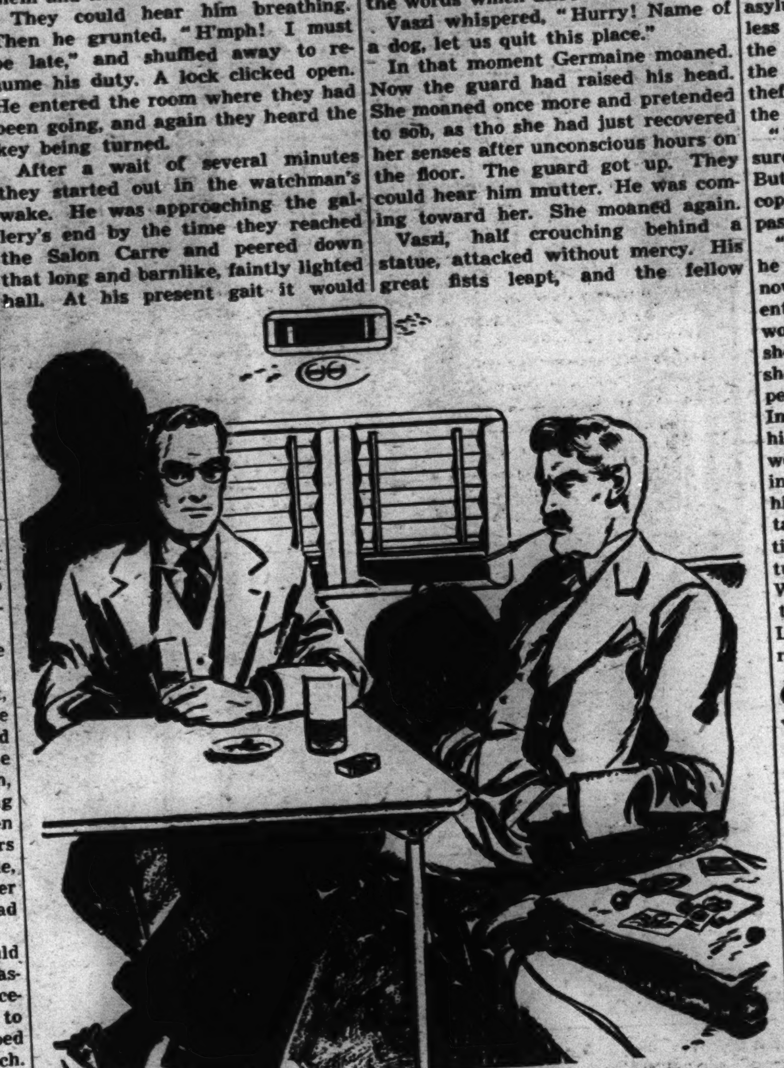
They climbed the stairs, she with the keys and bundle of tools, he bearing the spurious Leonardo. Only some of the doors would be locked. But there were other guards on duty, each making his rounds and from time to time meeting one of his fellows for talk. Sooner or later that man would be missed. Before this happened to raise the alarm they would have to be finished and out of the Louvre.

The first scare came as Germaine and Vaszi were stealing across the Salle des Bijoux to open the door leading into the room where the ceiling was painted by Delacroix. They were halfway to it when she heard footsteps climbing the broad and sweeping stairs which passed the Nike of Samothrace, the so called Winged Victory. They retreated at once to the narrow chamber that they had just quit.

The rain kept lashing against the windows as tho it were trying to warn the guard. The latter halted outside for a moment and then moved leisurely toward the door. It was left as they had found it—ajar. They were hiding beside it, concealed in the dark; but when he swung it open to listen, expecting to hear the approach of his friend who was lying bound and gagged in the tomb, the door formed a screen between them and him.

They could hear him breathing. Then he grunted, "H'mph! I must be late," and shuffled away to resume his duty. A lock clicked open. He entered the room where they had been going, and again they heard the key being turned.

After a wait of several minutes they started out in the watchman's wake. He was approaching the gallery's end by the time they reached the Salon Carre and peered down that long and barnlike, faintly lighted hall. At his present gait it would take him 20 minutes, at least, to make the tour of the Van Dyke room, to inspect the hall of the Rubens paintings, and then, pursuing his leisurely pace, to return and leave by the door he had entered. Those 20 minutes would tell the story, success or failure, riches and love—or spirit-crushing years in prison.



"Haines was waiting deliberately for me to ask him about the picture."

Vaszi sat down and removed his shoes. As soon as the watchman had disappeared, he entered the Grande Galerie. Meanwhile Germaine, in a room which adjoins the Salon Carre, unlocked the door of the storage closet for keeping the copyists' easels and paints. She found the light, then cleared a space where Vaszi could work. She unwrapped his tools. All was in readiness when he returned with the heavy frame from which Lucrece looked out with the same inscrutable eyes that had haunted 15 generations.

Girl Stands Guard as Vaszi Changes Paintings

Germaine stood guard while Vaszi sweated to substitute the modern Dugat in place of the genuine Leonardo. He had not quite finished framing the copy before she heard the watchman return. Dimly she glimpsed him passing a light which marked the great gallery's farther extreme. But still she remained in the shadows, waiting, her heartbeat quickened by hope and despair as she saw him drawing nearer and nearer that blank space left on the southern wall.

He did not see it; he kept on coming; he was approaching the same as before! Germaine went on tiptoe to the closet and signaled Vaszi to turn out the light. She entered it then. The door was closed. Tensely they listened there in darkness while the watchman paused to glance in that room before he traversed the Salon Carre.

Five minutes later Dugat's Lucrece was adorning her regular place on the wall and Germaine, having wrapped the Leonardo, was busy restoring the closet to order. She could hear the scratch of the cutting tool as Vaszi prepared to rob the case where Napoleon's chaplet crown was shown. Then another sound, disturbingly loud—the crash and tinkle of breaking glass. She shut the closet door and locked it, and within a few moments Vaszi joined her. He had left a half-filled sack on the floor, left it as tho, hearing some one approach, the burglar had fled in sudden panic.

Near the eastern end of the Grande Galerie are a hall and a flight of steps going down. The latter, concealed from view by a door, is used by workmen engaged in the Louvre. It leads to a room called the Salle d'Afrique, not far from a sort of postern entrance by which all employés leave the palace.

A guard sat on duty beside this door. He was all that remained between them and freedom. From the darkness they saw him reading a paper, mumbling now and then at the words which affronted his eyes.

Vaszi whispered, "Hurry! Name of a dog, let us quit this place."

In that moment Germaine moaned. Now the guard had raised his head. She moaned once more and pretended to sob, as tho she had just recovered her senses after unconscious hours on the floor. The guard got up. They could hear him mutter. He was coming toward her. She moaned again.

Vaszi, half crouching behind a statue, attacked without mercy. His great fists leapt, and the fellow dropped as tho hit by a sledge. He was out. There would be no need to delay for binding his wrists or gagging his tongue.

They opened the door. They closed it behind them. They set out briskly beside the Louvre, walking eastward along the street which lies between it and the bank of the Seine. They were no different from other people who scurried belatedly home in the storm. Germaine held the picture under her coat. But there was nothing peculiar in that, protecting a bundle from getting wet.

One can imagine how she must have felt when she reached her room and concealed the picture and changed her clothes. Christophe had been won! Now there was merely the slight detail of exchanging Lucrece for a tidy fortune. To the millionaire she addressed a note—"my mother has just returned to Paris," the agreed-on code—and then went forth to drop it into the special chute outside the nearest postal station. A pneumatique. According to rule, it would be delivered in less than an hour.

The American meant to come, himself, and get the picture and pay the money. Then he would depart by motor for Cannes. Tomorrow his yacht would clear the harbor.

Germaine had eaten nothing since breakfast. By this time it was after 10. She went to a bistro across the street and ordered some bread and cheese with beer. From its little zinc bar she could keep her eye on the entrance, now closed for the night, to her lodging.

A full hour passed. She had drunk her third beer.

From time to time the bar proprietor engaged Germaine in conversation. He would read his paper a while, then talk—for newsprint, he told her, troubled his eyes. He would read and then tell her what he had read. Hitler. The Col. Beck of Poland. That Chamberlain across the channel.

At last she heard him click his tongue.

"What now, m'sieur?"

"Ah, these Americans!"

"Eh?" gasped Germaine.

"They do not know the art of living. With them it is said that life is a race, and the farther they go the faster they run. This one, par exemple—I would not try to pronounce his name, a millionaire with a palace yacht. Today in the Champs Elysees he drops dead! His heart, to be sure. But one must use caution never to overtax the heart."

Haines remained silent while I was absorbing the tragic paradox of his story; the death of that "uncle who lived in New York," whose pretended demise would have meant so much to a little Parisian in love with her man. It seemed of a piece with the larger drama then soon to be played on Flanders plain and to roll, with all the alarms and excursions of mechanized war, over Paris itself.

Because of that drama, the fraudulent copy had gone, with the masterworks of the past, to some safer asylum where Nazi bombs would be less likely to cause destruction. In the haste and excitement of packing the pictures, a few days after the theft of Lucrece, no one had noticed the imposition.

"If they had," said Haines, "I'm sure that I'd have heard about it. But I hope some time to admire that copy. Obviously poor old Dugat surpassed himself when he did the panel.

"I told you I had my reasons," he said, "for giving out this story now. La Belle Lucrece is a 'different' picture. Where others are merely works of art, something to look at, she seems still to live. It is as tho she can actually see all that has happened since her creation. Those eyes! Imagine, when Leonardo was plying his brushes back in Florence, they were breaking ground for St. Peter's in Rome; Luther was soon to post his thesis which started the Protestant reformation; the French revolution had still to mark time two centuries more before it could break. What has happened to Paris under the Nazis is merely an episode to Lucrece. For régimes may come, régimes may go, but——!"

Girl's Theft Enhances Value of Portrait

I blinked at the man, and he smiled.

"Remember, my business is selling pictures. And this one—why, even little Germaine had added to its extrinsic value! By stealing Lucrece at the time she did, and the fact that the copy is now in Berlin, she enhanced its worth many thousand dollars. I'm giving hostages to temptation by letting you in on the story now."

"Look here," I exclaimed, "are you trying to tell me——?" And then I glanced at that oversized briefcase heavily studded with embassy seals.

"Don't jump to conclusions," Haines said quickly. "Just leave our state department out. But you're right. Lucrece is on board this Clipper. Fantastic, eh, when you consider how old Leonardo used to make sketches of a flying machine to go thru the air!"

But it was Germaine and not the great master who captivated my interest now. In that house in the Street of the Winds in Marseilles she had literally been starving to death with a portrait worth a million dollars!

All thru those months of "phony war" she had clung to the picture, unable to sell it, nor daring to try, in a Paris no longer filled with tourists. And then the invasion. Christophe was killed—but she had already passed from his life before the Germans streamed across Flanders. She fled from the city with all the others, still hanging on to La Belle Lucrece.

"Germaine was bitter against the Nazis," Haines continued. "Her Paris captured—to little Germaine, that was the same as the end of the world. She wanted me to take Lucrece beyond the Gestapo's searching reach; to keep her safe till Paris was free; to restore her then where she belongs, in a France no longer under the heel of what she called the 'barbarian swine.'"

So that was it. He had given his promise. And just to make sure he would not "forget" he was asking me to write this story, knowing that after its publication he would no longer have any choice—that then he would have to return Lucrece!

"But Germaine?" I asked.

The Clipper had passed from the fringe of a cloud, and the sun burst dazzling-bright on the water a mile or more beneath our wings. Haines seemed to be staring hard at the sight. But this was mere acting to give himself time.

"She was anxious to get me out of the house"—his voice sounded strained—"because of the picture. She wanted to know it was safely away. I could return in the morning, she said. I did. When I reached the Street of the Winds they were taking her out of that place—in a basket."

"You mean——?"

"I mean," Haines finished gruffly, "there was nothing left for her to live for. Her last excuse was gone. I had it."

HIS FABULOUS FORTUNE

By RUPERT HUGHES

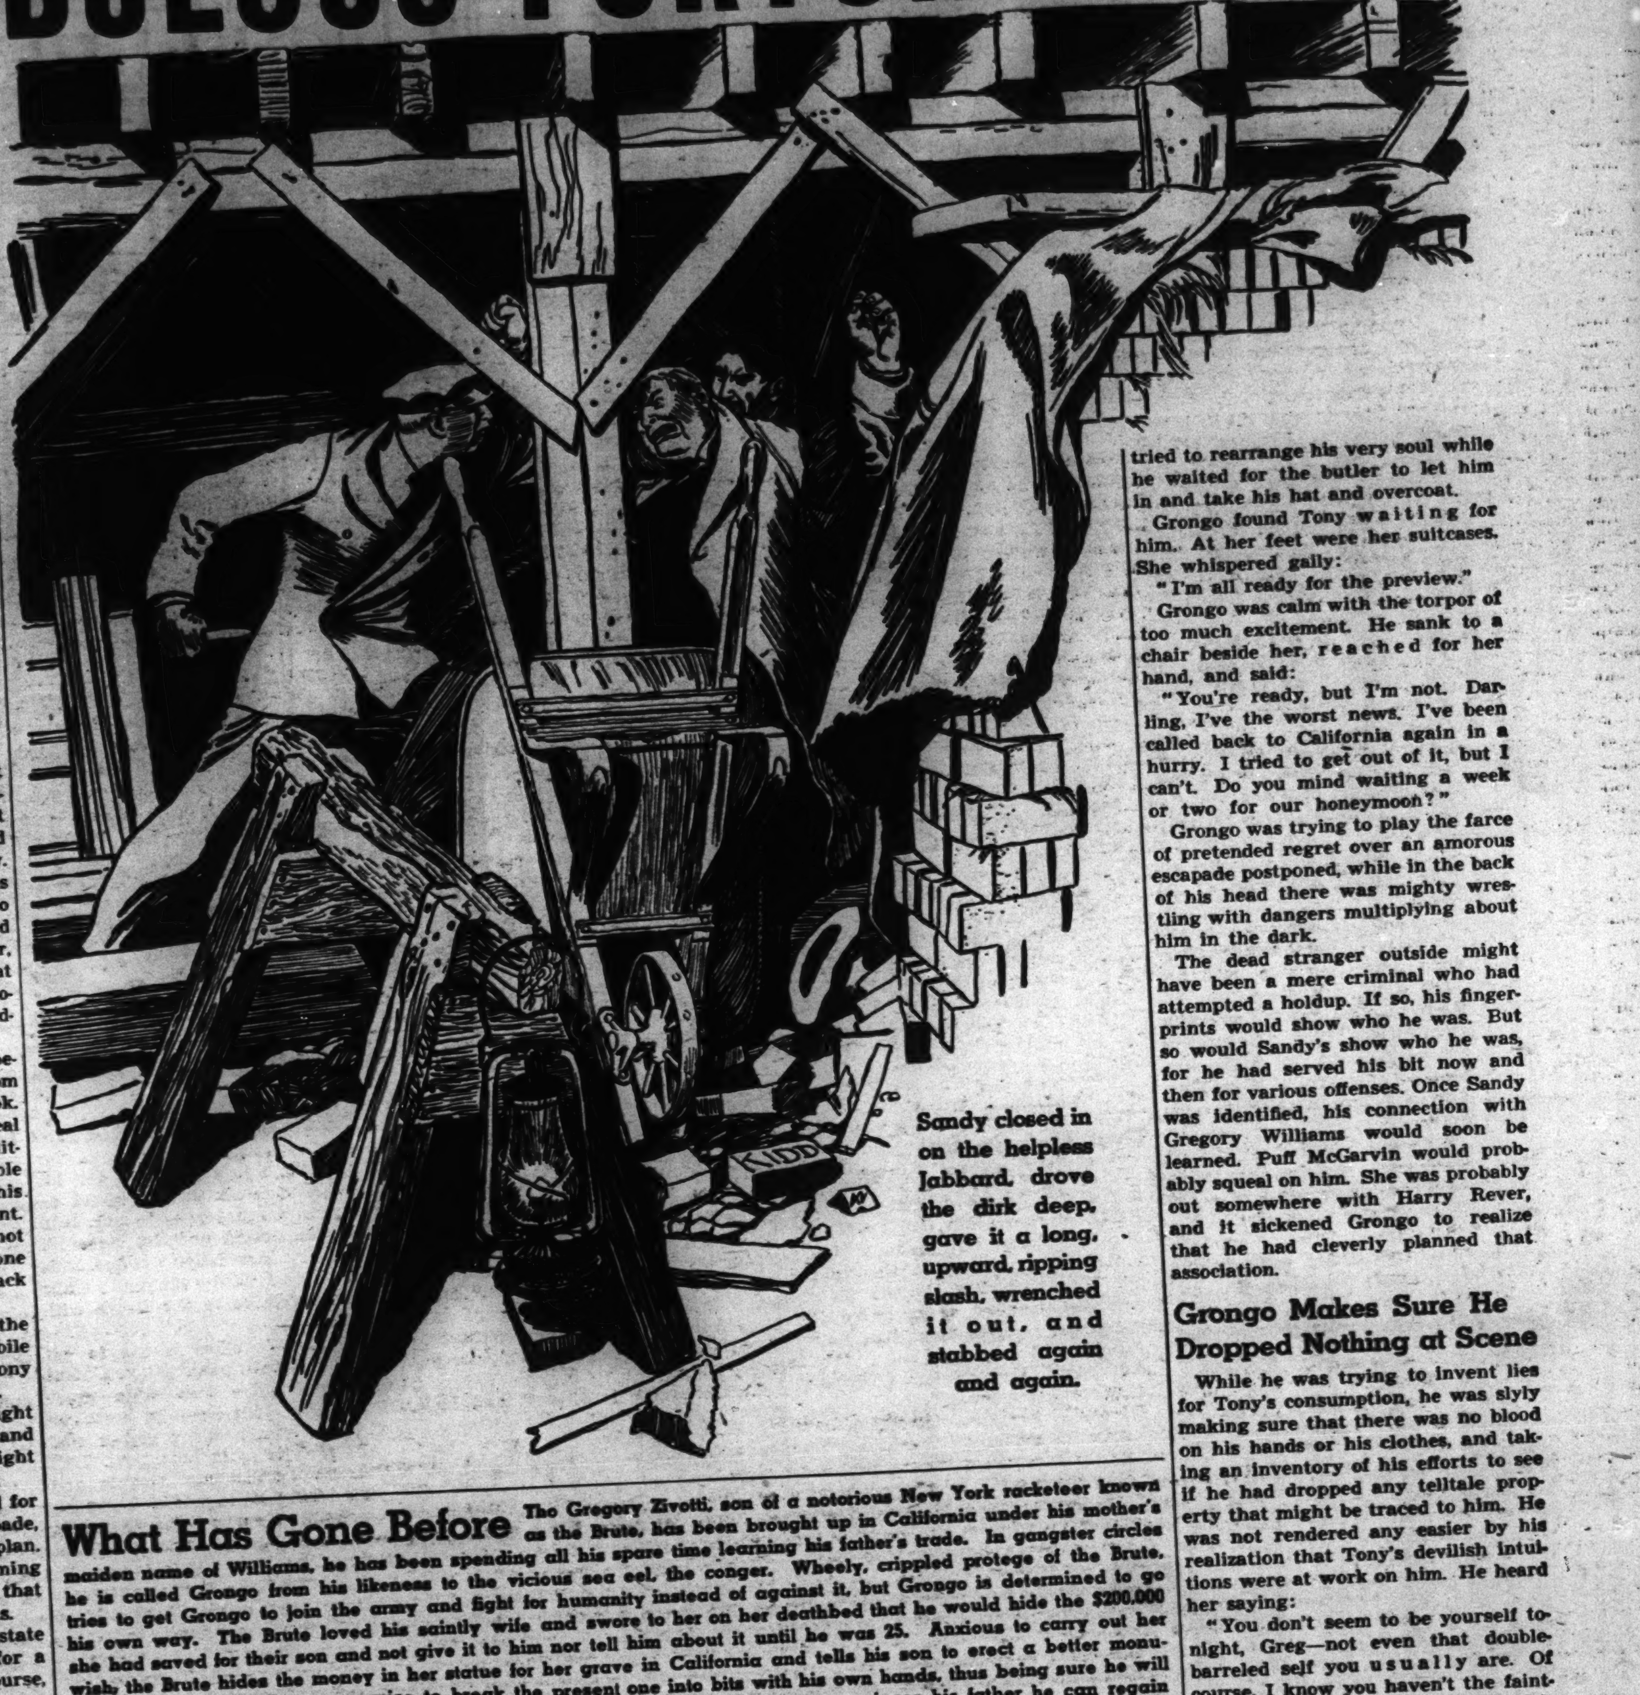
(Copyright: 1942: By Rupert Hughes.)



Sandy closed in on the helpless Jabbard, drove the dirk deep, gave it a long, upward, ripping slash, wrenched it out, and stabbed again and again.

What Has Gone Before

The Gregory Zivotti, son of a notorious New York racketeer known as the Brute, has been brought up in California under his mother's maiden name of Williams, he has been spending all his spare time learning his father's trade. In gangster circles he is called Grongo from his likeness to the vicious sea eel, the conger. Wheely, crippled protege of the Brute, tries to get Grongo to join the army and fight for humanity instead of against it, but Grongo is determined to go his own way. The Brute loved his saintly wife and swore to her on her deathbed that he would hide the $200,000 she had saved for their son and not give it to him nor tell him about it until he was 25. Anxious to carry out her wish, the Brute hides the money in her statue for her grave in California and tells his son to erect a better monument later, making Grongo promise to break the present one into bits with his own hands, thus being sure he will find the money his mother left him if anything happens to the Brute. Grongo convinces his father he can regain control of the restaurant racket that has been dwindling since the law caught up with the Brute seven years ago. The only way the Brute escaped prison at that time was to promise Wolf Jaegel $100,000 to take the rap for him. Jaegel's prison term is now almost up and the money will be due him. Grongo starts out to get control of the wealthy Regal chain restaurants by making love to Tony Rever, daughter of the president. He also hires Puff McGarvin, whose brother Sandy works for Grongo, to make love to Tony's brother Harry. Grongo plans to marry Tony and blackmail her father, but she rejects his proposal. He does not know that he is being checked on by Jabbard, one of Rever's men.

INSTALMENT IV.

IT was a long drive back and yet not long enough for Grongo to trust himself to speak before so critical an audience. But Tony had time to feel that she had been brutal, and she said:

"Let's tear this date out of our dear diary. Let's just imagine you never proposed and go on being good friends doing bad things. Yes? No?"

"All right," he said. "I'll try."

At any cost he had to see her again, and often. He had a double purpose now; first, to revenge himself on her, not only for rejecting him, but for seeing thru him so indecently; next, to use her for the capitulation of her family and the Regal restaurants.

He knew that Tony would go with him anywhere. Nothing would be easier than to get her to any secure hideout. He would disguise the abduction as romance. If her father and the police called it kidnaping, he would call it love, and compromise her so that all talk of his crime would be quenched by her disgrace. Her father would probably implore him to marry her.

Grongo had found the ideal spot for the kidnaping masked as a rendezvous. It was up in the hills just back of the Hudson river a hundred odd miles north of New York City. Here was a realm of vast spaces where the unbroken forests gave no hint that civilization had ever passed that way, where only Indians, deer, the fox and the hawk would seem at home. Automobile roads and automobiles were there, but seeing was hardly believing.

A certain popular writer had believed that if he could get away from people he could write a great book. This solitude struck him as the ideal place. So he had built himself a little cabin and made it comfortable with every convenience including his own electric pump and lighting plant. Of course, he found that he could not write at all. He was so much alone that he hated himself and went back to his noisy apartment in town.

Grongo and Tony stumbled on the place on one of their long automobile excursions, and Grongo begged Tony to promise him a week-end there.

"Up here," he said, "you might learn that you believe in my love and your own after all. Then you might consent to a real marriage."

Whether he played his part well for once, or she just wanted the escapade, she gave her consent to the plan. Suddenly everything was coming Grongo's way with an ease that should have made him suspicious.

Grongo called on the real estate agent and rented the cottage for a month, giving a false name, of course, but paying in advance—which was references enough. The following day he and Sandy drove up and stocked the place with provisions. It never occurred to them to take precautions, and, while Jabbard's men kept their distance, they examined the cottage after Grongo had gone, and saw how well it was provisioned.

In the meanwhile, Jabbard, feeling how grave a risk Tony was running in the company of such a character, persuaded Tony's devoted maid, Norah, that it was her duty to keep an eye on her beloved mistress without letting her know that she was being watched.

In a few days Norah telephoned to him that Tony had told her family an elaborate lie about visiting friends over Sunday and had instructed Norah to pack her suitcases for a three-day absence. But she omitted dinner gowns, and everything sure to be needed for such a week-end visit.

The Revers lived in a rather ornate house in the earlier numbers of the East Sixties. Next door, an apartment house was being built, and construction materials were piled up in what was to be a tradesmen's entrance down a long court like an alley. This furnished Jabbard with a well-concealed observation post, and on the evening of Tony's excursion, he ensconced himself there soon after dark. He avoided letting the night watchman of the building see him on his rounds.

At about 9 o'clock, Sandy McGarvin, in a chauffeur's livery, drove up in a good looking car. Grongo had given him the cash and Sandy bought it under an alias from a used-car dealer. Grongo had also provided false license plates to exchange at a later hour for the ones on the car. He was trying to think of everything that might happen.

As instructed, Sandy did not stop before the entrance to the Revers' but in front of the unfinished apartment house. Grongo had decided to approach Tony's home on foot in order to do a bit of scouting for possible shadows. In the trunk at the back of his car was a little suitcase with Sandy's effects, and a new suitcase unmarked, and filled with clothes for Grongo, all new.

He studied the neighborhood so cautiously that he was delayed a little in his arrival, and Sandy grew frantic with a need of tobacco. Grongo would never let him smoke while driving; so he left the car and stepped into the dark alleyway where the concrete mixers and rubbish of the building furnished concealment.

Jabbard Hides Behind Pile of Glazed Brick

He did not notice the lurking Jabbard who fell back behind a pile of glazed brick. Sandy finished two cigarets and was lighting another when Grongo came along, found the driver's seat empty, and looked about in a moment's dismay. The flare of a match showed him where Sandy was and he hurried to it in a rage. Sandy identified himself.

"Hello, boss, it's me."

"Why aren't you in the car?"

"Chee, boss, I was just takin' a drag."

"Well, you be at the wheel when I come out on the steps. Have the engine running and be at the curb when I get in there with Miss——when I get there."

"Sure, boss."

As Grongo was about to step out into the light, a hand materialized from the blackness and seized his collar. Another gripped Sandy.

Instinctively neither made a sound. Grongo tried to eel out of the clutch, but he was swung around into the bulk of some big and powerful man whose identity and purpose he could not imagine. Sandy simply ripped open the buttons of his overcoat, slipped out of it, and ran. Looking back for Grongo to follow, he saw only a smoky wrestle going on in the dark.

He dug out of his pocket the only weapon he carried, a stout knife, and ran back into the dark court. He could not make out which was Grongo and which the octopus that had caught him. But Jabbard could see the flash of the knife blade, and he used Grongo as a shield for himself until Grongo, by whirling his head under Jabbard's arm, wrenched his collar from Jabbard's twisted fingers.

With a back sweep of his great arm, Jabbard sent Grongo reeling against the glazed bricks, and confronted Sandy, who was a maniac with terror—for Grongo. He moved in on Jabbard, only to have his knife-arm seized while Jabbard's great left arm wrapped around his throat.

Grongo had always felt himself superior to such altruistic idiocies as loyalty, but before he could take thought, he sprang to the back of Jabbard, thrust his hands down around Jabbard's big arms, planted a knee in Jabbard's spine, and pulled backward with all his might till Jabbard had to let go of the squirming Sandy. Grongo expected Sandy to run and counted on following him, but the faithful Sandy could not abandon Grongo to capture, so he closed in on the helpless Jabbard, drove the dirk deep, gave it a long, upward, ripping slash, wrenched it out, and stabbed again and again.

In horror Grongo let go and Jabbard fell forward on his face. Yet by instinct and training, he writhed about, wrested his pistol from its shoulder holster, and with a supreme effort raised his gun, shoved it against Sandy's left side, and fired point blank. The muzzle was so close that the report was muffled.

Sandy pitched forward and slithered in such mortal agony that Grongo forgot himself once more and bent forward, turning Sandy over to see if he could be of any help. But Sandy, having found his epic moment, having killed a cop and been killed by a cop, was denied the feel of glory in his terror for his chief. He died, whispering:

"Grongo, beat it! GRON-go, b—b——"

Grongo was taking such pains not to get any blood on his hands that he did not even look at Jabbard, who was making an almost postmortem effort to fire at Grongo. But his strength was ebbing so fast that he could not even pull the trigger. The pistol fell with a clack.

As Grongo peered out into the street, he saw only a taxicab shooting past, a pedestrian or two idling in the distance. He hurried up the steps of the Rever house and rang the bell. He straightened his ruffled collar and tried to rearrange his very soul while he waited for the butler to let him in and take his hat and overcoat.

Grongo found Tony waiting for him. At her feet were her suitcases. She whispered gaily:

"I'm all ready for the preview."

Grongo was calm with the torpor of too much excitement. He sank to a chair beside her, reached for her hand, and said:

"You're ready, but I'm not. Darling, I've the worst news. I've been called back to California again in a hurry. I tried to get out of it, but I can't. Do you mind waiting a week or two for our honeymoon?"

Grongo was trying to play the farce of pretended regret over an amorous escapade postponed, while in the back of his head there was mighty wrestling with dangers multiplying about him in the dark.

The dead stranger outside might have been a mere criminal who had attempted a holdup. If so, his fingerprints would show who he was. But so would Sandy's show who he was, for he had served his bit now and then for various offenses. Once Sandy was identified, his connection with Gregory Williams would soon be learned. Puff McGarvin would probably squeal on him. She was probably out somewhere with Harry Rever, and it sickened Grongo to realize that he had cleverly planned that association.

Grongo Makes Sure He Dropped Nothing at Scene

While he was trying to invent lies for Tony's consumption, he was slyly making sure that there was no blood on his hands or his clothes, and taking an inventory of his efforts to see if he had dropped any telltale property that might be traced to him. He was not rendered any easier by his realization that Tony's devilish intuitions were at work on him. He heard her saying:

"You don't seem to be yourself tonight, Greg—not even that double-barreled self you usually are. Of course, I know you haven't the faintest idea of going to California. It's all right by me if you want to squirm out of your crazy little exploring party, but why not tell me the truth for once, just for the novelty of it? Whatever it is that you've swallowed, baby, 'pit it out in mama's hand."

There was a shrill sound of a police whistle from outside. It was repeated. There was a rumor of running feet, voices, automobile horns. By and by an ambulance arrived with its siren going.

The butler hurried past the living room door. Tony wanted to go, too, but Grongo said:

"Better not. It's probably an auto crash and you'll only see something ghastly."

The butler went back thru the hall and Tony checked him with a question.

"O, Blake, what's all the excitement about?"

"I'm afraid it's rather gruesome, miss," said Blake. "From what I could gather, the watchman of the new building next door was making his rounds, and suddenly, in the alleyway, he came on two dead men."

"Right under our windows! Has anybody any idea who they are?"

"Not so far as I could learn, miss. If you wish, I will go out for fuller information."

"Please do, Blake. Greg, don't you want to go and have a look?"

"I'd rather be with you."

"You didn't commit both murders, did you, Greg?"

"By advice of counsel, I don't remember."

"You could have done it, you know." She laughed a little: "Just before you rang the doorbell. I thought I heard a shot. I said to Norah, 'Is that a pistol?' And she said, 'O, no, miss. I'm sure it's just

War Bringing New Activity to Miami Beach

MIAMI BEACH, FLA. The war, which pessimists said would kill the Florida season, is, both directly and indirectly, responsible for a spring activity far beyond other years. Regular winter visitors came as usual and many of them are lingering longer. As fast as they leave, in fact faster, new arrivals in khaki take their place. Parents now find a perfect excuse for that trip to Miami Beach, to visit their sons, and the whole picture adds up to the liveliest summer ever at Miami Beach.

Many of the rookies undoubtedly laugh at the thought of occupying $12 a day rooms on $21 a month. And some critical citizens in other parts of the country frown at the same idea, thinking the boys have it too soft in Florida, the millionaire's playground. Actually, the laugh is on both of them, for these men do not roll up to the hotel in a taxi, nor have a bellboy carry their baggage in the elevator, nor ring for service.

As men arrive daily, they are carried in army trucks to the foot of Lincoln road, and they look hot in their wool olive drab, with overcoat in one hand and duffel bag in the other. They are assigned to their hotels, then they march to them, walk up the stairs of the hotel, carrying their own bags. They even wash their own windows, making their beds, and while they may be in famed Miami Beach, they have no chance to forget that they're in the army now.

Swimming pools are utilized as part of the physical training program, but cabanas are locked and beach umbrellas removed. As a new contingent marched down Ocean drive to headquarters the other day, a Massachusetts couple, sunning on a hotel porch, suddenly jerked up straight, for in the ranks they spotted their son, whom they had shipped to a Massachusetts camp just six weeks earlier.

The million dollar pier at Miami Beach was opened last Wednesday as a recreation center for enlisted men, and the area in front, heretofore one of the less sightly spots of the beach, is now a landscaped parkway, as society matrons adopted this project as their own.

In Miami, the Service Men's club in Bay Front park is equally popular and equally well sponsored. Manning's Seafood restaurant, familiar to tourists, is now a navy mess hall, for a sub chaser training center is housed at the Clyde-Mallory warehouse, whence, in the halcyon days of a year or two ago, ships sailed for cruises to those peaceful islands of the West Indies.

Nor is Coral Gables left out of the picture of Miami in wartime. In addition to the USO and RAF cadets at the University of Miami, the Embry Riddle School of Aviation has leased for the duration the Coliseum, a huge building which was erected in boom days of 1925 and which has been something of a white elephant since.

In spite of war activity, civilian life proceeds in an orderly manner, with the favorite subject, next to the war, this season and next. Already the state racing commission is making plans for Florida's two horse tracks, nine greyhound plants, and the Biscayne Fronton, where jai alai is played.

The state's financial program is predicated largely on gasoline and racing, and while racing is just another source of fun for winter visitors, its importance to Florida is revealed in the gross revenue in the season just closed, nearly $4,500,000, the highest since pari-mutuel wagering was legalized 10 years ago; highest, not because of more attendance or more wagering, for those figures were slightly lower, but because of higher taxation.

Spring visitors in Miami Beach include Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Bosworth of Elgin, who are at the Whitman. Their daughter, Mary Lou, a student at Fairmount school, Washington, D. C., joined them between semesters.

Mrs. Frank Callahan of Oak Park, who with Mr. Callahan is vacationing at the Whitman, was luncheon hostess at the hotel, honoring her mother, Mrs. John J. Meany of Chicago, who will be at the Dallas Park hotel several weeks longer.

Albert D. Lasker, who has had the "for sale" sign in front of his Ocean Front estate for some time now, has sold it to Sebastian S. Kresge, five-and-dime magnate.

Mr. and Mrs. Elisha L. Esseley will occupy their North Bay road home until early in May. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pick will not board up their La Gorce drive residence until May 15. Selecting the same date for their departure are Mr. and Mrs. David J. Molloy, who will return to the Glen View club at Golf via Washington, where they will visit their daughter, Mrs. James Dumas Henry and Mr. Henry. Women in War Work

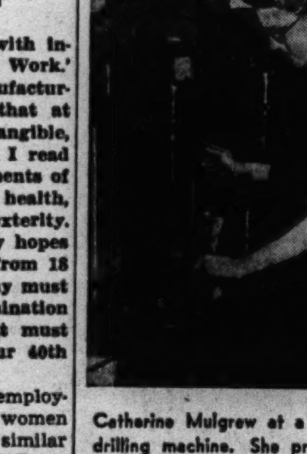
By India Moffett

[The Women in War Work department reports on women's activities in war and defense work and will answer questions of women wishing to take part in these activities.]

L. M. T. writes: "I read with interest your 'Women in War Work.' The part about women manufacturing radios made me think that at last there is something tangible, something I can do. Eagerly I read on; I could meet the requirements of a high school education, good health, calm nerves, and finger dexterity. The next sentence blasted my hopes to nothing minus. 'Women from 18 to 40 may qualify.' Why? Why must there be this idiotic discrimination against older workers? What must we do, shoot ourselves on our 40th birthdays?"

This regulation that most employers have about not hiring women over 40 brings forth letters similar to this every day. They are difficult to answer for it does seem stupid and unfair that older women in good health should not be given a chance to work in war industries. However, if we women will look at the matter in an objective way without emotion or hysteria, it is easy to understand why there must be rules and regulations concerning the age of workers. It is hard on those who feel that they are as physically fit for any sort of labor as their daughters or younger sisters, for in many cases they are right; they are as efficient, quick, responsible, and willing as younger women. But have they as much endurance? We wonder, being a frankly over 40 ourself.

It is well to remember, too, that most of the older women looking for employment in war work are women who are not accustomed to the world of business. Those who have been in this world for years are working today and their war work must be volunteer work performed outside of business hours. Housework is more confining and in many ways harder than office or store or factory work, but it does not prepare a woman to spend long hours at a work bench, on an assembly line, behind a desk or counter, or in any of the other places where work is being done to supply our armed forces with the implements of war. A housewife could do any of these things, we know, if she had to and she may be called upon to do it at some distant date, but older women who have raised families will not be called into industry until the supply of younger women is exhausted.



Catherine Mulgrew at a single spindle drilling machine. She prepared herself for a war production job in the machine shop of the NYA War Production center at Sycamore, Ill.

The woman who is complaining because her age is keeping her from engaging in war industry would be smart to spend the next few months learning something that would give her an "in" when and if she is needed. Typists, stenographers, and secretaries are in great demand and all business colleges report many calls for women who have had this training. Consequently, some of the schools are starting accelerated programs to prepare women in as short a time as possible. The Career institute, for instance, will have a special three months course for women, starting April 27. It will include typewriting, speedwriting, and business English, and free placement is included.

The Bryant and Stratton Business college has speeded up its 6 and 10 months courses to 4 and 8 months by eliminating unnecessary subjects. The Gregg school will give special courses if there is sufficient demand and it reports that some students now are taking combination courses in order to finish their schooling sooner. The Moser school has no accelerated or special courses as yet.

In England where women have gone into war industry in large numbers much of their training is done in plants and on the job thru absorption, Thelma McKelvey, in charge of the women's labor supply service of the labor division of the War Production board, reports in a pamphlet, "Women in War Production." Over there women are used for heavy as well as light work, and in some munitions plants women make up from 80 to 90 per cent of the workers. Women are handling highly skilled jobs which at first were believed to be suitable only for men.

R. W. Hambrook of the United States Office of Education stated after a four months' study of vocational education in England the position of British women as follows: "The variety of work done by women is astonishing. They have taken the place of men in sweeping floors, cleaning shops, running cranes, doing messenger work, keeping reports, checking and inspecting, running semiautomatic and automatic machinery, operating lathes, shapers, vertical and horizontal milling machines, surface grinders with magnetic chucks, cylindrical grinders, setting up machines, filing, drilling, assembling, scraping, fitting, etching, making electrical fittings, and other jobs too numerous to catalog."

Not many of these jobs are being done by women in this country yet, but there is no reason to suppose that all of them will not be filled by American women as time goes on. Only peace in the near future—and who dares to hope for that—would prevent women here from having to do what their English sisters have done so splendidly. As Mr. Hambrook says, "England realizes that at the end of this war she will owe a tremendous debt to the loyal efforts of her women in meeting a situation of significant importance in the present emergency."

It is probable that most of the training for women to engage on a large scale in war industries in this country will have to be done right on the jobs, but some preliminary courses are being given in various schools in this area at government expense. How successful these courses will be in helping women to secure better paying jobs than they would get without the school training is problematical. Theoretically completing the courses should make it possible for women to step into more specialized work, but actually they may not accomplish this at all. Going in at the bottom and working up still is a good way in which to make a success at anything, and women who want to become supervisors in offices or factories will do well to consider this old-fashioned way of getting ahead before signing up for two or three month courses in some subject in which it would be impossible to progress very far in that limited time.

The picture of training women for war work is changing so rapidly and constantly that it is impossible to list all the schools that are providing courses, but at the present time the following are institutions that are working with the government in giving specialized training for women: The Illinois Institute of Technology, 1951 West Madison street; Northwestern university, the Technological institute on the Evanston campus; the school of business at the University of Chicago; the National Youth Administration, room 1642, 20 North Wacker drive, and the American Television Laboratory, 433 East Erie street. The United States Employment service, Delaware 4100, gives information about specific defense industrial plants that are hiring and training women.

Phoenix Busy Entertaining Service Men

PHOENIX, ARIZ. While it has been a winter of sunshine, lazy warm days and simple out of doors recreation, the war and the boys in service have by no means been forgotten. The Chicagoans who have winter homes in the valley or who have spent some time in one of the resort hotels have each contributed generously of their time and efforts. They have been definitely conscious of their responsibility whether they are in Phoenix or Chicago.

Even while sun-lazying around the pools at the Biltmore hotel, Jokake or Camelback inns there have been few idle moments, for each hotel has kept a supply of yarn on hand and countless numbers of garments have been made during the winter. The Biltmore hotel has had a first aid class for the hotel guests and neighbors. A similar class has been held at the Judson school for their boys and for the Paradise Valley colony. The recreational facilities of the Biltmore hotel have been available to any boy in uniform without charge. The pool and the movies have been the most popular diversions.

• • •

About six weeks ago, Mrs. Horace Newhall of Winnetka, who has a winter home in Arcadia and two sons in training, saw the urgent need of recreational room for the boys in camp in the valley. She hoped to raise enough money from her friends to furnish one room, but thru the enthusiasm and generosity of their friends she has been able to furnish eight such rooms.

One of the first things Mrs. Newhall did was to put in electricity and concrete floors. She collected furniture from her friends and neighbors and together with Mrs. Wirt Morton and Mrs. Taylor Strawn all the furniture was repainted and reupholstered, if necessary. Mr. Morton was importuned into making 20 tables. Mrs. Chester Chapin gave several ping pong tables and Mrs. Strawn, the Mortons, Mrs. Chaplin, the Edward Swifts, and the Burridge Butlers all gave considerable financial assistance.

The commanding officers report that on the first day the rooms were open the request for leaves was cut 60 per cent. All the rooms have game tables, ping pong tables, comfortable chairs to lounge in and plenty of good reading material and lamps. Mrs. Newhall has now been made chairman of the furniture committee in the valley to see that all the recreational rooms have a "homelike" and attractive atmosphere.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ward Seabury and Mrs. John Lyle Vette, who were winter visitors at Camelback inn, gave and furnished two rooms at the artillery field. Mrs. Niblack Thorne recently completed her nursing course and is now on full time duty at Good Samaritan hospital in Phoenix. Mrs. Taylor has just completed her nutrition course, so also has Mrs. William Reed and Mrs. Edith Bond.

• • •

Mrs. Christopher Simpson is vitally interested in getting subscriptions for the various magazines so the boys will have an ample and current supply of reading material. Mrs. Walter Johnson has completed her advanced first aid course.

Miss Nora Carney, Mrs. William Wrigley, Mrs. Edward Ravenscroft, and Miss Mary Louise Anderson have been busy knitting various articles for "our boys." Mrs. Wrigley, Mrs. Morton, and Mrs. George Gillespie have been most gracious in extending the hospitality of their homes—and grand meals—to the boys in training. Last Saturday, Mrs. Ben Goldstein had about 40 of the RAF boys, who have just arrived in this country, over for a swim and a "pot of tea" at the Arizona Biltmore. When asked what impressed them most in Phoenix they replied "three eggs for breakfast, the citrus trees, and the sun tanned girls."

Mrs. Robert Binsinger of Glencoe recently had about 60 boys from Luke field over for an afternoon of swimming. Mrs. Cora Hart and Mrs. Alice Berman also entertained various groups of the boys. Mrs. Hugo Dalmar donated yarn and dressings and supplies for first aid. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Evans of Jokake inn, formerly of Chicago, have entertained groups of boys each week from the various fields with a swim followed by a buffet lunch or supper at the remada at the pool. Mr. Evans, whose pet avocation is photography, is having great fun with the English boys who are most eager to photograph everything they see in the new and strange country. Camera supplies are practically an unknown luxury in England.

The David Shands of Evanston have just arrived in Phoenix and have taken a home on Rose lane until the end of May. With the Shands are their two small daughters. Tommy Troxel, who is visiting his uncle, James Troxel, in Arcadia, will return to Highland Park next week with two more merit badges won toward his Eagle scout rank. He is riding every morning with Ray Griswold from the Desert Trails ranch, learning all the intricacies of horsemanship and Ray is conceded to know more about horses and how to handle them than any one in Arizona. Tommy also is working on his badge for citrus culture.

On Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnson entertained at cocktails in their home "Palmas Lindas" for Mr. and Mrs. Walter Swanson, Mrs. George Williamson, Mrs. James McKinsey, and William Arnold.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Mark of Winnetka are enjoying lazy days around the pool at the Jokake inn, where they are spending the month.

Chicagoans See Cattle Brought in from Mexico

TUCSON, ARIZ. "They are the most beautiful creatures I have ever seen," said Dick Jenkins. But he wasn't talking about Tucson co-eds. He was talking about 12 bulls, Chicagoans by birth, who have been wintering at the Rebell ranch, south of the border. They are on their way back to Chicago, along with a considerable progeny, and will be putting in appearances at the stock yards soon.

The bulls, unlike some other visitors, had their transportation out here paid and were accommodated free at the Mexican ranch. They are handsome animals and full of good breeding. The scene of Dick Jenkins' sententious observation was the border town of Sasabe, where a herd of over 3,000 head crossed the border and were greeted with baths of arsenic and creosote. Forty vaqueros escorted the cattle across the line, displaying team play in their rounding up and cutting out which would be the envy of Bernie Bierman or Lynn Waldorf.

The crossing was witnessed by some 250 visitors, one of whom, a sweet and confused lady asked: "When are they bathing the cattle?" "In about 20 minutes, as soon as we can get the towels," replied a lanky cowpoke.

• • •

The spectators at the crossing were members and guests of the Southern Arizona Dude Ranches association. They were luncheon guests at Jenkins' Rancho de La Osa under the welcome shade of tall tamarisk trees in the large patio. A number of the guests stayed for a Mexican dinner in Sasabe, after which they attended a frontier dance.

Heading the procession to the little border town was Howard W. Miller, president of the association and owner of the Wild Horse ranch at Cortaro. With him were a number of Chicagoans, currently enjoying the spring vacations at Wild Horse. Among them were Miss Valerie du Fraine, Miss Rosemary Lynch, Mrs. James Barry Lennon Jr., Mrs. Emily Romaine, Miss Jean Romaine, Mr. and Mrs. William Faitz and their two small daughters, Martha and Susan.

Other Chicagoans at the cattle crossing were Mrs. Edward L. Hicks of Winnetka, a guest at La Osa; Theodore Stein of Chicago, who has a house in Tucson, and Miss Barbara McClurg of Chicago, there for the week-end with a group of girls from Geneva college, where she is a student.

Downtown Tucson is experiencing a longer tourist season than ever before. Jack Procter's Pioneer hotel is still packing them in and reservations indicate that business will continue well into May. Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Young of Chicago have been staying at the Pioneer and attending business sessions of the Hotel Men's convention at the El Conquistador.

Austin Jenner of Winnetka is stopping at the Pioneer and visiting his son, Edward, at the Southern Arizona school for boys. Other recent arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. Andrew R. Martin of Chicago, Dr. John P. O'Connell of Chicago, Otto F. Fisher of Highwood, the Misses Margaret and Marie Bauer, and Robert W. Mounteer of Chicago.

A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting

Boston, Mass., Apr. 18. If it weren't for my job, I think I'd have lived and died without ever getting to New England (the same as not living, to a lot of people!). Many times planned visits didn't work out . . . a catastrophe always seemed to cheat me of my own Boston "tea party" and all those sights this early fountain-head of America offered. But at last business called,—so here I am, making the rounds of many of the factories which supply American stores with such a sizable supply of stocks . . . YOUR home with so many everyday necessities and comforts! Later, I'll report more news of New England-made BUY-LINES,—in the meantime, here are some special suggestions for your week's "I need" shopping list . . .

Most important fashion trend I've noticed this season is a swing-back to NATURAL charm! I guess it's the war,—busy women in a busy world depending mostly on the assets Mother Nature gave them to make them lovely and chic! Just remember to invest in the New Cushion-Guard KURLASH Eyelash Curler ($1) at your department or drug store. Slip your lashes through its rubber tipped curlers, and see the immediate eye-flattery you achieve,—longer-appearing lashes that curl romantically upward from eyes that seem larger, more romantic, and more NATURALLY alluring!

SWAN-antics in LIFE this week are clever as a Disney film! If you missed them there, see McCall's, Ladies' Home Journal, and the Woman's Home Companion for May. Subject: SWAN—the baby-gentle floating soap that's a sudsin' whiz. And there it is, sudsing everything in the house! Baby gets a SWAN-ing, because SWAN is pure as finest imported Castiles. Pop gets SWAN because SWAN gives him the rich lather he likes. Mama chooses SWAN because SWAN suds last and last . . . does more dishes per penny than old-style floating soaps. Watch your magazines for these bright, fresh SWAN-talks . . . then hie yourself to the grocery or drug store for this thrifty do-everything floating soap!

Sculptors and Painters Have Spirited Show

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors has a colorful and spirited exhibit in its annual members' show now hanging at the Chicago Galleries association, 215 North Michigan avenue. The society is made up of many of our most able artists and the exhibit is one no one should miss. Topping the show is Harriet Krawiec's "Red, White and Blue" and closely seconding her brilliant painting are "Triumphal Arch," by Rudolph F. Ingerle; "Silver Moon Roses," by Anna Lee Stacey; "Colrossie Mercury—The Golden Bull," by Eugenie Glaman, and "Colors on the Farm" by Oscar D. Soellner.

Karl C. Brandner has a beautiful winter landscape, "Sabbath the 14th." Solidly painted, full of life and animation, is the amusing "Commuters," by Edithe Jane Cassady. Leslie Buck offers a stunning still life painted with consummate skill, "The Green Bottle." Claude Buck in "Reverie," gives us one of the most exquisite portraits that this winter of exhibitions has yet yielded.

There are a number of outstanding portraits in the show. Oskar Gross in "Francine" offers a charming study of a laughing little girl. Benjamin S. Kanne has an interesting likeness of an old man,—done a little with the velvety touch of Joseph Allworthy—"Portrait." Antonin Sterba shows a beautifully painted portrait of his son in uniform, "Lieut. Antonin Messenger Sterba." "Lee" by Elmer A. Forsberg is an attractive painting of a young boy. Sudduth Goff in his polished portrait of Mrs. Henry T. Duncan offers a capital foil to the boldly-planed "Aunt Electra" of Averil Conwell.

Winifred Pleimling shows a workmanlike, straightforward portrait, "Portrait of James T. Carney"; Macena Barton, who often paints portraits, has sent in a solemn still life descanted from the classics, "Poet and Muse." Frank C. Peyraud shows a richly-painted landscape, "Mid Summer." Karl Plath offers "Penguins," a solemn conference of these delightful birds which has its human counterpart in the conference of clowns found in "Planning" by Walter Krawiec. Anna Lynch shows a charming flower arrangement, "Of Earth's Treasures," and Marshall D. Smith brings back thoughts of an earlier peaceful Italy with his painting of a gondola, "Venetian Butterflies."

Among other painters represented are Adam Emory Albright [with a fine landscape], Marie Blanke, Charles W. Dahlgreen, Frank V. Dudley, Gerald A. Frank, J. Jeffery Grant, F. R. Harper, Louis J. Kaep, John T. Nolf, Gasper J. Ruffolo and James Topping. The exhibition will continue to May 2 and is well worth seeing.

◆

C. Curry Bohm has a brilliant exhibit of landscapes at the Palette and Chisel Academy of the Fine Arts, 1012 North Dearborn street, to April 26. This is an exhibit not to be missed. Mr. Bohm is one of our outstanding landscape painters and has an enviable reputation as a "Brown County" man; the Hoosier Salon finds him a rightfully consistent prize winner. Mark his one-man show with a star; there are paintings in it which will give you a thrill of pleasure.

◆

An exhibit of prints and drawings by Murray Jones is on view at the Paul Theobald's gallery, 5 North Wabash avenue, thru April 25.

◆

Flora Schofield has a diversified and interesting group of paintings on view at the Gordon club, Fine Arts building, thru April 30. There are a number of attractive paintings in the show and a number of pleasing compositions which, lacking grace and charm, make their appeal thru honest and blunt statement. Of such is the arrangement for an early "Breakfast" and the painting in which a chair figures largely. Mrs. Schofield has a directness of attack in her technique which is intriguing.

◆

The 32d annual exhibition of work by members of the Chicago Society of Artists is current thru April at the Roullier Galleries, 410 South Michigan avenue. James Swann, secretary of the society and an etcher of ability, is leaving next Tuesday to join the armed forces. His enthusiasm has been of marked help in keeping the society on its toes after the sad loss of Mrs. Jaques a year ago, and his departure for service will mean some one else must take over. The Chicago Society of Etchers has such a far-flung membership on both sides of the Atlantic that it needs a steadying and yet impetuous hand at the helm to keep it at its keenest. Mrs. Jaques imbued Mr. Swann with her love of fine etching and he has done an enormous amount of work in keeping the standards of the print exhibits as high as they were when they became his charge. Until his return from the army, the Chicago Society of Artists will need its friends, more than ever, to rally around and keep the importance of etching as an art medium well to the fore.

The current exhibit of prints is well worth seeing. The Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize was awarded to "Filipino Dancer," by Max Pollack. Orovida, who is Picasso's daughter and lives in London, is represented by "Galloping Zebra," a zestful study of an animal in action. Lee Sturges, president of the society, has a fine winter landscape, "Barnyard in Winter," in which a wagon and a flock of sheep are featured. "Children," by Cyrus LeRoy Baldridge, a page of sketches of Chinese children, is intriguing. A good study of a horse is found in "Compeer—II.," by Rodney Thomson. "After the Rains," bq Doel Reed; "The Little Visitor," by E. Modrakowska; "Rural Free Delivery," by James Swann, and "Ballerina," by Margaret Ann Gaug, are among the many other prints not to be overlooked.

The Northwest Art league has an attractive exhibition of oils and water colors in the Club Woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers. The exhibit will run to May 1. Probably the most appealing picture in the show is Ted Vognild's "Climbing Kitten." The exhibit is diversified with a number of landscapes and still lifes and a minimum of portraits. Julia Sulzer Griffith has a colorful study of flowers, "Petunias," and an attractive Mexican landscape with the cathedral at Tasco the heart of it. "Ginny," by Arthur Ross Crawford, stands out for the excellence of its craftsmanship; it is the study of a little girl and definitely good. Elling Trommes offers a nice thing in "Fruit"; "Bittersweet," by Josephine J. Eastman, is very well done and the "Scotty Head," by Ted Vognild is a likable painting of a dog.

"Cinnerarias" by Nina K. Griffin is on view in the Washington Water Color club exhibit, the Corcoran Gallery, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Griffin, noted Chicago painter, also has a one-man show at Beloit college, in the Theodore Leyman Wright Art hall.

◆

Three artists are to be featured in the coming International Water Color exhibition at the Art institute. Twenty-two works by George Rouault, the French modernist whose painting resembles stained glass, will occupy one gallery in the east wing. Another gallery has been set aside for pictures by Francis Chapin, veteran Art institute instructor, and a third for water colors by Cameron Booth of St. Paul.

A number of the water colors in the show have been invited, the others will be there by preference of the jury which was composed of Malcolm Hackett, Frederic Taubes and William Gropper.

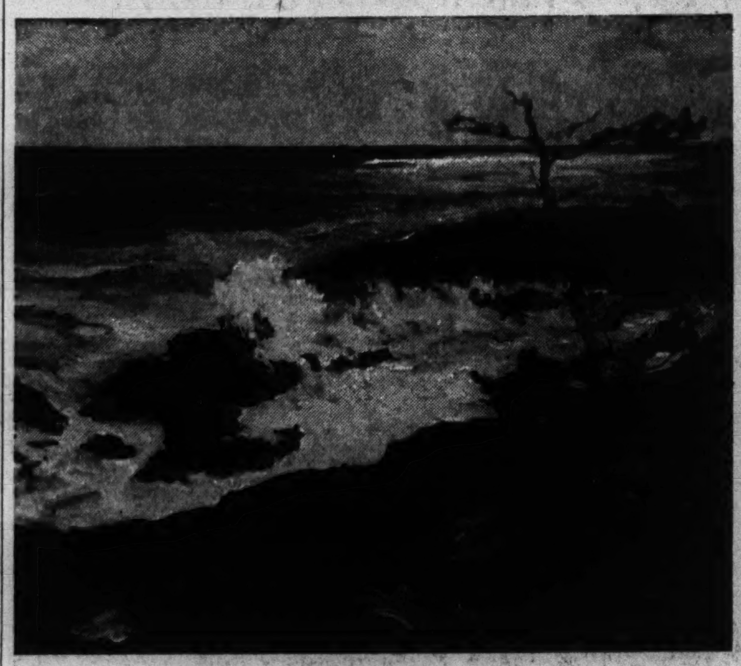
The Glee club of the Art institute school will present their spring concert this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Blackstone hall, Art institute, and again on Wednesday at 4 o'clock. Charles Fabens Kelley is the conductor.



"WINDSWEPT."

C. Curry Bohm, noted landscape painter, has a brilliant exhibit of recent paintings done along the east coast at the Palette and Chisel Academy of Fine Arts, 1012 North Dearborn street. It is one of the most important of Chicago's April shows.

TO WED MAY 8

Miss Hannah Lee Childs will become the bride of Crosby Moyer Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Kelly of Hinsdale, on May 8. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Childs of Detroit, Mich., studied music at the Detroit Institute of Musical Arts and in New York. Mr. Kelly, a concert baritone and soloist for a Chicago church, was graduated from the University of Arizona and studied at the National University of Mexico in Mexico City.

Two Women's Clubs Having Youth Events

Two organizations of business women are taking special note of Youth week, one with a full day's vocational convention for high school students, the other with a luncheon party for high school and junior college girl honor students.

The convention is sponsored jointly by the Chicago Altrusa and the Union League clubs, in coöperation with the board of education, and with other organizations of business and professional women assisting. It will be held Thursday in the Morrison hotel, and five boys and five girls from each of Chicago's 40 high schools will come as delegates and take back to their classmates reports on the information presented and advice given.

• • •

"Youth Faces Tomorrow's Responsibilities" is the theme selected for the morning session, at which the young people will hear talks by leaders in business and industry. After a noonday lunch, separate conferences for the boys and girls will be conducted, subjects covering opportunities for further education, opportunities and preparation for wartime jobs, opportunities in public service, occupational trends, opportunities in the armed forces, and the home as a responsible factor. The Union League club is assuming sponsorship of the boys' meeting and the girls will be the guests of Altrusa members and assisting groups.

Girl honor students, one from each of the high schools and junior colleges, will be the guests of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women of Chicago, the organization headed by Mrs. Ruth Mannow Olsson, at a noonday luncheon Wednesday in the Wedgwood room at Marshall Field's. The young women will be placed at occupational round tables, where they can discuss the work they are interested in with experienced women in the field.

• • •

Supplementing the discussions, Marye Dahnke, one of the foremost home economics experts in business, who formerly was a university instructor, will give a talk, taking "We Women" for her theme.

Thruout the year the service committee of the alliance has taken an active interest in occupational conferences in the high schools. Five students have been granted educational loans, and at the luncheon a scholarship award of $300 will be presented. Members of the service committee are Elizabeth K. Eckert, Jane A. Magan, Neva O. Lesley, Helma K. Benson, and Fay T. Gliatto.

Palm Beach's Key Is Turned Over to Army

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

As spring strengthens its hold on this island of perpetual sunshine and flowers, Palm Beach enters the military phase of its existence. While not occupied by the army after the manner of Miami Beach, the keys of the city nevertheless have been handed over wholeheartedly to the service men. Private individuals and organizations vie with one another in extending hospitality to the men in khaki. Recreational headquarters for officers at the Morrison air base ferrying command will be none other than the swank Bath and Tennis club, which will remain open this summer. The Sun and Surf club and the Sea Spray Beach club also will cater especially to the service men.

Members of the Volunteers for Victory, Mrs. Henry R. Rea, president, are making arrangements for a recreational beach center for enlisted men and noncommissioned officers. It was announced late last week that Ralph Beaver Strassburger of Gwynned Valley, Pa., had offered this organization his uncompleted beach property for this purpose, at $1 a year, for the duration. This beach development was started three or four years ago, but never completed. The Volunteers, however, declined the offer, with thanks.

Many gay parties marked the closing of the famous Beach club [Bradley's] on Wednesday. The rumor was revived that this famous institution would not open next year, but this was cheerfully denied at the club where it was said that next season's opening was planned for the first or second week in January, as usual. Among those entertaining at the Beach club were Mr. and Mrs. O. Nelson Tevander, Herman Huffer, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Howes, Joseph P. Kennedy, Col. Granville Fortescue, and A. Atwater Kent.

Miss Charlene Erbstein of Chicago was married last Saturday to Ensign Julius Hamilton Sedlmayr. Mrs. Flynn Stewart was married to Foster Milliken Jr., and Mrs. Joseph [Kim] Moran became the bride of William Arnold in a Greenwich, Conn., ceremony, the newlyweds later returning to Palm Beach.

Miss Erbstein and Ensign Sedlmayr were married in the rectory of St. Edward's Catholic church. The wedding was followed by a supper at the Australian avenue villa of the bride's mother, Mrs. Charles Erbstein. The bridegroom is a chemical engineer, and the future home of this couple depends on government orders.

For her wedding the pretty, young bride wore candlelight satin on princess lines, with long train and close fitting sleeves. The bodice featured a sweetheart neckline and seed pearl embroidery. Her long, filmy veil of candlelight tulle was held by a halo cap. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias. This bride also wore a handsome rope of pearls, with pearl and diamond tassel, belonging to her sister, Mrs. Robert Boedeker [Olivia Erbstein] of Chicago. Miss Patricia Edwards, bridesmaid, wore a floor length dress of heaven blue chiffon with jacket of embroidered batiste in the same shade. She carried rose and blue flowers. Mrs. Erbstein wore sand colored crêpe with blue accessories, and a corsage of brown orchids. Martin A. Hon of Palm Beach and Chicago, uncle of the bride, was best man.

The wedding of Mrs. Stewart and Foster Milliken Jr. was solemnized at the Boynton Beach Methodist church, with no attendants and no guests. A wedding supper, to which a few close friends were invited, followed the ceremony. The bride wore an afternoon dress of flower printed crêpe, with a ribbon trimmed calot of royal blue straw. Her corsage was of white spray orchids. Mr. Milliken, who served as a first lieutenant during World war I., expects to be recalled into military service.

Mrs. Milliken is the former Alice Farrington Flynn of Washington, D. C. She was first a Mrs. Maher, and has an attractive young daughter, Dana Maher. Her second marriage, during which she became known to Palm Beach society, was to Bernard F. Kroger, grocery tycoon. Following his death, she married James Wright Stewart of Chicago. That marriage was of short duration.

William Arnold, who married Mrs. Moran, is vice chairman of the Democratic national finance committee. He is the fourth husband of the popular Kim Moran, who was the former Adeline Stilwell. By her first marriage she was Mrs. Bamberger, then Moran, then Moffett. She married James A. Moffett while he was federal housing administrator, but the marriage lasted only a short time. At her modernistic beachhouse, White Caps, she has entertained at an almost continual house party during the last two seasons. Last year she announced her engagement to William Ross Howard III. of Baltimore. Mr. Howard was divorced from the former Louise Brooks, granddaughter of Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, once a stepdaughter of Gen. MacArthur. Mr. Moffett has since married the widow of Franklin Hutton, stepmother of Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow.

Spring flower prints mingled with the lovely spring flowers in Mrs. Henry R. Rea's garden Thursday when she entertained at La Gomar with a Volunteers for Victory tea. Mrs. Margaret Emerson was among those wearing a lovely flower print. Mrs. Joseph E. Davies was in a soft blue print made with a round neckline. She wore a cartwheel hat in navy blue straw, edged with lacy straw. Her daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Rann [once married to Preston Sturges, the movie director], wore a suit in yellow and black print, with a jaunty bird-trimmed hat in yellow straw.

RESIDING IN MICHIGAN

Mrs. George Malvin Holley Jr. is at home with her bridegroom in Grosse Pointe, Mich., where Mr. and Mrs. Holley Sr. also live. She is the former Elizabeth Hayes Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Kingsbury Ellis of Stamford, Conn., former north shore residents.
